The kinge Ahasuerus answered, and saide vnto Quene Esther: Who is he? and where is he, that dare presume in his mind to do after that maner? And Esther saide: the enemye and aduersarye is this wycked Haman. Haman was exceadingly afrayde before the king and the Quene. And the king arose from the banket a from ỹ wine in his displeasure, & wente into the palais garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought Quene Esther for his life: for he sawe that there was a mischiefe prepared for hym of the kinge alreadye. And when the king came againe oute of the palace garden, into the place where they dranke wine, Haman had layde him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kinge: will he forse the Quene also before me in the house? As soone as that woorde wente oute of the kinges mouthe, they couered Hamans face: and Harbona one of the chamberlains ỹ stode before the king, said: beholde, there standeth a gallous in Hamans house. Lx cubites hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kynge. The kyng said: hange him thereon. So they hanged Haman on the gallous, that he had made for Mardocheus.

Then

Then was the kynges wrath pacifyed.

¶ The.viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman, was Mardocheus exalted, and then there are comfortable letters sente vnto the Iewes.

THe same day dyd kyng Ahasuerus geue the house of Haman the Iewes enemy, vnto Quene Esther. And Mardoche' came before the kyng: for Esther tolde howe that he belonged vnto her. And the kyng put of his fynger tynge whiche he had taken from Haman, and gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Hamā. And Esther spake yet before the kyng, and fell downe at his fete weping, and besought him that he would put away the wyckednesse of Haman the Agagite, and hys deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Iewes. And the kyng (according to the maner) helde oute the golden scepter towarde Esther. (whereby was declared a token of graciousnesse.) Then arose Esther, and stode before the kyng, and sayde: yf it please the kyng, and yf I haue founde grace in hys syght, and yf it bee acceptable before the kyng, then let it be wrytten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sone of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called againe: whiche letters he wrote to destroy the Iewes, whiche are in all the kinges landes. For how can I suffer and see the euyll, that shall happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vpon the destruccion of my kynred? And the king Ahasuerus sayde vnto Quene Esther, & to Mardocheus the Iewe: Behold, I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, whom they haue hanged vpon a tree, because he layed hande vpon the Iewes. Wryte ye also for the Iewes as it lyketh you, in the kynges name, and seale it wyth the kynges tynge, (for the wrytynges that were wrytten in the kynges name, & sealed with the kynges tynge, durst no man disanull.) Then were the kynges scribes called at the same tyme, euen in the thyrd moneth, that is the moneth * Siuan, on the.xxiii. daye. And it was wrytten (accordyng to all as Mardocheus commaunded) vnto the Iewes and to the pynces, to the deputies & captaines in the landes whiche are from India vnto Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, vnto euery one accordyng to the wrytyng thereof, and to euery people after they speathe, and to the Iewes accordyng to they wrytyng and language.

And he wrote in the kyng Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kinges ryng. And by postes that rode vpon horses, & swyfte younge mules, sente he the wrytynges wherein the kyng graunted the Iewes (in what cyties soeuer they were) to gather themselues together, and to stande for they lyfe, & for to roote out, to slay & to destroye all the power of the people & lande, that would trouble the, with children and wemen, and to spoyle they good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, namely, vpon the thyrtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth * Adar. The summe of the wrytynge was, howe there shoulde be a commaundemente geuen in all landes, and publyshed among all people, & that the Iewes should be ready agaynst that daye, and to auenge themselues on they enemyes. And so ỳ postes that rode vpon the swyfte horses and mules, made haste wyth all spede, to execute the kynges woorde: and the commaundemente was deuysed in Susan the cheefe cytie. And Mardocheus went out (from the palace, and) from the king, in royal apparell of yelow and whyte, and with a great crowne of golde, beyng arayed with a garmente of sylke and purple: and the citie of Susan reioyced, and was glad, & vnto the Iewes there was come (a newe) lyght and gladnesse, ioy and worshyp. In al landes and cyties, into what places soeuer ỳ kinges woorde and commaundemente reached, there was ioy and myrth, prosperitie and good dayes among ỳ Iewes: insomuche that many of the people of the lande became of the Iewes belefe, and the feare of the Iewes came vpon them.

* Adar. February.

The.ix. Chapter.

At the commaundemente of the kyng, the Iewes put they aduersaries to death. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Iewes kepe a feast daye in remembraunce of they deliuerance.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar, vpon the thyrtenthe daye of the same, when the kynges woorde and commaundemente shoulde be done, euen vpon the same daye that the enemyes should haue destroyed ỳ Iewes, to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wyse, euen that the Iewes should subdue their enemyes. For then gathered the Iewes together in they cyties, wythin all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, to lay hande on suche as would do them euill, and no man coulde withstand them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and prynces and deputies, and officers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes, for ỹ feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges house, and the reporte of hym was noysed in al landes, howe he encreased and grewe.

B Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes with a sore slaughter, and slue and destroyed, and dyd after theyr wyll vnto suche as were theyr aduersaryes. And at Susan the chefe cytie slewe the Jewes, and destroyed, fyue hundred menne, and slewe Pharsandatha, Dalphon, Aspha-tha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai and Vaizatha the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Hamadata the enemy of the Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At thesame tyme was the kyng certyfyed of the numbre of those that were slayne in the cytie of Susan. And the kyng sayde vnto Quene Esther. The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men in the citie of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Haman: what haue they done (thinkest thou) in ỹ other landes of the kyng? And what is thy petition, that it maye be geuē the? Or what requyrest thou more to bee C done? Esther answerd: yf it please the kyng, let him suffre the Jewes to morow also to doo accordyng vnto this dayes commaundement, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon ỹ tree. And the kyng charged to doe so, & the commaundement was deuysed at Susan, and they hanged Hamans tenne sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Sulā gathered thē-selues together, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slue three hundred men at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes. As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges landes, they came together, and stode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue rest from theyr enemies, and slew of theyr enemies fyue and seuentie thousande: howbeit, they layed no handes on theyr goodes. D This they dyd on the thyrteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourteenth day of thesame moneth rested they: which daye they helde with feastyng and gladnesse. But the Jewes which were at Susan came together, both on the thyrteenth day, & on the fourteenth, & on the fyfteenth day of thesame they rested, and held that day with feastyng & gladnes. And therefore ỹ Jewes that dwelt in the vyllages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourteenth day of the moneth Adar with gladnesse and feastyng, and kepte holy daye, and euery one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, & sent the wrytynges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, both nye & farre, that they should make a lawe amonge themselues, and holde the fourteenth, and fyfteenth daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherein C the Jewes came to rest from theyr enemyes, and as a moneth wherein theyr payne was turned to ioy, and theyr sorowe into an holy daye: and that in those dayes they should make feastes, & gladnesse, and one to sende gyftes vnto another, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes were contente with it that they had begonne to doe, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: howe that Haman the sonne of Hadamatha all the Jewes enemye, had deuysed agaynst the Jewes, howe he myght destroy them, and caused to cast Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, and to bryng them to naught: and howe Esther wente and spake to the kyng, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyse (whiche he ymagyned against the Jewes) might be turned vp-on his owne head, and howe he and hys sonnes were hanged on the tree. For the whiche cause they called this daye Phurim, because of the name of the lotte, and because of al the wordes of this wryting: and what they themselues had sene, and what had happened vnto them. And the I Jewes set it vp, and tooke it vpon them and theyr sede, and vpon al suche as ioy-ned themselues vnto thē, that they would not mysse, but obserue these two dayes yearely, accordyng as they were wrytten and appoynted: how that these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of chil-ders chyldren among al kynredes, in al landes and cytyes. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslypt among the Jewes, and the memorye of them ought not to perish from theyr sede.

And Quene Esther the doughter of Abihail, and Mardocheus the Jew, wrote with al authoritie (to confirme the second wrytyng of Phurim) and sent the letters vnto all the Iewes in the hundred and seuen and twentye landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, with frendly and faythful wordes, to confyrme these dayes of Phurim in theyr tyme appoynted, accordyng as Mardocheus the Iewe, & Esther the Quene had appoynted them. And they bounde theyr soule and theyr sede to fastyng and prayer. And Esther stablyshed the wordes of these lottes, as it is wrytten in the booke. And the kyng Ahasuerus layed tribute vpon the land, and vpon the yles of the sea. And all that he dyd by hys power and authorytie, and the great worshyppe of Mardocheus, which the kyng gaue hym, be they not wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia? For Mardocheus the Iewe was the seconde nerte vnto kyng Ahasuerus, & greate among the Iewes, and accepted amonge the multytude of his brethren, as one that seketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

¶ The booke of Job.

The firste Chapter.

Job is plaged of God by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

IN the lande of * Hus there was a mã whose name was Job: & the same was a perfect and iust mã, suche a one as feareth God, & eschewed euil. And he had seuen sonnes, and three daughters. * His substaunce also was seuen M. shepe, & three M. Camels, fyue C. yoke of oren, & fyue C. she asses, & a very great householde, so that he was one of the most principall mẽ among al them of the East country. And his sonnes wente and made bankettes, one day in one house, an other day in an other, and sente for theyr three systers to eate and drynke with them. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of theyr bankettyng rounde about, Job sente for them, and sanctyfied them, and gat vp early, and offred for euery one a burnt offryng. For Job sayde: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue been vnthankfull to God in theyr hertes. Thus dyd Job euery daye: And vpon a daye when * the childre of God came and stode before the Lorde, it fortuned that Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: From whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: * I haue gone aboute the lande, and walked thorow it. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: Haste thou not consydred my seruaunte Job, howe that there is none lyke him in the lande? a perfecte and a iust manne: suche a one as feareth God, & eschewth euyll. Satan answered, and sayde vnto the Lorde: Doeth Job feare God for nought? haste thou not preserued him and his house, and all that he hath on euery syde? Thou haste blessed the workes of his handes, and his possession is encreased in the land. But lay thyne hand now vpon hym, (a syrre) and touche all that he hath, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the Lorde sayed vnto Satan: loe, all that he hath, be in thy power: onely vpon hymselfe, see that thou laye not thy hande. And Satan went forth from the presence of the Lorde. And vpon a certayne daye, it fortuned that hys sonnes and doughters were eatyng and drynking wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, and there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayd: Whyle the oren were a plowing, and the asses going in the pasture besyde them, the Sabees came in violently, and tooke them awaye: yea, they haue slayne thy seruaũtes with the edge of the swerd, and I onely ranne my way to tell thee. Whyle he was yet speakyng, there came an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, & hath brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes, and consumed them: and I onely ranne away, to tell thee. And whyle he was yet speaking, there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made three armyes, and fel in vpon the camels, and haue caryed them away: yea, and slayne thy seruauntes with the sweard: and I onely am gotten away to tel thee. And whyle he was yet speaking, there came an other, & sayde: Thy sonnes and thy doughters were eatyng & drynking wyne in theyr eldest brothers house: and beholde, there came a mighty great wynde out of the south, & smote the foure corners of the house, which fell [illegible] chyl-chyldren, and they are dead: and I am gotten away alone to tell the. Then Job stode vp, and rente his clothes, and shaued his head, fell downe vpon the ground, worshypped, and sayde. * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thyther againe. The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken awaye, (euen as it hath pleased the Lorde so is it come to passe) blessed be the name of the Lorde. * In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, nor murmured folysshly agaynst God.

Job. 1. c.

The. ii. Chapter.

Job is plaged with sore byles, and afterward is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vysyte hym, and haue compassion on hym.

AND the chyldren of God came and stode before the Lorde, and Satan came also amonge them, and stode before the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: From whence commest thou? Satã answered the Lord, & sayde: I haue gone about the land, & walked thorow it. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: haste thou not consydred my seruaunte Job? for there is none lyke hym in the lande. For he is a perfect and iust manne: suche a one as feareth God, and escheweth euyll, and continueth styll in his godlynesse. And thou mouedst me against him, that I should punysshe hym for nought. And Satan answered the Lorde, & sayd: Skynne for skynne, yea a man wil geue all that euer he hath for his lyfe. But lay thyne hande nowe vpon him, and touche once his bone and flesh, and he shal curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: loe, there haste thou hym in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lorde, and smote Job, with maruaylous sore byles, from the sole of his fote, vnto his crowne, so that he sat vpon the grounde: in the asshes, & scraped of the fylth of hys sores with a potsharde. Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym: * Doest thou continue yet in thy perfectnesse? curse God & dye. But Job sayde vnto her: thou speakest lyke a folysshe woman. Shall we receyue prosperitie at the hande of God, and not receyue aduersytie? * In al these thynges dyd not Job syn with his lyppes. Now when Jobs frendes heard of al the trouble that happened vnto hym, there came three of them, euery one from his owne place, namely, Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Sophad the Naamathite. And they were agreed together to come to shewe their compassion vpon hym, and to comfort hym. So whē they lyfte vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed and wepte, and euery one of them rente his clothes, and sprynkled dust vpon their heades in the ayre. They sat them downe by him also vpō the ground, seuen dayes, and seuen nyghtes. Neyther was there any of them that spake one woorde vnto hym: for they sawe, that his payne was very greate.

Tobi. 2. d. Job. 4. b

The. iii. Chapter.

The woordes of Job, wherin he declareth that this present lyfe is myserable, and that the death of the ryghteous is ioyous and fortunable.

AFTER this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his day. And Job answered, & sayde: looke be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght in the whiche it was sayd: there is a manchyld conceiued. The same daye bee turned to darkenesse, and not regarded of God from aboue: neyther let hym shyne vpon it with lyght, but let it be stayned with darkenesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloud fall vpon it, and lette it be lapped in with sorowe on the daye tyme. Lette the darke stormē ouercome that night, & let it not be ioyned vnto the dayes of the yeare, nor counted in the monethes. Desolate bee that nyght, and without gladnesse: let them that curse the daye and that be redy to rayse vp mournyng, geue it also their curse. Lette the starres of that nyght be dymme thorowe darkenesse of it. Lette it looke for lyght, but let it see none: neither the ryspyng vp of the fayre morning, because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me. For then should these sorowes haue been hyd from myne eyes.

Alas * why dyed I not in the byrth? why dyd not I perysh as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe? Why sette they me vpō their knees? why gaue they me soucke wyth their breastes? Then should I nowe haue lyen styll, I should haue slepte, and been at rest, lyke as the kynges and Lordes of the earth, whiche haue buylded themselues special places: Or as the pryntes that haue had great substaunce of golde and their houses ful of syluer. Or why was I not hyd, as a thyng borne out of tyme, eyther as yong chyldren, whiche neuer sawe the lyght?

Then

There muſt the wycked ceaſe from theyr tyrãnye, and there ſuche as be ouerlaboured be at reſt: there are thoſe lette out free, whiche haue been in pryſon, ſo that they heare no more the voyce of the oppreſſoure. There are ſmal and great, and the ſeruaunte is free from his maſter.

Wherefore is the lyght geuen to hym that is in myſerye, and lyfe vnto them that haue heuy heartes? Which long for death (although it come not) woulde dyg it out of hyd places, whiche alſo woulde be exceadyng glad and reioyce, yf they could fynde their graue any where. That ſhould be ioy to that man whoſe way is hyd, and God kepeth it backe from hym. For my ſyghes come before I eate, and my rorynges fall out lyke the water. For the thyng that I feared is come vpon me: and the thyng that I was afrayde of, is happened vnto me: was I not happy? had I not quyetneſſe? was I not in reſt? And nowe commeth ſuche myſerye vpon me.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impacience & vnrighteouſnes: and of the preſumpcion of his owne righteouſnes.

AND Eliphas ỹ Themanite anſwered, and ſayde: Yf we begyn to commune with the, wylt thou be diſcontente? But who canne withholde hymſelfe from ſpeakyng? Beholde, thou haſte been a chaſtener of manye, & haſte comforted the wery handes. A

Thy wordes haue ſette vp thoſe that were fallen, thou haſte refreſhed ỹ weake knees. But nowe that the plage is come vpon the, thou art greued: nowe that it hath touched thy ſelfe thou art fayne hertted.* Is not this thy feare, thy ſtedfaſtneſſe, thy pacience, and the perfectneſſe of thy wayes? Conſyder (I praye the) who euer peryſhed beyng an innocente? Or when were the godlye deſtroyed? For (as I haue proued by experyence:) they that plowe iniquitie, and *ſow wretchednes, reape theſame. With the blaſte of God they peryſhe, and with the breath of hys noſtryles are they conſumed awaye: The roryng of the lyon, and the voyce of the lyon, and the teeth of the lyons whelpes are pulled out. The lyon peryſheth for lacke of pray, and the lyons whelpes are ſcatred abrode. B C

And vnto me came the worde ſecretlye, and myne eare hath receyued a lytle ther-of. In the thoughtes and viſions of the nyght (when ſlepe commeth on me) feare came vpon me, and drede, which made al my bones to ſhake. The wynde paſſed by, before my preſence, & made the heeres of my fleſhe to ſtande vp. He ſtode there, and I knew not his face: an ymage there was before myne eyes, and in the ſtylnes heard I a voyce.* Shall manne be more iuſt then God? Or ſhall a manne be purer then his maker? Beholde, he founde no trueth in his ſeruauntes, and *in hys Iungels there was folye: Howe muche more in them that dwel in houſes of clay, and whoſe foundacion is but duſt, which ſhalbe conſumed as it were with a mothe? They ſhall be ſmytten from the morning vnto the euenyng: yea, they ſhall perith for euer, when no manne thynketh thereon. Is not theyr royaltie gone awaye with them? they ſhall dye truly: and not in wyſedome. D

The.v. Chapter.

The ende of a foole: The righteouſnelle of God. The Lord chaſteneth hys, & deliuereth them again.

CRYE (I praye the) yf happely there be any that wyll anſwere thee, and looke thou vpon any of the holy men. It is not the earth that bryngeth forth iniquitie, neyther commeth ſorowe out of the grounde: but manne is borne vnto labour, lyke as the ſparkes flye vp out of the hote coles. But I wil aſke counſayle at the Lorde, and wyll talke with God, whiche doth thynges that are vnſearcheable, and meruels without numbre.* He geueth rayne vpon the earthe, and powreth water vpon the ſtretes, to ſette † vp them that be of lowe degree, & that thoſe which are in heuineſſe, may come to proſperitie. The. vii. Chapter.

Job shewyth that hys lyfe is but a battayle, or warfare.

IS the man any certayne tyme vpon earth? *Are not hys dayes also like the dayes of an hyred seruaunte? For like as a bonde seruaunte desyreth the shadowe, & as an hyrelinge wolde fayne haue an ende of hys worke: Euen so haue I laboured whole monethes longe, (but in vayne) & many a careful night haue I told. *Whē I laye me downe to slepe, I say: O when shall I aryse? Agayne, I longed sore for the nyght. And in the meane tyme am I full of sorowes vntyll the twylyghte.

My flesche is clothed with wormes and duste of the earth, my skynne is wythered and become horyble, *my dayes passe ouer more spedely then a weuer can weue out hys web, & are gone or I am aware. O remember that my lyfe is but a wind, and that myne eye shall nomore see pleasures therof: yea, & that none other mens eye shall see me any more. For if thou fasten thine eye vpon me, I come to nought. The cloud is consumed and vanysshed awaye, euen so he that goeth downe to the graue shall come nomore vp, nor turne agayne into hys house: neyther shall hys place knowe hym any more.

Therfore I wyll not spare my mouth, but wyll speake in the trouble of my spirite, & mune in ꝑ bytternesse of my mynd. Am I a sea or a whale fysshe, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I saye: my bed shall comforte me, I shall haue some refreshyng by talkyng to my selfe vpon my couche: *Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayde thorowe visions, ꝑ my soule wisheth rather to perish & die, thē my bones to remaine. I can se no remedy, I shall lyue nomore: O spare me than, for my dayes are but vayne: what is man, that thou hast hym in suche reputatiō, and settest so much by hym? Thou visitest hym early and euery daye: sodainly doest thou *trye hym. Why goest thou not frome, nor lettest me alone, so long tyl I may swalow downe my spettle? I haue offended, and what shal I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of men? Why hast thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuy a burden vnto my selfe? Why dost thou not forgeue me my synne? wherefore takest thou not away my wyckednesse? Behold, nowe muste I slepe in the duste, and yf thou seekest me to morowe in the mornyng, I shal be gone.

The. viii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended and noted to haue destroyed his payne. & description of hypocrisie.

THen answered Baldad ꝑ Suhyte, & sayde: Howe longe wylt thou talke of suche thynges? Howe long shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Doth god peruert the thing that is lawfull? Or doth the almyghtye destroye the thyng, that is ryght? For seyng that thy sonnes synned agaynste hym, dyd not he punyshe them for theyr wyckednesse? yf thou wouldest now resort vnto God betymes, and make thyne humble prayer to ꝑ almyghtye, yf thou woldest lyue a pure and a godlye lyfe, shoulde he not awake vp vnto the immediatly, and geue thee ꝑ beautye of ryghteousnes agayne? In so much, that wherin so euer thou haddeste lytle afore, thou shouldeste nowe haue greate aboundaunce. Enquyre I praye thee of them that haue bene before thee, *and searche diligently among theyr fathers. For we are but of yesterdaye, and consydre not, that *oure dayes vpō earth are but a very shadowe. Shall not they shew thee & tell thee, yea and gladly confesse ꝑ same? May a rush be grene without moysture? Or may the grasse grow without water? No, but or euer it be shot forth, & or euer it bee gathered) it withereth before any other herbe. Euē so goeth it with al thē that forgette God, and euē thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought: hys cōfidence shall be destroyed, and hys trust shal be a spiders webbe. He shall leane vpon hys house, but it shal not stand: he shal holde hym fast by it, yet shall it not endure. It is euen as a greene tree before the Sunne, and shoteth forth the braunches in hys garden. It taketh many rootes by a well syde, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones. But yf it bee taken out of hys place, euery man denyeth it, saying: I knowe thee not. Lo, thus is it with him, that reioyseth in his owne doynges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth. Behold, God wil not caste awaye a vertuous manne, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouth shall be fill with laughynge, and thy lyppes with gladnesse. They also that hate the, shall bee cōfounded, and the dwellynge of the vngodly shall come to nought.

The.ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the benefites of God: that mans ryghteousnesse is nothyng.

IOb answered, & sayde: I know it is so of a trewthe. For howe may a man (compared vnto god) be iustifyed? yf he wyll argue with him, there is not one among a thousand that can answere hym. Concernyng suche as be wyse of hearte, or myghty in strengthe, who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste hym? He translateth the mountaynes or euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthrowyth them in his wrath.
He remoueth the earthe out of her place, that the pyllers therof shake withall. He comaundeth the sunne, and it ryseth not:
he closeth vp the starres, as it were vnder a signet. He him selfe alone spreadeth out the heauens, & goeth vpō the waues of the sea. He maketh ỹ waynes of heauē, the Orion, & the seuen starres, and the secrete places of the Southe. He doethe greate thynges, suche as are vnsearche-able: yea, and wonders without numbre.

Lo, when he goeth ouer by me, I shall not see hym. And when he departethe by me, I shall not loke vpon him. I shal not perceyue hym. yf he be hastye to take any thynge awaye, who wyll make hym restore it agayne? Or who wyll saye vnto him: what dost thou? He is God, whose wrath no man may withstande, but the proudest of all muste stoupe vnder hym.
Howe shoulde I then answere hym? Or what wordes should I finde out against hym? yea, though I were ryghteous, yet might I not geue him one word againe, but mekely submit my selfe to him as my iudge. yf I had called vpō hym, & he had answered me, yet woulde I not beleue, that he hearde my voyce. he troubleth me so with ỹ tempest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He will not let my spirite bee in reste, but fylleth me with bytternesse. yf menne wil speake of strength, lo, he is strong: yf me wil speke of rightousnes, who dare be my recorde? yf I will iustifye my selfe, myne owne mouth shal condemne me: If I will put foorthe my selfe for a perfecte manne, he shall proue me a wicked doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare, yet am I wery of my lyfe.
One thyng it is, and therefore I sayde: He destroyeth bothe the ryghteous and vngodlye. And thoughe he slaye sodenlye with the scourge, yet will he laugh at the punyshement of the innocente. As for the worlde, it is geuen ouer into the hand of the wicked, and he shal couer the faces of the iudges thereof. Is it not so? where is there any, but he is such one? My dayes are more swifte then a runner: they are gone, and haue sene no good thing. They are passed awaye as the shyppes that be good vnder sayle, & as the Egle that fly-eth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my cōplaynyng, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then am I afrayd of all my sorowes: for I know that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. If I be then a wicked doer, why labour I in vayne? If I washe my selfe with snow water, and make my handes neuer so cleane at the well, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myre, and myne owne clothes shal defyle me. For he that I must geue aunswere vnto, and with whō I go to lawe, is not a manne as I am: Neyther is ther any daysman to laye hys hande betwene vs. Let him take his rodde away fro me: yea, let him make me no more afrayde of him, and then shal I aunswere him without anye feare: for as long as it is thus,
I can make no aunswere.

The.x. Chapter

Job is wery of his lyfe, and confesseth our his fragilitie before God: He desyreth the tyme to repent. & description of death.

IT grieueth my soule to lyue: I wil make my complaynte, and will speake out of the very heuines of my soule. I will saye vnto God: O dooe not condemne me, but shewe me the cause wherfore thou contēdest so with me? Thynkest thou it well doone to oppresse me, to cast me of (being the woorkes of thy handes) and to main-tayne the counsayle of the vngodlye? Hast thou flesshely eyes? or doest thou looke as a manne looketh? Or are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeres as mans yeares? that thou makest suche inquisicō for my wickednesse, and searchest out my synne? Where as (not withstandyng) thou knoweste that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to delyuer me oute of thy hande.

Thyne handes haue made me, and fashyoned me all together rounde about, wylt thou then destroye me sodenly? O thou madest me of the moulde of the earthe, and shalte bringe me in to dust agayne. Haste thou not turned me, as it were milke, and turned me to cruds like chese? Thou hast couered me with skinne and flesshe, and ioyned me together wyth bones and synowes. Thou haste graunted me life, and done me good: and the diligente hede that thou tokeste vpon me, hathe preserued my spirite. Thou haste hyd these thynges in thyne heart. I am sure that thou remembrysste this thynge. yf I dyd synne, thou haddest an eye vnto me, and shalte not declare me innocente because of myne offence. yf I haue done wyckedly, wo is me therefore: yf I haue done rygheousslye, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heade, so full am I of confusyon, and see myne owne myserye. Thou hunteste me oute (beynge in heuynes) as it were a Lyon, and troubleste me oute of measure. Thou bringeste freshe wytnesse agaynste me, and thy wrathe increaseste thou vpon me, berie many are the plages that I am in. *Wherefore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perysshed, and that no eye had sene me. yf they had caryed me to my graue as soone as I was borne, then shoulde I bee nowe as thoughe I had neuer bene. Are not my dayes fewe? Let hym then leaue of from me and let me alone, that I may ease my selfe a lytle, afore I go thyther, from whence I shall not turne agayne: euē to ỳ land of darkenesse and shadow of death: yea, into that darke cloudye land and deadlye shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darkenesse.

The.xi. Chapter.

Job is vniustly reprehended of Sophar. God is incomprehensyble. He is merciful to the repentaunt.

THē answered Sophar the Naamathyte, and sayde: Shoulde not he that maketh manye wordes, be answered? Should he that bablethe muche bee commended therin? Shoulde men geue eare vnto the onely? Thou wylte laughe other menne to scorne, and shall no body mocke the agayne? Wylte thou saye vnto God? The thyng that I take in hande is perfit, and I am cleane in thy syght. O that GOD woulde speake and open hys lyppes agaynste thee, that he myghte shewe thee (oute of hys secrete wisdome) why he rewardeth the double as he was apoynted to doo: then shouldeste thou knowe, that GOD had forgotten thee, because of thy synne. Arte thou able to fynde out the secretes of God? Or wylt thou attayne to the perfitnes of the almyghtye? He is hier then heuen, what arte thou able to do? Deper then the hell, howe wylt thou then know him? Hys length exceedeth ỳ length of the earthe, and hys bredthe the bredthe of the sea. Thoughe he turne all thynges vp side downe, close them in, gather them together, who wyll turne hym, from hys purpose? (Or who may saye vnto hym, why doest thou so?) *For it is he that knoweth ỳ vanitie of men, he seeth theyr wyckednesse also, shoulde he not then consyder it? Thy bayne bodye exalteth hym selfe, and a manne newe borne is lyke a wylde asses colte. yf thou haddeste now a right hearte, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towarde him: yf thou woldeste put away the wyckednesse whych thou haste in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwel in thy house, then mighteste thou lift vp thy face without shame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare. Thē shouldest thou forget thy mysery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shoulde the residue of thy lyfe bee as cleare as the noone daye, and sprynge forthe as the morning. Then myghteste thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou haste: and slepe quietly, when thou arte buryed. Thē shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayd: yea, many one shoulde set muche by the. As for ỳ eyes of the vngodlye, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: theyr hope shall bee myserye, and sorowe of mynde.

SO Job answered, and sayde: Then (no doubte) ye are the menne alone, and wysdome shall perysshe wyth you. But I haue vnderstandyng aswel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of hys neyghboure: the godly and innocent manne is laughed to scorne. The.xiiii. Chapter.

Job describeth the lyfe of man, and prophecyeth of the resurrection. Hope sustayneth the godly, tyll they obteyne that they looke for.

Man

A Man that is borne of woman, hathe but a shorte tyme to liue, and is full of mysery. He cõmeth vp and is cut downe like a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer contynueth in one state. Doste thou open thine eyes vpon suche one, and bringest me in thy iudgemente? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vncleane thynge? No body. * The dayes of manne surely are determyned, the numbre of hys monethes are knowē only vnto thee. Thou haste appoynted hym hys boundes, whiche he can not go beyonde. Go from hym that he maye reste (a lytle) vntyll hys daye come: whiche he lokethe for, lyke as an hyrelynge dothe.

Job.7.a. and.9.c.

B If a tree bee cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyll sproute, and shoote forth the braunches agayne. For though the rote of it be waxen olde, & the stocke thereof bee dead in the ground, yet when it getteth the sente of water, it will bud and bryng forthe boughes, lyke as a tree that is planted. But as for manne, when he is dead, perished and cõsumed away, what becommeth of hym? The floudes when they bee dryed vp, and the ryuers when they bee emptye, are fylled agayne thorowe the flowyng waters of the sea: but when manne slepeth, he ryseth not agayne (of hys owne strength) * vntyll the heauen perishe: he shall not wake vp, nor rise oute of his slepe. O that thou woldest kepe me, & hyde me in the hel, vntil thy wrathe were stylled, and to appoynte me a tyme, wherin thou mightest remember me. Maye a dead man lyue agayne? * All the dayes of my lyfe wyll I wayte stil, till my chaungyng shal come. Eliphas reprehendeth Job because he ascribeth wysdome and puretie to hym selfe. He dyscribeth the curse that falleth on the wicked, returnyng Job to be one of that numbre.

Then answered Eliphas the Themanite, & sayde: Shal a wise mans answere be the science of the wynde, & fil any mans belly, as it were with the wind of the East? Shal he reproue with worde that is nothing worthe, & speake the thinges which cā do no good? As for shame, thou hast set it aside, & wouldest not make so many wordes before god, but thy wickednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou haste chosē the a crafty tong. Thine owne mouth cõdemneth the, & not I: yea, thine owne lippes shape an answere agaynste the. Art thou the fyrste man, that euer was borne? Or waste thou made before the hilles? hast thou heard the secret counsel of God that all wysedome is to lyte for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? And what vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both old & aged mē: yea, suche as haue lyued longer then thy father. Thinkeste thou it a small thing of the consolacyons of God? I Ob answered and sayd: I haue oftymes heard suche thynges, myserable geuers of comforte are ye, al ỳ sorte of you. Shall not varye wordes yet come to an ende? Or haste ỳ yet any more to saye? I could speake as ye doe also. But would God that your soule were in my soules stead: then should I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my head at you. I shoulde comforte you with my mouth, & release your payne wt the talkyng of my lippes. (But what shall I do?) For all my wordes my sorowe will not cease: & though I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe from me. But now that God hath sent me aduersitie, thou haste troubled all my con- B gregacion. And that thou haste filled me with wrynkles, my flesche is rotorde, and my leanesse ryseth vp agaynste me, and beareth wytnesse agaynste me. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasheth vpon me with his teeth. Myne enemye shoulyeth vpon me with his eyes. They haue opened theyr mouthes wyde C vpon me, * and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they gather themselues together agaynste me. God hath put me in preace with the vngodly, and deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and sette me as a marke for hymselfe. His archers compasse me rounde aboute: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he powred vpon the grounde. He hath geuē me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunt. I haue sowed a sackecloth vpon my skynne, and lye with my heere in the duste. My face is swollen with wepyng, & in myne eyes is D the shadowe of deathe. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloude, and let my crynge fynde no rowme. For lo, my wytnesse is in heauen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyghte. My frendes geue me many wordes to scorne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O ỳ a body myght pleate with God, as one man doth with another: yet the numbre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I muste go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

Job sayeth that he cōsumeth away, and yet doeth patiently abyde it.

My breathe stynketh, my dayes are shortened: I am harde at deathes doze. Fro warde men are with me, & myne eye muste contynue in the bytternesse of them. O deliuer me, and loke out one to bee my suretye in thy syghte. What is he that knoweth who wyl promes for me? For thou haste withholden theyr hartes from vnderstandyng: therefore shalt thou not set (them) vp on hye. He promyseth hys frendes parte of hys good, but hys B owne chyldren spende it.

He hathe made me as it were a bywordе of ỳ people: where as afore I was theyr ioye. Myne eye is dymme for verye heuynesse, and all my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consyder thys, and the innocent shal take parte agaynste the ypocryte.

The

The ryghteous also wyll kepe his waye, and he that hath cleane handes, wyl euer
C bee stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hēce (I pray you) seeyng I cannot fynde one wyse man among you: My dayes are past, and my counsayles and thoughtes of my harte are vanyshed awaye, chaungyng the nyght into day, and the lyght into darkenesse. Though I tarye neuer so muche, D yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes cal I my mother & syster. What helpeth then my long tarying? Or who hath consydered the thyng, that I looke for? All that I haue shall go downe into the pyt, and lye with me in the dust.

The.xviii. Chapter.

Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnhappy full and wycked.

I THEN aunswered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: when wil ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke wel, and then we wyll speake. Wherefore are we counted as beastes, & reputed so vyle in your syghte? He destroyed hymselfe with hys anger. Shall the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place, because of the?
A yea, the lyght of the vngodly shalbe put out, and the sparke of his fyre shall not burne. The lyght shall be darke in hys dwellyng, and his candell shalbe put out
B with him. His presumptuous goinges are kept in, and his owne counsell shall caste hym downe. For his fete are taken, as it were in the nette, and he is at his wyttes ende. His fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shall catche them that be thyrsty of bloud: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the way. Fearfulnesse shall make hym afrayde on eue-
C rye syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Hunger shall be his strength: myssortune shall hange vpon hym. He shall eate the strēgth of his owne skynne, euen the fyrst borne of death shal eate his strength. His hope shall be rooted out of his dwelling, very fearfulnes shal bring him to the kyng. Other men shall dwell in his house (but shall be none of his) and brymstone shalbe scattred vpon his habi-
D tacion. His rootes shall be dryed vp beneth, and aboue shall his braunche be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe from the earth, & he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue hym from the lyght into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane out of the worlde. He shall neyther haue children nor kynsfolkes among his people: no, nor any posterite in his dwellynges. They that come after hym, shall be astonyed at his daye, and they that go before, shall be afrayde. Suche are nowe the dwellynges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The.xix. Chapter.

Iob reherseth his myseryes and grieuous paynes. He prophecyeth of the generall resurrection.

I IOb answered, and sayde: howe long will ye vexe my soule, and trouble me with wordes? Lo, tenne tymes haue ye reproued me, and are not ashamed for to laugh me so to scorne: if I go wronge, I go wrong to my selfe. But yf ye wil enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God which hath handled me so vyolentlye, and hath compassed me aboute with his nette. Yf I * complayne of the Habac.1.a

spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne awaye fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me, as it were a tree pluckte vp by the roote. His wrath is kyndled agaynst me: he taketh me, as though I were hys ene-euyll vpon me. All ſuche as were my moſte familyers, abhorred me: and they whom I loued beſt, are turned agaynſt me. My bone hangeth to my ſkynne, and my fleſhe is awaye, onely there is left me D the ſkynne aboute my teth. Haue pytye vpon me, haue pytye vpon me, O ye my frendes, for the hande of God hath touched me. Why dooe ye perſecute me as God doeth, and are not ſatisfyed of my fleſhe? O that my woordes were nowe wrytte: O that they were put in a booke: would God they were grauen with an yron pen in leade, or in ſtone, to contynue. For I am ſure that my redemer lyueth, and that I ſhall ryſe out of the earth in the latter daye: that I ſhall be clothed agayne with this ſkynne, and ſee God in my fleſh. yea, I my ſelfe ſhal behold him, not with other, but with theſe ſame eyes. My raynes are conſumed within me, did not ye ſaye: why doeth he ſuffre perſecucion? Is there founde an occaſion in me? But beware of the ſweard, for the ſweard wyll be auenged of wyckednelle: and be ſure, that there is a iudgement.

The.xx. Chapter.

Sophar ſayth, that the vnfayethful, the couetous, and the vnryghteous ſhall haue a ſhorte ende.

ZOPHAR anſwered Sophar the Naamathite, and ſayde: For B ſame cauſe do my thoughtes compell me to aunſwere. And why? my mynde is ready within me. I haue ſufficiently hearde thy checkyng and reproſe, therfore am I purpoſed to make anſwere after my vnderſtanding. Knoweſt thou not this, namelye, that from the begynnynge (euer ſence the creacion of man vpon earth) the gladneſſe of the vngodlye hath been ſhorte, & that the ioy of ypocrytes contynued but the twynklyng of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to the heauen, ſo that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he periſheth for euer, in ſo muche that they whiche
B haue ſene hym, ſhall ſaye: Where is he? He ſhall vanyſhe as a dreame: ſo that he can nomore be founde, and ſhall paſſe awaye as a viſion in the nyght. So that the eye which ſawe hym before, ſhal haue nomore ſyght of hym, and his place ſhall knowe hym nomore. His chyldren ſhall be fayne to agree with the poore, and his handes ſhall reſtore them theyr goodes.

From his youth his bones are full of pleaſures, but nowe ſhall it lye downe with hym in the earth. When wyckednelle was ſwete in his mouth, he hyd it vnder his tonge. That he fauoured, that would he not forſake, but kepte it cloſe in his throte. The breade that he dyd C eate, is turned to the poyſon of ſerpentes within his body. The ryches that he deuoured, ſhall he perbrake agayne, for God ſhall drawe them out of his bellye: he ſhall ſucke the gall of ſerpentes, and the adders tonge ſhall ſlaye hym: ſo that he ſhall nomore ſee the ryuers & brookes of honye & butter. The thyng that other menne haue laboured for, ſhall he reſtore agayne, and ſhall not eate it vp.

Greate trauayle ſhall he make for ryches, but he ſhall not enioy them. And why? He hath oppreſſed the poore, and not helped them: houſes hath he ſpoyled, and not buylded them. His bellye coulde neuer be fylled, therefore ſhall he periſhe in hys couetouſneſſe. There ſhall none of hys meate be lefte behynde, therefore ſhall no manne looke for his proſperitie. When he hadde plenteouſneſſe of euery thyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery ſyde.

For though the wycked haue neuer ſo D muche to fyll hys bellye, yet God ſhall ſende his wrath vpon hym, and cauſe his indignacion to raygne ouer hym: ſo that yf he flye the yron weapons, he ſhall be ſhotte with the ſtele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, & gone out of the quyuer, and a gliſteryng ſwearde thorowe the gall of hym, feare ſhall come vpon hym. There ſhal no darkeneſſe be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndled fyre ſhall conſume hym, and looke what remayneth in hys houſe, it ſhall be deſtroyed. The heauen ſhall declare hys wyckednelle, and the earth ſhall take parte agaynſt him. The ſubſtaunce that he hathe in hys houſe, ſhall be taken awaye and periſhe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the portion that the wycked man ſhall haue of God, and the heritage that he maye looke for of God, becauſe of his woordes.

The.xxi. Chapter.

Iob recyteth the proſperitie of the wycked, and after deſcribeth their ſodayne ruyne and deſtruction.

IOb anſwered & ſayde: O heare my woordes and that ſhalbe my comforte of you. Suffer me a lytle, that I maye ſpeake alſo also, and then laugh my wooꝛdes to scoꝛne (if it lyke you.) Is it foꝛ mannes sake that I make this disputacion? Whiche yf it were so, should not my spꝛyte be then in soꝛe trouble? Marke me wel, and be abasshed, and lay youꝛ hande vpon youꝛ mouth. Foꝛ when I consyder my selfe, I am afrayde, and my flesh is smytten with feare. * Wherefoꝛe do wycked menne lyue in health and pꝛosperitie, come to theyꝛ olde age, and increase in ryches? Theyꝛ childꝛen lyue in theyꝛ sight, and theyꝛ generacion befoꝛe theyꝛ eyes. Theyꝛ houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyꝛ bullocke gendꝛeth, and that not out of tyme: theyꝛ cowe calueth, and is not vnfruteful. They sende foꝛthe theyꝛ chyldꝛen by flockes, and theiꝛ sonnes lede the daunce. * They beate with them tabꝛettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musycke at theyꝛ pleasure. They spẽde theyꝛ dayes in welthynesse: but sodaynly they goe downe to hell. They saye also vnto God, goe frõ vs: we desyꝛe not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we should serue hym? And what pꝛofyte should we haue to submyt oure selues vnto hym? Loe, there is vtterlye no goodnesse in them, therefoꝛe will not I haue to do with the counsayle of the vngodlye. Howe ofte shall the candell of the wycked be put out? howe ofte commeth theyꝛ destruccion vpon them? O what soꝛowe shall God geue them foꝛ theyꝛ parte in his wꝛathe? Yea, they shall bee euen as haye befoꝛe the wynde, and * as chaffe that the stoꝛme carꝛyeth away.

And though God saue theyꝛ chyldꝛen from suche soꝛowe, yet wyll he so reward themselues, that they shall knowe it. Theyꝛ owne destruccion & mysꝛye shall they see with theyꝛ eyes, and dꝛynke of the fearfull wꝛathe of the Almyghty. Foꝛ what careth he what becommeth of hys householde after hys deathe, when the numbꝛe of hys monethes is cutte shoꝛte? In as muche then as God hath the hyest power of all, who canne teache hym any knowledge? One dyeth nowe when he is myghtye, & at his best, riche, and in pꝛosperytie, euen when hys bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of marye. An other dyeth in soꝛowe and heuynesse, and neuer had good dayes. They shall slepe bothe alyke in the earth, and the woꝛmes shall couer them. Beholde, I knowe what ye thynke: yea, and the subtyltye that ye ymagyne agaynst me. Foꝛ ye saye: where is the pꝛynces palace? and where is the dwellyng of the vngodly? haue ye not asked them that goe by the waye? Doubtlesse, ye canne not denye theyꝛ tokens, that * the wycked is kepte vnto the daye of destruccion, and that the vngodly shall be bꝛought foꝛth to the daye of wꝛathe. Who darre tꝛeꝛoue hym foꝛ hys waye to his face? Who wyll reward hym, foꝛ the vngracyousnesse that he doeth? Yet shall he bee bꝛought to hys graue, and dwell among the heape of the dead. Then shall he be layne to be buried among the stones of the playne. All men also must folowe hym, and there are innumerable gone befoꝛe hym. How vayne then is the comfoꝛte that ye geue me? Doeth not falshed remayne in all youre aunswers?

The.xxii. Chapter.

SO Eliphas the Themanyte gaue answere, and sayd: May a manne bee pꝛofytable vnto God, as he that is wyse maye be pꝛofytable to hymselfe? Is it any auauntage vnto the Almyghtye, that thou art ryghteous? Oꝛ shall it pꝛofyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes perfyte? Is he afrayde to tꝛeꝛoue thee, and to steppe foꝛth with the into iudgemente? Is not thy wyckednesse greate, and thyne vngracyous dedes innumerable? Foꝛ thou haste taken the pledge from thy bꝛother foꝛ nought, & robbed the naked of theyꝛ clothyng: To suche as were weꝛye, haste thou geuen no water to dꝛynke, and haste wythdꝛawen bꝛeade from the hongꝛye. Should suche one then as dꝛeth violẽce, wꝛonge and oppꝛessyon (doyng all thyng of partialitie, and hauing respect of persons) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sent wydowes away empty, and oppꝛessed the pooꝛe fatherlesse. Therfoꝛe art thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, and sodenly vexed with feare: shouldest thou then see no darkenesse? Should not the water floud runne ouer thee? Howe * because that God is hyer then the heauens, & because thou seest that the starres are so hye, wylt thou therfoꝛe say: Tushe, how should God know? Doth his dominiõ reache beyond the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer him that he may not see, & he dwelleth aboue heauẽ. Doest not thou

C kepe the olde waye that vayne men haue gone which were cut downe out of time, and whose foundacion was a runnyng water: whiche sayde vnto God: go from vs, and what dyd the almyghtye wyth them? He fylled theyr houses with good thynges. But the counsayle of the vngodlye is farre fro me. The ryghteous sawe it, and were glad, and the innocent laughed them to scorne. Is our encreasse bewen downe? As for the remnaunte of them, the fyre hath consumed it. Therefore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shall al thinges prosperе with the right wel. Receyue the law at his mouth, and laye vp hys woordes in thyne harte.

Deut.30.b. For * yf thou wylt turne to the almighty, D thou shalt stande fast, & put all vnrighteousnesse from thy dwellyng: Thou shalt make golde as plentifull as the dust, and the golde of Ophir as the stynes of the ryuers. Yea, almyghtye God his owne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue plentye of syluer. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almightye, and lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, and he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promysses. Then looke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prosperе with thee: & the light shall shyne in thy wayes.

Prou.29.c. For * whoso humbleth himselfe, him shal he set vp: and whoso loketh meekely, shall be healed. yf thou be innocent, thou shalt delyuer the countrye, because of the vngyltynesse of thy handes.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he doth knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayth that he hath walked in his ryghteousnesse.

A Iob answered, and sayde: My saying is yet this daye in bytternesse, and my hande heauy, because of my groning. O that I myght see him, and fynde him, O that I myght come before hys seate to plede my cause before hym, & to fyll my mouth with argumentes. That I might know, what answer he would geue me: and that I might vnderstand what he would say vnto me. Wyll he pleate agaynste me with his great power and strength? No, B but he wil make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall enter disputacion with hym, and my iudge shall delyuer me for euer. Behold though I goe before, I fynde him not: If I come behynd, I can get no knowledge of hym. If I goe on the lefte syde, where he doth his worke, I cannot attaine vnto him. Agayn, yf I go on the ryght syde, he hydeth himselfe, y I cannot see hym. But as for my way, he knoweth it, and * tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

out of it. I wyll not forsake the commaundement of hys lyppes, but looke what he charged me with his mouth, that haue I shutte vp in my harte. He is styll at one poynte, and who wyll turne hym backe? He doeth as hym lusteth, and bryngeth to passe what he wyll. He performeth the thyng that is appoynted for me, and many suche thynges doeth he. This is the D cause that I shrynke at hys presence, so that when I consyder him, I am afrayd of hym. For in somuche as he is God, he maketh my harte softe: & seyng that he is Almightye, he putteth me in feare. Thus cannot I get out of darkenesse, neyther hath he couered the cloude fro my face.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

Job declareth the wyckednesse of men, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

C Onsyderyng then, that there I waye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take ỹ wyddowes ore for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Behold, euen as the wylde asses in the desserte, goe they forth to theyr worke, & rise by tymes to spoyle: yea, the very wylderneſſe mynystreth foode for theyr chylden. They reape the corne fielde that is not B theyr owne: and let the vyneyarde of the vngodlye alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauing no clothes to couer them, and to kepe the from colde. So that when the showres in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon the, and they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them amonge the rockes. They spoyle the sucking fatherlesse chylde, and take the pledge from the poore. In somuche, that they let him go naked wythout clothyng: and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the hongry.

The

The poore are fayne to labour in their oyle milles: yea, & to treade in their wynepzelles, & yet to suffre thirst. The men of ꝑ Citie crye to the Lorde with syghynge, * the soules of the slayne also make their complaynt. But God destroyeth them not for al this, whereas they (not withstandyng) are conuersaunt amonge them, that abhorre the lyght: they knowe not his waye, nor continue in his pathes. * Tymely in the morynge do they aryse, to murther the simple and poore: and in the nyght they go a stealynge. The eye of the aduoutrer wayteth for the darckenes, & sayth thus in hym selfe: Tush, there shall no eye se me: and so he disguyseth hys face.
In the nyght season they searche the houses and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but will not knowe the light. For assoone as the daye breaketh, the shadow of death cõmeth vpõ them, and they go in horrible darknes.
The vngodly is swyfter then ꝑ water: their portion shalbe cursed in the earth, & he shall not beholde the waye of the vynepardes.
O that they (for the wyckednes whiche they haue done) were drawen to the hell, sooner then snow melteth at the drouth and heate.
O that al compassyon vpon them were forgotten, that their dayntes were wormes, ꝑ they were cleane put out of remembraunce, & vngodlynes vtterly hewen downe lyke as a tree. He hath oppressed the barren, that he can not beare: and vnto the widdowe hath he done no good. He drewe the myghtye after him with his power, and when he was gotten vp, no man was without feare, as longe as he lyued. And though they myght be safe, yet they will not receyue it, for their eyes loke vpõ their owne wayes. They are exalted for a lyttle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerty, and taken out of the waye: yea, and vtterly plucte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who will then reproue me as a lyar, and saye that my wor-des are nothyng worth.

The.xxv. Chapter.

Baldad prouyth that no man is cleane, and without synne before God.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, & sayde: Is there power and feare with hym aboue, that maketh peace settyng in hys hyghenesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose lyght aryseth ouer all? But howe may a man compared vnto God be iustified? Or how can he be cleane, ꝑ is borne of a woman? Behold, the Moone shyneth nothyng in comparison to him, and the starres are vncleane in his syght. Howe muche more then man, that is but corrup-cion? and the sonne of man, whiche is but a worme?

The.xxvi. Chapter.

Job shewyth that man can not helpe God, and proueth it by his miracles.

Job answered, and sayde: whom hast thou helped? Hym that is without strength? What com-forte gyuest thou vnto hym that hath no strength? Where is the counsayle that thou shouldest gyue hym, whiche hath no wysdome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryghte liuyng? To whom hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made ꝑ breath to come out of thy mouth? Are not dead thynges shapen vnder the waters, and thynges by ꝑ waters syde? Hell is naked before hym, and the very destruccyon it selfe, cannot be hyd out of his syghte. He stretcheth out ꝑ north ouer the emptye, and hangeth the earth vpõ nothynge. He byndeth the * waters in hys cloudes, and the cloud is not broken vnder thẽ. He holdeth backe his stoole, that it can not be sene: and spredeth his cloude before it. * He hath compassed the waters with cer-tayne boundes, vntill the daye and nyght come to an ende. The very pillers of heauen tremble and quake at his reproffe. * He styleth the sea with hys power, and thorow his wysedome smyteth he the strength therof.
Hys spyrite hath garnysshed the heauẽs, and his hãde hath made the rebellious serpent.
Lo, this is nowe a short sũme of his wayes.
But who is able sufficiently to reherse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstãde the thunder of his power?

Luke.12.c man dyeth, he caryeth nothynge wyth hym: he is gone in the twynkelynge of an eye, and hath nothing. Destruccion taketh hold vpō him as a water floude: and the tempest stealeth hym awaye, in the nyght season. A vehement east wynde caryeth hym hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh hym out of his place. It rusheth in vpon hym, and spareth him not, he may not escape from the power therof. Then clap men their handes at him: yea, and iest of hym, when they loke vpon his place.

The.xxix. Chapter.

Job complayneth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, sadelye reprouynge his frendes of iniury, because they sayde that Job suffred accordynge to his deseruynge.

SO Job proceaded and wente forth in his communicacio, sayinge: O that I were as I was in the monethes past by, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shyned vpon my heade, whē I went after the same light & shyning.

me thorowe the darkenesse. As it stoode wt me whē I was yong: whē God prospered my houle: when the Almyghtye was yet with me: when my childrē stode about me: when my wayes ranne ouer wyth butter, & when the stoney rockes gaue me riuers B of oyle: when I wente thorowe the cītye vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayre in the strete: when the yonge men (as sone as they sawe me) hid them selues, and when the aged arose, & stode vp vnto me: when the Prynces left of theyr talking, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouth: whē the myghty kepte styll theyr voyce, & when theyr tong cleued to ỹ roofe of their mouth. When all they that hearde me, called me happy: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered ỹ poore when he cryed, and so dyd I the fatherles, and hym that had none to helpe hym. Hey shoulde haue bene loste, gaue me a good word, & the wyddowes heart praised me. And why: I put vpon me ryghteousnes, C whych couered me as a garment, & equytie was my crowne. I was an eye to ỹ blynd, and a foote to the lame: I was a father vnto the poore: & when I knewe not the cause, I soughte it oute diligently. I brake the Psal.58.c. chawes of the vnryghteous man, * & pluct the spoyle oute of hys teeth. Therfore, I thought verely, that I should haue dyed in my nest: & that my dayes should haue bene as many as the sandes of the sea. For my roote was spred out by the water side: and the dewe laye vpon my corne. My honoure encreased more and more, & my bowe was euer ỹ stronger in myne hand. Vnto me mē D gaue eare, me they regarded: & with scilence they taried for my counsalle. Yf I had spokē, they woulde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so wel taken amonge them. They waytred for me, as for the rayne: and gaped vpō me as ỹ ground doth to receiue the latter shoure. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And ỹ lyght of my countenaūce would they not put out. When I agreed vnto theyr waye, I was the chefe, and sat as a kyng with his armye about him. And when they were in heuines I was theyr comfortour.

The.xxx. Chapter.

The great despising of men, and curse of God that Job suffereth.

BVt now they that are yonger thē I, haue me in derision: yea, euen they whose fathers I wolde haue thought scorne to haue set with ỹ dogges of my cattel. The power & strēgth of theyr handes myghte do me no good, for the tyme is but loste amonge them. For very mysery and honger they fled into the wyldernesse, a darke place horrible & waste, pluckyng vp netels among the bushes and ỹ Juniper rotes for theyr meate. And whē they were driuen forth, men cried after thē, as it had ben after a theefe. Theyr dwelling was besyde foule brookes: yea, in ỹ caues and dennes of the earth. Among ỹ bushes wente they about, crying: and vnder the thornes they gathered thē selues together. They were ỹ chyldrē of fooles & villaines, which are dryed out of the worlde. * Now B am I theyr songe, and am become theyr Lyre.3.g iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, and flye Psal.69.c farre from me, and stayne my face wyth spetle. For the lord hath loused the strength of my bodye, and broughte me lowe: The bridle haue they cast out of my syght. Upō my ryght hande ryse the yonge mē against me, they haue hurt my fete treadynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they woulde destroye. My pathes haue they cleane marred. It was so easie for thē to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe thē. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breakyng in of waters, & came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is tourned against me.

Myne honoure vanysshed awaye more swyftly then the wynde, & my prosperitie C departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde poured ful of heuinesse, and the daies of my trouble haue take holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the night season, & my synewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorowe, is my garment chaunged, and accordyng to the denersitie of heuynesse, am I gyrded with my coate. He hath cast me into ỹ mire, and I am become lyke asshes and dust. When I crie vnto the, thou doest not heare me: & thoughe I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and wyth thy violent hande thou takest parte against me. In tymes paste thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe hast thou giuē me a very sore fall. Sure I am that thou wylte deliuer me vnto death, euen to the D lodgyng that is due vnto all men liuyng. Now vse not men to do violence vnto thē, that are destroyed already: but where hurt is done, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe wt him ỹ was in trouble? had not my soule cōpassion vpon the poore? Yet neuer-

theleſſe, where as I loked for good, euyll happened vnto me: and wher as I wayted for light, there came darkeneſſe. My bowels ſethe within me, and take no reſte, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me.
Mekely and lowly came I in: yea, and with out any diſpleaſure: I ſtode vp in the congregacyō, and communed wyth them: But nowe I am a companion of dragons, and a felow of Oſtriches. My ſkynne vpon me is turned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heate: my harpe is turned to ſorowe, and my pype to weepynge.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

Job recyteth the innocency of hys lyuynge, and numbre of hys vertues.

I Made a couenaunt with mine eyes * that I wouldenot loke vpō a damſell. For how great a portion ſhal I haue of God and what enherytaunce from the almyghty on hye? Is for the vngodlye? he that ioyneth hym ſelfe to the company of wicked doers, ſhal not deſtruccion? miſery come vpon them? * Doth not he ſe my wayes? tell all my goinges? yf I haue walked in vanitie, or yf my fete haue rūne to diſceiue: let me be wayed in an euen balaunce, that God may ſe myne innocencye. * yf ſo be that I haue withdrawē my foote out of ꝑ right waye, and yͤ hart hath folowed myne eyes lyghte: yf I haue ſtained or defyled my handes, then ſhall I ſowe, & an other eat: yea, my generacion and poſteritie ſhall be cleane rooted out. Yf myne hert hath luſted after my neyghbours wyfe, or if I haue layed wayte at his dore: O then let my wife grynde vnto an other man, & let other mē lie with her. * For this is a wickednelle and ſynne, that is worthy to be punyſhed: yea, a fyre ꝑ vtterly ſhoulde conſume and roote out all my ſubſtaunce. Dyd I euer thynke ſcorne to do ryght vnto my ſeruaunte & maidens, whē they had any matter againſt me? But ſeing ꝑ God will ſyt in iudgement, what ſhal I do? And forſomuche as he will nedes byſet me, what anſwere ſhal I gyue hym? He that faſhioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym alſo? were we not bothe ſhapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore deſyred anye thynge at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I cauſed the widdowe to ſtande waiting for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcyon alone, that the fatherleſſe hath had no part wyth me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compaſſion frō my mothers wombe. Haue I ſene any mā periſh thorow nakednelle, and want of clothyng? Or any poore mā for lacke of rayment, whoſe ſides thanked me not, becauſe he was warmed wyth the wol of my ſhepe? Dyd I euer lyft vp mine hand to hurt ꝑ fatherleſſe? yea, in the gate where I ſawe my ſelfe to be in auctheritie: then let mine arme fal from my ſhoulder, & myne arme holes be broken frō ꝑ ioyntes. For I haue euer feared ꝑ vengeaunce & punyſhment of God, and knew very wel, ꝑ I was not able to beare his burthē. Haue I put my truſte in golde? Or haue I ſayde to the fyneſt golde of all: thou art my confydence? haue I reioyſed becauſe my power was great, & becauſe my hande gat ſo much? * Dyd I euer greatly regarde the ryſynge of the Sunne? Or had I ꝑ goinge downe of the Moone in great reputacion? Hath my hert medled priuely wyth any deceite? Or did I euer kiſſe myne owne hande? that were a wickednelle worthy to be punyſhed, for thē ſhould I haue denyed ꝑ God that is aboue. * Haue I euer reioyſed at the hurte of myne enemye? Or was I euer glad that any harme happened vnto hym? Oh no: I neuer ſuffered my mouth to do ſuch a ſinne, as to wyſhe hym euel. Dyd not the men of myne owne houſholde ſay: who ſhall let vs to haue our belly ful of his fleſſe? I haue not ſuffered a ſtraunger to lye without, but I opened my dores vnto him, that went by ꝑ waye. Haue I kept ſecret my ſinne, and hid mine iniquitie, as Adā did? Haue I feared any greate multitude of people? or if I had bene deſpiſed of the ſimple, O thē ſhould I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quietly ſpent my life, & not gone out at the dore: O that I had one which wolde heare me! Lo, this is my cauſe. In ꝑ which the almighty ſhall anſwere for me: thoughe he that is my cōtrary party, hath wrytē a booke againſt me: Yet wyl I take him vpō my ſhulder, & as a garlande about my head. I will tel him the numbre of my goinges, & go vnto him as to a prince. But yf caſe be, ꝑ my landerie againſt me, or that ꝑ forowes therof make any complaint: Yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for: yea, yf I haue greued any of ꝑ plowmen: thē let thiſtles growe in ſteade of my wheat, & cockle for my barlye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

Elihu after the other hath fynyſhed their cōmunicacion, reproueth them of folyſhneſſe. Age maketh not a man wyſe, but the ſpirit of God.

SO theſe thre mē wolde ſtriue no more with Job, becauſe he held him ſelf a ryghteous mā. But Elihu the ſonne of of Barachell, the Busshyte, of the kynred of Ram, was verye sore displeased at Job, because he called him self iust before God. And vpō Jobs thre frendes he was angry also, because they had found no reasonable answer to ouercome Job. Now tarried Elihu, til they had ended their cōmunicatiō vpō Job, for why they were elder then he. So whē Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Busshite, sawe that these thre mē were not able to make Job answere, he was miscontent: Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Busshite answered him selfe, & saide: *Considering that I am yong, and ye be mē of age: I was afrayd and durst not shew forth my minde. For I thought thus within my selfe. It becōmeth olde men to speake, & the aged to teache wisdom. Euery mā (no doubt) hath a mynde, * but it is the inspiratiō of the Almyghtye that giueth vnderstandynge. Greate men are not alway wyse, neyther doth euery aged man vnderstand þ thinge þ is lawfull. Therefore will I speake also (heare me) & I wil shewe you also myne vnderstandynge. For whē I had wayted til ye made an ende of your talkyng, and heard your wisedom, what argumētes ye made in your cōmunicatiō: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I found not one of you þ made any good argument agaynste Job, that directlye could make answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde saye: We haue foūde out wysedom: God shal cast him downe, & no mā. He hath not spokē vnto me, & I will not answere him as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, þ they coulde not make answere, nor speake one worde) but in so much as ye wil not speake, standyng still lyke dōme men, & makynge no answere: I haue a good hope for my part, to shape him an answere, & to shew hym my meanyng: For I am ful of wordes, & þ spirite that is within me, cōpelleth me. Behold, my belly is as the wyne, whiche hath no vent, and bursteth the newe vessell es in sonder. Therfore will I speke, þ I maye haue a vent: I will open my lippes, and make answere. I wil regarde no manes of persone, no man will I spare. For * yf I would go about to please mē, I know not howe soone my maker would take me awaye.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherein Job offendeth, with God may we not stryue, nor curiously searche out hys workes.

Wherfore, heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all þ I will saye: Beholde, I haue nowe opened my mouthe, my tōge hath spokē in my throte: My hearte doth ordre my wordes aryght, and my lyppes talke of pure wisedome. The spirite of God hath made me, & * þ breath of the almightye hath geuen me my lyfe. yf thou canste, then giue me answere: prepare thy self to stande before me, face to face. Beholde, before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned & made euē of þ same moulde. Therfore, thou nedest not to be afrayed of me, neyther nedest þ to feare þ my authoritie shalbe to heuye for the. Nowe hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue heard the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faute, I am innocent, & there is no wickednes in me. But lo, he hath picked a quarel agaynst me, & taketh me for hys enemye: *he hath put my foote in the stockes, and loketh narowlye vnto al my pathes. Beholde, in this hast thou not done ryght. I wil make answere vnto the, that God is more then man. And why doest thou thē stryue agaynst him? for he shall not geue the accōptes of all his wordes. For whē God doth once cōmaunde a thynge, there shoulde no mā be curious to search whether it be ryght. * In dreames & visions of the nyght, when slombrynge commeth vpon men, that they fall a sleape in their beddes, he coūseth them in the eares, he informeth thē, & sheweth thē plainly that it is he, which withdraweth mā frō euel, deliuereth him frō pryde, kepeth him frō the graue, and his life from the swearde. He chastneth hym wt sickenes, & bryngeth hym to hys bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so that his life maye away with no breade, & hys soule abhorreth to eat any daynty meate: in so muche þ his body is cleane consumed awaye, & his bones appeare nomore. His life draweth on to the graue, & his life to death. Now yf there be a messenger (one amōg a thousāde) sent for to speake vnto man, & to shewe him the right way: then the lord is mercifull vnto him, & sayeth: He shalbe deliuered, þ he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconciled. Thē shal his flesh be as wel lykyng as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in his youth. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he shal be gracious vnto him, and shewe him his countenaunce ioyfully,

D and rewardeth man for his right eounes. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man confesse (and say:) I haue offended: I dyd vnrighteously, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruccion, & my lyfe shall se the lyght. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, ꝑ he kepeth his soule from perychynge, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the hyuynge. Marke well (O Job) & heare me: holde thee still, and I will spake. But yf thou haste any thyng to say, then answere me, & speake: for thy answere pleaseth me. yf ꝑ haste nothynge, then heare me, and holde thy tonge: so shall I teache the wysedome.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

Elihu prayseth the iustice of God, which iudgeth the worlde and gouerneth all.

Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God doth me wrong. I must nedes be a lyar, though my cause be ryght, and violentlye I am plaged where as I made no faut: where is there suche a one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnes, like water? whiche goeth in the companye of wicked doers, & walketh with vngodly men? for he hath sayd: though a man be good, yet is he naught before God.

of man, and he seeth all his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor shadowe of death, that can hyde the wycked doers from him. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgemēt with God. Many one, yea, innumerable doeth he punyche, and setteth other in their steades. Therefore shall he declare their workes, he shall turne ꝑ nyghte, & they shalbe destroyed. of suche as are in trouble. yf he graunt pardone, who will condemne? And yf he hyde away his countenaūce, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus will he do. For the vngodlynes of ꝑ people, doth God make an vpporrite to reygne ouer them. For so muche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wil not hynder the. yf I haue gone amysse, enfourme thou me: yf I haue done wronge, I will leaue of. Can he do nothynge wythout the? for thou haste reproued his iudgement. Thou also haste thyne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, and let a wise man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neyther spoken to the purpose, nor wyselye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hathe answered for wycked men: yea, aboue his synne he doth wyckedlye, triumpheth among vs, & multiplieth his wordes against God.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Neither doeth godlynes profite, or vngodlynesse hurte to God, but to man.

Elihu

A Elihu spake moreouer, & said: Thinkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? For thou sayest. What aduauntage will it be vnto the, and what profyte shalte þ haue of my synne? Therefore will I gyue answere vnto the, & to thy companions wt the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consider the cloudes, which are hier then thou. yf thou hast synned, what hast thou done agaynst hym? yf thyne offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? yf thou be righteous, what gyuest þ him? Or what will he receiue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a great crye and cõplaint made by them þ are oppressed with violence: yea, euery mã complayneth vpon the cruelty of tyrauntes. For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God þ made me? and that geueth vs occasiõ to praise him in þ nyght wt which geueth vs more vnderstandynge then he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doth þ foules of heauen. yf any suche complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that because of the wyckednes of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpõ God, doth not he heare him? Doeth not the Almightye accepte his crye? When thou spekest then, shoulde not he pardone the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, nether hath he pleasure in curious & depe inquisitions. Therefore doth Job opẽ his mouth but in vayne, & foolyshly doth he make so many wordes.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherefore God punisheth and correcteth.

A Elihu proceaded forth in his talkyng, & sayd: Holde the still a litle, & I shal shew the what I haue yet to speke on Gods behalfe. I will opẽ vnto the yet more of myne vnderstãdynge: & proue my matter righteous. And truely, my wordes shall not be vayne, seynge he is with the þ is perfite in knowlege: behold, the great God casteth awaye no mã, for he him selfe is myghty in power & wisedom. As for þ vngodly, he shal not preserue him, but shal helpe the poore to their ryght. He shal turne his eyes away frõ the ryghteous, but as kynges shall they be in their trone: he shal stablish thẽ for euer, and they shalbe exalted. But yf they be layed in prieson and chaynes, or bound with the bondes of trouble, then wil he shew thẽ their worke, & the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violẽce. B He with punishyng & nurtrynge of them roũdeth thẽ in the eares, warneth thẽ to leaue of frõ their wickednes, & to amẽde. *yf they now wil take hede & serue him, they shall weare out their dayes in prosperitie, & their yeares in pleasure, and ioye. But yf they will not herke, they shall go thorow þ swerde, & perish or euer they be aware. As for suche as be fained ypocrites, they shal heap vp wrath for them selues: for they cal not vpõ him, though they be his prisoners. Thus shall their soule perishe in foolishenesse, & their life shalbe cõdemned among the fornicatours. The poore shall he deliuer out of his afflicciõ, & rounde thẽ in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the: yf thou wylt be contente frõ the bottomlesse pyt that is beneth: & yf thou wylte holde the quiete, he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnesse. Neuerthelesse, thou hast cõdẽned the iudgememẽt of the vngodly: yea, euen suche a iudgement & sentence shalt thou suffre. For thẽ shall not thy cause be stilled with crueltye, nor pacifyed with many gyftes. Thinkest thou, that he wil regarde thy rychesse? he shall not care for golde, nor for all them þ excel in strẽgth. Prolonge not thẽ þ time, till there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aside to wickednes & synne, whiche hitherto thou hast chosen more then mekenes. Beholde, God is of a myghtye hye power: Where is ther suche a guyde and lawgeuer as he? Who will reproue hym of his wayes? Who wil say vnto him? thou hast done wronge. O cõsider how great & excellent his workes be, whom al men loue & praise: yea, wõder at him, and yet they se him but afarre of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowlege, neither are we able to come to þ ꝛpiece of his yeares. *He turneth þ water to small droppes, he driueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure down & drop vpõ mẽ. He cã spreade out þ cloudes (a couerynge of his Tabernacle) & cause his light to shyne vpõ them, & to couer þ botome of þ sea. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, & gyueth thẽ aboũdaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hydeth

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

Elihu prouyth that the wysedome of God his vnsercheable.

A T this my hearte is astonnyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and ỹ noyse that goeth oute of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, and his lyghte reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaryng voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiestie gyueth suche a thonder clappe, that (thoughe a man heare it) yet may he not perceiue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sõde whẽ God sendeth out his voyce: greate thynges doeth he which we can not comprehende. * When he cõmaundeth the snow, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, immediatlye the showers haue their strength, & fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery mã, that they myght know their owne worckes. The beastes crepe into their dẽnes, and take their rest: out of the South cõmeth the tẽpest, & cold out of the North. At the breath of God the frost cõmeth, & the waters are shed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in geuig moystnesse: and agayne with hys lyghte he dryueth awaye the cloude. He dystributeth also on euery side, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale oute hys worckes: that they maye doe whatsoeuer he commaundeth thẽ thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punishe any lande, or to do good vnto them that seke him. Herkẽ vnto this (O Job) stand still, and consider the wõderous worckes of God. Arte thou of counsaile with God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth ỹ lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsayle, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou ỹ perfect knowledge of his wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, whẽ the lande is stil thorow the South wynde? Hast thou helped him to spreade out ỹ heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were caste of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall say vnto him, for we are vnmete bicause of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what I saye? Shoulde a man speke, or should he kepe it backe? For euerye man seeth not the lyghte ỹ he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blow. Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse and honour of Gods feare commeth frõ God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almighty: for in power, equitie & rightoulnes, he is hier then can be expressed. Let men therfore feare him, for there shal no mã se him, ỹ is wise in his owne cõceyt.

The.xxxviii. Chapter.

The wonders and mercuailes that the Lorde hath done from the begynnynge.

THen answered the lorde vnto Job, out of the storme, & said: what is he ỹ hydeth his mynde with foolysshe wordes? * Gyrd vp thy lomes like a mã, for I will question with the: see ỹ gyue me a direct answer. Where wast ỹ when I layed the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnelye, yf ỹ hast vnderstãdynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pillers of it? Or who layed ỹ corner stone therof? Where wast ỹ when the morning starres praised me togither, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantly? * Who shut the sea with dores, when it brake forthe as a childe out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, & swadled it with the darkenesse? whẽ I gaue it my cõmaũdemẽt, makyng dores & barres for it, sayinge: Hytherto shalte thou come, but no farther: & here shalte thou laye downe thy proude & hye waues. Haste thou gyuen the morninge his charge (assone as thou waste borne) & shewed the day spryng his place, that it might take holde of the corners of the earth, & that the vngodly myght be shaken out? Their tokẽs & weapõs are turned lyke clay: & set vp agayne as ỹ chaũgyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe disappoynted of their lyght: & the arme of ỹ proud shalbe broken. Camest ỹ euer into ỹ grouũd of the sea? or walkedst in ỹ lowe corners of the depe? Haue ỹ gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast ỹ sene the dores of the shadow of death? Hast thou also perceyued howe brode the earth is? yf thou hast knowledge of all this, then shew me where light dwelleth, and where darkenes is: that thou mayest bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou cãst tel the way to their houses. He remembreth not that they myghte be ¶ Job humbleth him self vnto God. the description of Behemoth and Leuyathon.

Moreouer,

MOreouer, God spake vnto Job, and sayde: Can he that striueth with ꝑ almyghty, be at rest? Should not he which disputeth wᵗ God, giue him an answere: Job answered the lord, saying: Beholde, I am to vyle a person to answere the, therfore wyll I laye myne hand vpon my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyll saye nomore. Then answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayd: * gyrd vp thy loines nowe lyke a mā, and tel me the thynges that I wyl aske the. Wilt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wilt thou condemne me, ꝑ thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous? Is thy power thē like the power of God? Maketh thy voice such a sounde as hys doth? Then arme thy selfe with thine owne power: vp, decke the in thy glorye araye, poure out the indignacion of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all the proude, loke wel ꝑ thou make st all suche as be stubburne to obey: tread downe al ꝑ vngodly in theyr place, cast them downe into the dust, & couer theyr faces wᵗ darkenesse: Then wyll I confesse vnto the also, that thyne owne ryghte hande shall saue thee.

Beholde the beaste Behemoth (whom I made wᵗ the) which eateth haye as an oxe: lo, howe strong he is in his loynes, & what power he hath in the nauyll of his body. He spreadeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, al his paynes are stytke. His shynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, his rydge bones are lyke staues of yron. Fyrst whē God made him, he ordeyned the wildernesse for hym, that ꝑ mountaynes should giue him grasse, where al ꝑ beastes of the feilde take theyr pastime. He lyeth among the reedes in the mosses, ꝑ fennes hyde hym wyth theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour might he dryncke out of the whole floude, & sup of Jordan without any trauaile. Who darre laye hande vpō him openly, & vndertake to catche hym? Or who darre put an hooke thorowe his nose and late a snare for hym? Darrest thou draw out * Leuiathan wyth an angel, or bynde hys tonge wyth a snare? Canst thou put a rynge in the nose of hym, or bore his chawe thorowe with a naule? Wyll he make manye fayre wordes wyth the, (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Will he make a couenaunte wyth the? Or arte thou hable to compell hym to do the continual seruice? Wilt thou take thy pastime wᵗ him as with a bird, or giue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companions may make a reflectiō of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the marchaunte men? Canst thou fyl the basket wyth hys skynne, or the fysshe panyer wyth hes head? Darrest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consyder what harme might happen the there thorowe, and not touche hym. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the.

The. xli. Chapter.

NO man is so cruell that is able to stirre him vp. * Who is able to stāde before me? Or who hath giuen me any thyng afore hand, that I may rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare him not, whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, and strypeth hym out of hys clothes? or who taketh him by the bitte of hys brydle? Who openeth the dore of his face? For he hath horryble teeth rounde about. His body is couered wᵗ scales, as it were wyth shildes, lockt in, kept and well compact togyther. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon an other, and sticketh so togither, that they can not be sondred. His nesynge is lyke a glysteringe fyre, and his eies like the morninge shyne. Out of hys mouth go torches, and oute of his nostrelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hote sethynge pot. His breath maketh the coales burne, & the flame goeth oute of hys mouth. In his neche remaineth strength, and nothynge is to laborious for hym. The members of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleaue so faste togither, ꝑ he can not be moued. His herte is as harde as a stone, & as fast as the stythie that the smith smiteth vpon. When he goeth, the myghtye are afrayed, and feare troubleth them. Yf any man draweth out a swerde at him, it shal not hurt him: there may neither speare iaueling nor brestplate, abyde hym. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yron, & as muche by a rotten stocke as by brasse. He flatteth not away for hym that bendeth the bowe, and as for stinge stones, he careth as muche for stubble as for them. He counteth the darres no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorne that shaketh the speare: He treadeth the golde in the myre, lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth the sea togither lyke an oyntment. He maketh a pathe to be sene after hym, the deepe is hys walkynge place. Upon earth is there no power lyke vnto his: for he is so made, that he feareth not. Yea man will consyder all hye thynges, this same is a kyng ouer al the children of pryde.

The.xlii. Chapter.

* The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

Then Job answered the Lorde, & sayd:
* I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, & that ther is no thought hydde vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsayll so secrete, but it shalbe knowen?
Therfore haue I spoken, that I vnderstode not the thynges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere vnto the thynge that I will aske the. I haue gyuen diligent eare vnto the, and nowe I see the with mine eyes. Wherfore, I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and asshes. Now when the lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it for-tuned that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanyte: I am displeased with the,
and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thynge that is ryght: lyke as my seruaũt Job hath done. Therfore take you now seuen oxen and seuen rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and * offre vp for your selues a burnt offrynge: & my seruaunt Job shall praye for you. Hym will I accept, and not deale with you after your foolishnesse:
in that ye haue not spoken the thing whiche is ryght, lyke as my seruaũt Job hath done.
So Eliphas the Themanite, and Bal-dad the Suhyte, and Sophar the Naama-thite went their waye, and dyd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them.
* The Lorde also accepted the persone of Job, and the Lorde turned the captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yea, the Lord gaue Job * twyse as muche as he had afore. And then came there vnto hym all his brethren, all his systers, and all they that had bene of his acquayntaunce afore, & dyd eate bread with hym in his house, wonderynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man also gaue him a certayne summe of money, and a ieuell of golde. And the Lorde made Job richer then he was before: for he had fourtene. M. shepe, syxe. M. camels, a. M. yoke of oxen, & a. M. asses. He had seuen sonnes also, and thre doughters. The firste doughter called he Jemima, the second Kezia, and the thirde Kerenhapuch. In all ỹ land were no wome̅ founde so faire as the doughters of Job: and their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After this lyued Job an hundred and fourtie yeres, so that he sawe * his children, and his childres childzen, vnto the fourth generacion. And so Job dyed: beyng olde, and of a perfect age.

¶ The fyrst Psalme.

Beatus vir qui non abiit.

BLessed is that man that hath not walked in ꝑ * councel of the vngodlye, nor stande in ꝑ waye of synners, and hath not sit in ꝑ seate of the scornefull. But his delight is in the lawe of the Lorde: and in hys lawe wyll he exercyse him selfe daye and nyght. And *he shalbe lyke a tree planted by the water syde, that wyll bryng forthe his frute in due season. Hys leafe also shall not wyther, & loke whatsoeuer he doeth, it shal prosper.

Is for the vngodlye, it is not so wyth them: but * they are lyke the chaffe whyche the wynde scatereth away (from the face of the earth.)

Therfore the vngodly shall not be able to stande in the iudgemẽt: nether ꝑ synners in the congregacion of the righteous.

But the Lorde knoweth the waye of the ryghteous, and the waye of the vngodlye shall perysshe.

¶ The seconde psalme.

Quare fremuerunt gentes.

WHy * do the Heathẽ so furyously rage together, & why do the people ymagyne a vayne thynge?

The kynges of the earth stande vp, and the rulers take councell together * agaynste the Lorde, and agaynste hys anoynted. Let vs breake theyr bondes asunder, & caste awaye theyr coardes frõ vs.

He that dwelleth in heauen * shal laughe them to scorne: the Lorde shal haue them in derysyon. Then shall he speake vnto thẽ in hys wrathe, and vexe them in his sore displeasure. Yet haue I set my kyng vpon my holy hill of Sion. I will preache the lawe, whereof the Lord hathe said vnto me:
* Thou arte my sonne, thys daye haue I begotten the. Desyre of me, and I shall geue the ꝑ Heathẽ for thyne enherytaunce, and the vttmost partes of the earth for thy possessyõ. * Thou shalte bruse them with a rodde of Iron, and breake them in peces lyke a potters vessell. Be wyse nowe therfore, O ye kynges: be learned, ye that are iudges of the earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reioyce (vnto him) wyth reuerence.

Kysse the sonne leste he be angry, & so ye perysshe from the (ryghte) waye: yf hys wrath be kyndled (yea but a lytle) blessed are all they that put their trust in hym.

¶ The thyrde Psalme.

Domine quid multiplicati.

¶ A psalme of Dauid when he fled from the face of Absolon his sonne.

LOrde howe are they increased, ꝑ trouble me? manye are they that rise agaynst me. Many one ther be, ꝑ saye of my soule: there is no helpe for him in (hys) God. Sela. But thou, O Lorde, arte my defender: thou art my worshyp, and the lyfter vp of my head.

I did cal vpon the Lord with my voice:
and he hearde me out of hys holye hyll.
Sela. I layde me downe and slept, and rose vp agayne, for the Lord sustayned me.

I wil not be afrayd for ten thousandes of the people that haue sette themselues a-gaynst me round about. Up lord & helpe me O my God, for thou smytest all myne enemyes vpon the cheke bone: thou haste broken the teeth of the vngodly. Saluacyõ belongeth vnto the Lorde: and thy blessynge is vpon thy people. Sela.

¶ The fourth psalme.

Cum inuocarem.

To hym that excelleth in musyke, a psalme of Dauid.

HEare me, when I cal, O God of my righteousnes: thou hast set me at lyberty, whe I was in trouble: haue mercye vpon me & herken vnto my prayer.

O ye sonnes of men howe longe wyll ye blaspheme myne honoure, and haue such pleasure in vanitie, and seke after leasynge?
Sela. Knowe thys also, that the Lord hath chosen to hym selfe the man that is godlye: when I call vpon the Lord, he wyll heare me. Stande in awe, and synne not:
comen wyth youre owne herte, and in youre chambre, and be styll. Sela. Offer the sacrifyce of ryghteousnes, and put youre trust in the lord. There be many that saye: who wyl shewe vs any good? Lord lifte thou vp ꝑ light of thy coũtenaũce vpõ vs.

Thou haste put gladnes in my herte, sence the tyme that their corne and wyne (and oyle) increased. I will laye me downe in peace, and take my reste: for it is thou Lord onlye, that makeste me dwell in safetye.

The.v.Psalme.

Verba mea auribus.

To hym that excelleth in songes of musycke a psalme of Dauyd.

POnder my wordes O Lord consyder my medytacyon. O herken thou vnto ꝯ voice of my calling my kynge and my God: for vnto the wyll I make my prayer. My voyce shalte thou heare betymes O Lorde: early in the mornyng wyll I dyrect my prayer vnto the, and wyll loke vp. * For thou art the God that hath no pleasure in wickednes neither shal any euel dwel with the. Such as be folysche shall not stande in thy syght: thou hatest all them that worke vanyte. Thou shalt destroye them that speake leasynge: the lorde wyll abhorre both the bloudthirsty & disceatful man. But as for me I wyll come into thy house euen vpon the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy feare wyll * I worshyppe toward thy holy temple. Lead me O lorde, in thy righteousnes because of myne enemies: make thy waye plaine before my face. For there is no stedfastnesse in hys mouth: their inwarde partes are verye wyckednes. * Their throte is an open sepulchre: they flatter with their tonge. Destroye thou the O God let them perish through their owne ymaginacions cast the out in the multitude of their vngodlinesse: for they haue rebelled against thee. And let all them ꝯ put their trust in the, reioyce: they shal euer be geuing of thākes, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shalbe ioyfull in thee.

For thou lorde wylte geue thy blessyng vnto the righteous: and with thy fauourable kyndnes wylt thou defende hym, as with a shilde.

The.vi.Psalme.

Domine ne.

To hym ꝯ excelleth in musike, vpon the instrument of eyght stringes. A Psalme of Dauid.

DLorde, * rebuke me not in thine indignacion: neither chasten me in thy displeasure. Haue mercy vpon me O lorde, for I am weake: O lorde heale me, for my bones are vexed. My soule also is sore troubled: But lorde howe longe wilt thou punyshe me? Turne the O lorde and delyuer my soule: Oh saue me for thy mercies sake. * For in death no man remembreth thee: & who will geue the thākes in the ꝑpt? I am wearye of my grouynge, euery nyght wash I my bed, and water my couche with my teares. My beutye is gone for very trouble, and worne away because of all myne enemies. * Awaye fro me al ye that worke vanitie: for the lorde hath heard the voyce of my weppynge. The lorde hathe heard my petycion, the lorde will receiue my prayer. All mine enemies shalbe confoũded & sore vexed: they shalbe turned backe and put to shame sodenly.

The.vii.Psalme.

Domine Deus meus.

Sygaion of Dauid whiche he sange vnto the lorde in the busynes of Chus, the sonne of Jemini.

DLorde my God, in the haue I put my trust: saue me fro all them that persecute me & deliuer me. Least he deuoure my soule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peaces: whyle there is none to helpe. Oh lorde my God, * if I haue done any suche thyng, or yf there be any wickednesse in my handes. Yf I haue rewarded euill vnto hym ꝯ dealt frendly with me: yea, I haue delyuered hym, that without any cause is myne enemie. For thou hast mayntayned my right & my cause: thou art set in the trone ꝑ iudgest right. Thou hast rebuked the Heathen, and destroyed the vngodly, thou hast put out their name for euer and euer. O thou enemy, destructiõs are come to a perpetuall ende: euen as the cyties whiche thou hast destroyed, their memoriall is perysshed with the. But the Lord shall endure for euer, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgemẽt. For he shal iudge the worlde in righteousnes, and mynistre true iudgement vnto the people. Vt quid Domine.

WHy standest thou so farre of (O Lord) and hydest thy face in that needful time of trouble? The vngodlye for his owne lust doth persecute the poore: let them be take in the crafty wilynes that they haue ymagined. For the vngodly hath made boast of his owne hertes delyre, and speketh good of the couetous, whome God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, neyther is God in al his thoughtes. His wayes are alwaye greuous, thy iudgementes are farre aboue out of his sight, and therfore defyeth he all his enemyes. For he hath sayed in his herte: tushe I shall neuer bee caste downe, there shall no harme happen vnto me. * His mouthe is full of cursyng, and dissayte and fraude: vnder his tongue is vngodlynes & vanitie. * He syteth lurkyng in the tushe corners of the stretes, and priuely in his lurkyng dens doeth he murther the innocent, his eyes are set agaynst the poore.

For he lyeth waytyng secretly (euen as a Lyon lurketh he in his denne) that he may rauishe the poore. He doeth rauishe the poore when he getteth hym into his net.

He falleth downe and humbleth himselfe, that the congregacion of the poore may fall into the hand of his captaynes. He hath sayed in his heart: tushe god hath forgotte,

So shal he heare my voyce out of his (holy) temple, & my cōplaynt shall come before him, it shal entre euē into his eares. *The earth trembled and quaked, the very foundacions also of the hilles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. There wēt a smoke out in his presence: & a consuming fyre out of his mouthe, so that coales were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauens also, and came downe, & it was darke vnder his feete. He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye: he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darkenesse his secrete place: his pauilion roundē about him with darke water & thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightenesse of his presence his cloudes remoued: hailestones and coales of fyre. The lord also thōdered out of ℔ heauē, & the hyest gaue his thōdre, haylestones & coales of fyre. He sent out his arowes & scattered them, he cast forthe lightninges, & destroyed them. He shal send down frō the heigth to fetche me, and shal take me out of many waters. He shal deliuer me frō my strōgest enemy, & from thē whiche hate me: for they are to mighty for me. They preuented me in the daye of my trouble: but the lord was my vpholder. He brought me forth also in to a place of liberty: he brought me forthe, euen because he had a fauour vnto me.

The lord shall rewarde me after my righteous dealing: accordyng to the clēnes of my hādes shal he recōpēce me. Because I haue kept the wayes of ℔ lorde: & haue not forsaken my god as the wicked doth. For I haue an eye vnto al his lawes: & wil not cast out his cōmaūdemēts fro me. I was also vncorrupt before him: and eschued myne own wickednes. He teacheth myne handes to fyghte, and myne armes shall breake euen a bowe of stele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy righthand also shal hold me vp, & thy louing correccio shal make me great. Thou shalt make roume ynough vnder me for to go ℔ my footesteps shal not slide. I wyl folow vpon myne enemyes, & ouertake them: neither wil I turne agayn till I haue destroyed them. I wil smyte the, that they shal not be able to stande: but fal vnder my feete. Thou haste gyrded me wt strengthe vnto the battayle, thou shalt throwe downe myne enemyes vnder me. Thou hast made myne enemies also to turne their backes vpon me, & I shal destroye thē that hate me.

*They shal crye, but there shalbe none to helpe them: yea, euen vnto the Lorde shall they crye, but he shall not heare them. I will beate them as smal as the duste before the wynde, I wil caste them out as the claye in ℔ stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me frō the stryuinges of the people: & thou shalt make me the heade of the Heathē. A people whō I haue not knowen, shal serue me. yet vpon my mothers breastes. I haue bene left vnto thee euer synce I was borne:
thou art my god euē frō my mothers wōbe.
C O go not fro me, for trouble is harde at hand & there is none to helpe me. Many oxen are come about me, fat bulles of Basā close me in on euery syde. They gape vpō me with theyr mouthes as it were a rāping Iosu.7.b & roaryng lyon. * I am poured oute lyke heart also in the myddest of my body is eue like melting ware. My strēgthe is dryed vp lyke a potsherd, & my tong cleueth to my bout me: & the counsayle of the wicked laye starying & lokyng vpon me. * They parte my garmentes among them, and cast lottes vpon my vesture. But be not thou farre to helpe me. Delyuer my soule from the E swearde, my dearling from the power of the dogge. Saue me from the lyons mouthe:

F abhorred the lowe estate of ꝑ poore: he hath not hid his face frō him, but when he called vnto hym, he heard him. My prayse is of thee, in the great congregacion: my vowes wyll I perfourme in the syght of them that feare hym. The poore shal eate, & be satisfied: they ꝑ seke after ꝑ lord shal prayse him, world shal remēbre themselues, & be turned shal worshyp before him. For ꝑ kingdō is G the lordes, & he is the gouernour among the people. Al such as be fat vpō earth, haue eaten & worshipped. Al they ꝑ go down into the dust, shal kneele before him: & no mā hath quickned his own soule. (My) seed shal serue declare his righteousnes vnto a people that shalbe borne, whom the Lord hath made.

I Wyll magnifie thee, O lorde, for thou

And in my prosperitie I sayde, I shal neuer be remoued: thou lorde of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyl so strong. Thou C dyddeste turne thy face (fro me) and I was set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O lorde, for I am in trouble: and mine eye is consumed for very heuines, yea my soule and my bodye. For my lyfe is waxen olde with heuines, and my yeares with mourning. My strength faileth me because of myne iniquitie: and my bones are corrupte. I became a reproche among all mine enemyes, but specially among my neighbours, and they of mine acquaintaūce were afrayde of me: and they that did see me without, cōueyed thē selues fro me. I am cleane forgotten, as a dead manne oute of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

For I haue hearde the blasphemye of ꝑ multitude: & feare is on euery side, while they conspire together against me, and take theyr counsayle to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope hath ben in thee, O lorde, I haue said: thou art my God. My time is in thy hand, delyuer me frō the hande of myne enemyes, & from them that persecute me.

Shewe thy seruaunte the lyght of thy cōtenaunce, & saue me for thy mercies sake.

Let me not be confounded, O lorde, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodly bee put to confusiō, & be put to silence in ꝑ graue.

Let the lying lyppes be put to silēce, which cruelly, dysdaynfully, & despitefullye speake agaynst the ryghteous. O howe plentyfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast layed vp for them that feare the: & that thou hast prepared for thē, that put theyr trust in thee, euen before the sonnes of men. Thou shalt hyde them priuely by thyne owne presence, from ꝑ prouokinges of al men: ꝑ shalt kepe them secretelye in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tongues. Thankes be to ꝑ lorde: for he hath shewed me meruailous greate kindnesse in a strong cytye. And when I made haste, I sayde: I am cast out of the syght of thine eies. Neuertheles, thou heardest ꝑ voyce of my praier when I cried vnto thee. O loue the lorde, al ye his sayntes: for the lorde preserueth them that are faythfull, & plenteously rewardeth he ꝑ proude doer. *Be strong, and he shal stablish youre hearte, all ye that put your trust in the lorde.

They gaped vpon me with their mouthes, and ſayed: fye on thee fye on thee: we did ſee it with oure eyes. This thou haſt ſene, O Lorde: hold not thy tongue then, go not farre fro me, O Lorde. Awake & ſtande vp to iudge my quarel, auenge thou my cauſe, my god, and my Lorde. Judge me, O Lorde my God, accordyng to thy righteouſneſſe, & let them not tryumphe ouer me. ¶ To the chaunter of Dauid the ſeruaunte of the Lorde.

MY heart ſheweth me ꝓ wickednes of the vngodlye, that * there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flattereth hymſelfe in his owne ſight, tyll his abhominable ſynne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vnrighteous and ful of diſceite: he hath left of to behaue himſelf wyſely, and to doe good. He ymagineth myſchiefe vpon his bed, and hath ſet himſelfe in no good waye, neither doeth he abhorre any thyng that is euyll. Thy mercye O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faythfulneſſe vnto the cloudes. Thy righteouſneſſe ſtandeth like the ſtrong mountaynes: thy iudgementes are lyke the great depe. Thou Lord ſhalt ſaue both man and beaſt. How excellent is thy mercy O God: and the chyldren of mē ſhall put theyr truſt vnder the ſhadowe of thy wynges. They ſhalbe ſatisfyed with the plenteouſneſſe of thy houſe, & thou ſhalt gyue them drynke of thy pleaſures, as out of the ryuer. For with thee is the well of lyfe, and in thy light ſhall we ſe light. O continue forthe thy louyng kyndneſſe vnto them that knowe thee, & thy righteouſneſſe vnto them that are true of hearte. O lette not the foote of pryde come againſte me: & let not the hande of the vngodlye caſte me downe. There are they fallen (all) that worke wickednelle: they are caſt downe, and ſhall not be hable to ſtande.

FRet not thy ſelfe bycauſe of the vngodlye: neyther be thou enuyous againſt the euyl doers. For they ſhal ſoone be cut downe like the graſſe, & be wythered euen as the greene herbe. Care my prayer (O God) and hyde not thy ſelfe fro my peticion. Take hede vnto me, and heare me, howe I mourne in my prayer, & am vexed. The enemie crieth ſo, and the vngodly commeth on ſo faſte: for they are mynded to dooe me ſome miſchefe, ſo malicyouſly are they ſet agaynſte me. My hearte is diſquyeted within me, and the feare of deathe is falle vpon me. Fearefulneſſe and trembling are come vpō me, & an horrible drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I ſayde: O that I had wynges lyke a doue, for then woulde I flye away, and be at reſte. Lo, then woulde I get me awaye farre of, and remayne in the wildernelle. Sela. Poure out thyne indignacion vpon the, and let thy wrathfull diſpleaſure take hold of them. *Let their habitacion be voide, and no man to dwel in their tentes. O God, wherefore art thou abſent from vs ſo longe? why is thy wrathe ſo hote againſt the ſheepe of thy paſture? O thynke vpon thy congregacion, whom thou haſt purchaced and redemed of olde.

Thynke vpon the tribe of thyne enheritaunce, and mounte Syon wherein thou haſt dwelt. Lyft vp thy feete, that thou mayeſt vtterly deſtroye euery enemy, whiche hath done euyll in the Sanctuarye. Thyne aduerſaryes roore in the myddes of thy congregacions: and ſette vp theyr banners for tokens. He that hewed tymbre afore out of the thyck trees, was knowen to bryng it to an excellent worke. But nowe they breake downe all the carued worke thereof, with axes and hammers. *They haue ſet fyre vpon thy holye places, and haue defyled the dwellyng place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde. Yea, they ſayde in theyr hertes, lette vs make hauocke of them altogether: thus haue they brente vp all the houſes of God in the lande. Why wythdraweſt thou thy hande? why pluckeſt thou not thy ryghte hande oute of thy boſome, to conſume the enemye?

For God is my kyng of olde: the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doeth it hymſelfe. *Thou dyddeſt deuyde the ſea thorowe thy power: thou brakeſte the headdes of the dragons in the waters. Thou ſmoteſt the headdes of *Leuiathan in peces, and gaueſt him to bee meate for the people in wildernes.

Thou broughteſt out fountaines and waters oute of the harde rockes: thou dryedſte vp myghtye waters. The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne: thou haſte prepared the lyght and the ſunne. To the chaunter for Ieduthun, a pſalme of Aſaph.

1 I * Wyll crye vnto God with my voyce, euen a vnto God wyll I crye with my voyce: and he ſhall herken vnto me. 2 In the tyme of my trouble, I ſought the Lorde: my ſoore ranne and ceaſed not in the nyght ſeaſon: my ſoule refuſed comfort. 3 When I am in heauynelle, I wil thynke vpon god, when my herte is vexed I wil complaine. Sela. Thou holdeſt mine eyes wakyng: I am ſo feble, that I cannot ſpeake. 4 I haue conſydred the dayes
B of olde, and the yeares that are paſte. 5 I call to remembraunce my ſonge: and in the nyght I commune wyth myne owne herte, and ſearche out my ſpirites. 6 Wyll the Lorde abſente hymſelfe for euer? And wyll he be nomore intreated. 7 Is hys mercy cleane gone for euer? And is hys promyſe come vtterlye to an ende for euermore? 8 Hathe God forgotten to bee gracious? And wyll he ſhutte vp his louyng kyndneſſe in diſpleaſure? Sela. 9 And I ſayde: It is myne owne infyrmitie: But I wyll remembre the yeares of the ryght hande of C the moſte hyeſt. 10 I wyll remembre the worckes of the Lorde, and * call to mynde a Pſa. thy wonders of olde tyme. 11 I wyll thynke alſo of all thy worckes, and my talkyng ſhall be of thy doynges. 12 Thy waye, O God, is holy: who is ſo great a God as (our) God. 13 Thou arte the God that doeth wonders, and haſte declared thy power among people. 14 Thou haſte myghtely deliuered thy people, euen the D ſonnes of Iacob and Ioſeph. Sela. 15 The waters ſawe thee, O God, the waters ſawe thee and were afrayed: the depthes alſo were troubled. 16 The cloudes poured out water, the ayre thundred: and thyne arowes went abrode. 17 The voyce of thy thonder was heard rounde about, the lyghtenynges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued & shoke with all. Thy waye is in the sea, and thy pathes in the greate waters: and thy lore steppes are not knowen. Thou leddeste thy people lyke sheepe, by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

Attendite populę meus.

An instruccion of Aſaph.

HEare my law, O my people, encline your eares vnto ỹ wordes of my mouth. * I wyll open my mouthe in a parable, I wil declare harde sentences of olde.

Whiche we haue heard & knowen: and* such as our fathers haue told vs. That we should not hide thẽ from the children of ỹ generations to come: but to shewe ỹ honor of ỹ Lord, his might, and wonderfull workes ỹ he hath done. He made a couenaunt with Jacob, and gaue Iſrael a lawe* which he commaunded our forefathers to teache their children. That their posteritye might know it, and the children whiche were yet vnborne. To thintente that when they came vp, they might shew their children the same. That they might putte their truste in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe his commaundementes. And not to be *as their forefathers: a fayntheleſſe and stubburne generacion: a generacion that sette not their hearte aryghte and whose spirite cleaued not stedfastely vnto God.

Like as the children of Ephraim, which beyng harneſſed and carying bowes, turned themselues backe in the daye of battayle. They kepte not the couenaunte of God, and wouldē not walke in his law.

But forgat what he hadde done, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde shewed for them. Meruailous thinges dyd he in the syghte of oure fathers in the land of Egypt, euen in the fyelde of Zoan.

*He deuyded the sea, and lette them goe throughe: he made the waters to stand on an heape. * In the daye tyme also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyghte through with a lyght of fyer. He claue the harde * rockes in the wyldernesse, and gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene oute of the greate depth. He broughte waters out of the* stonye roche, so that it gushed out like ỹ riuers. Yet for all this, they synned more againste hym, and prouoked the moste hyeste in the wyldernesse.

They tempted God in their heartes: ¶ and required meate for their lust. They spake agaynst God also, saying: shal God prepare a *table in the wildernesse? He smote the stony roche in dede, that the water gushed out, and the streames flowed withall: but can he geue bread also, or prouyde flesche for his people? When the Lorde heard this, he was wroth: so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and there came vp heauye displeasure againste Iſrael. Exo.16.b. Numb.b

Because thei beleued not in god, and put not their truste in his helpe. So he cõmaunded the cloudes above, and opened the doores of heauen. He rayned down Manna also vpon them for to eate, and gaue them *foode from heauẽ. So mã dyd eate Angels foode, for he sente them meate ynough. He caused ỹ East wind to blowe vnder the heauen, and throughe his power he broughte in the southweste wynd. *He rayned flesche vpon them as thycke as duste, and fetherred foules lyke as the sande of the sea. He lette it fall among their tentes, euen round about their habytacyon. So they dydde eate and were well fylled: for he gaue them their owne desyre. They were not dysapoynted of their lust. *But while the meat was yet in their mouthes, the heauye wrath of God came vpon them, and slewe the wichiest of them: yea and smote downe the chosen menne that were in Iſrael. Exo.16.b. Deu.8.a. Sap.16.b. Iohn.6.b Exo.16.b. Num.11.g D Num.11.g

*But for all this, they synned yet more: and beleued not his wonderous workes. Nu.14.a

Therefore their dayes dyd he consume in vanytye, and their yeares in trouble. *When he slewe them, they sought him: and turned them earlye, and enquyred after God. And they remembred that God was their strengthe, and that the hyghe God was their redemer. Neuertheleſſe, they dyd but flatter hym with their mouthe, and dyssembled wyth hym in their tounge. For their heart was not whole wyth hym, neyther continued they stedfaste in his couenaunte. But he was so mercifull, that he forgaue their misdedes, and destroyed them not. Yea, manye a tyme turned he his wrathe away, and would not suffer his whole displeasure to aryse. *For he considered ỹ they were but flesche, and that they were euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cõmeth not agayne. Manye a tyme dyd Num.11.g 1.Cor.10.a Pſal.xcviij.a them wythin the borders of hys Sanctheyr lande to be deuided among them for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israell to dwel in their tentes. So they tempted and displeased the most hye God, and kept not his testimonies. But turned theyr backes, and fell awaye lyke theyr fore-fathers: starting aside, like a broken bowe.

For they greued hym with their hyll alters, & prouoked hym to displeasure with theyr images. When God heard this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israel. So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen the tent that he hadde pitched among menne. He deliuered their power into captyuitye, and theyr beautye into the enemyes hande. He gaue hys people ouer also into the swearde, & was wrothe wyth his enheritaunce. The fyre consumed theyr younge menne: and theyr maydens were not geuen to mary-age. Theyr prieste were slayne with the sweard, and there were no widdowes to make lamentacyon. So the Lorde awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a giaunte refreshed with wyne. *He smote 1.Reg.4. his enemies in the hynder partes, and putte them to a perpetuall shame. He refused the Tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the trybe of Ephraim. *But chose ps.77.c the trybe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon whiche he loued. And there he builded his temple on hye, and layed the foundacyon of it, lyke the grounde whiche he hathe made continuallye. *He chose Dauid 1.Reg. also hys seruaunte, and tooke hym awaye from the shepefoldes. As he was fo-lowyng the ewes greate wyth yong ones he tooke hym: that he myghte feede Jacob hys people, and Israell hys inherytaunce. So he fed them wyth a fayth-full and true hearte, and ruled them prudentelye wyth all hys power.

Domine refugium.

A prayer of Moſes the man of God.

LOrde, thou hast beene oure refuge from one generation to an other.

Before the mountaynes were brought forthe, or euer the earth and the worlde were made, thou arte God from euerlasting and worlde without ende. Thou turnest manne to deſtruction: Agayn thou sayest, come ageyne ye children of menne. * For a thouſand yeres in thy ſight are but as yesterdaye, seeing that is paſte as a watche in the nyghte. As soone as thou scatterest them, they are euē as a slepe, and fade away ſodenly like the grasse. In the morning it is greene & groweth vp, but in ꝑ euening it is cut downe (wyth ꝑ) & withered. For we conſume away in thy diſpleasure, & are afraid at thy wrathful indignation. Thou hast ſet our myſdedes before thee, & our secret ſinnes in the light of thy countenance. For when thou art angrye, al our dayes are gone: we bring our yeres to an ende, as it were a tale ꝑ is tolde. The dayes of our age are thre ſcore yeres & x. & though men be ſo ſtrōg ꝑ they come to four ſcore yeres, yet is their strength then but labour & ſorow, ſo ſoone paſſeth it away, & we are gone. But who regardeth ꝑ power of thy wrath, for euē thereafter as a man feareth, ſo is thy diſpleasure. * O teach vs to number our dayes, ꝑ we may applye our hertes vnto wiſedom. Turne thee agayn (O lord) at the laſt, & be gracious vnto thy ſeruantes. O ſatisfy vs with thy mercy, & that ſone, ſo shal we reioyce and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfort vs again now after the time that thou hast plaged vs, & for the yeres wherein we haue ſuffered aduerſity.

Shew thy ſeruauntes thy worke, and their children thy glory. And the glorious maieſty of the Lorde our God be vpon vs: proſper thou the worke of our handes vpon vs, O proſper thou oure handy worke.

I *T is a good thing to geue thankes Deut.11.a vnto the lorde, and to synge prayses vnto thy name, O most hiest. To tell of thy louing kyndnesse early in the morgnyng, and of thy trueth in the nyghte season. Vpon an instrument of tenne stringes and vpon the lute: vpon a loude instrumente and vpon the harpe. For thou Lorde hast made me gladde thorowe thy workes, and I will reioyce in geuyng prayse for the operacyons of thy handes. O Lord how glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are verye deepe. An vnwyse manne doth not wel considre thys, and a foole doeth not vnderstande it. When the vngodlye are greene as the grasse, and when all the workers of wickednesse doo florysshe, then shall they bee destroyed for euer. But thou lord arte the moste hyeste for euermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lorde, lo thyne enemyes shall perysshe, and all the workers of wickednesse shalbe destroyed. But my horne shalbe exalted, lyke the horne of an Vnycorne, for I am anoynted with fresshe oyle. Myne eye also shal see hys lust of mine enemyes, and myne eare shall heare hys desyre of the wicked that rise vp against me. The righteous shall florysshe lyke a palme tree, and shall spreade a broade lyke a Cedre in Libanus. Such as be planted in the house of the Lorde shall florysshe, in the courtes (of the house) of our God. They shall also bryng furth more fruite in their age, and shalbe fatte and well lyking. That they may shewe howe true the Lord my strength is, and that there is no vnrighteousnes in hym.

Myne enemies revyle me all the daye long: and they that are mad vpon me, are swome together agaynst me. For I have eaten ashes as it were bread, and mingled my drinke with wepyng. And that because of thyne indignation and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me downe.

Thou shalt aryse and have mercy vpon Sion, for it is time that thou have mercy vpon her, yea the time is come. And why: thy servauntes thynke vpon her stones, and it pitieth them to see her in the dust. The Heathen shal feare thy name O lord, and al the kinges of the erth thy maiestie. That they maye declare the name of the lord in Sion, and his worshipp at Jerusalē. Whē the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms also to serue the lord.

Blessed

I Blessed * are those that be vndefiled in Psal. i. the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lord. Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, & seke him wt their whole heart.
For they which do no wickednesse, walke in his wayes. Thou hast charged that we shal diligently kepe thy commaundementes.
O that my wayes were made so directe, that I might kepe thy statutes. So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes. I wyll thanke thee, with an vnfayned heart, when I shal haue learned the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse. I wyll kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not vtterly. Where-2 withall shall a younge manne cleanse his waye? Euen by rulyng hymselfe after thy worde. With my whole heart haue I soughte thee: O lette me not go wrong Psal. 118. b out of thy commaundementes. * Thy wordes haue I hydde within myne heart, that I shoulde not synne agaynste thee.
Blessed arte thou O Lorde, O teache me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I been tellynge of all the iudgementes of thy mouthe. I haue hadde as great de-lyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all manner of rychesse. I wyl talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respecte vnto thy wayes. My delyte shalbe in thy statutes: and I wyll not forget thy worde.
C O do well vnto thy seruaunte, that I maye lyue and kepe thy worde. Open thou myne eyes, that I maye se the wonde-Psal. 47. f rous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a Psal. 38. b straunger vpon earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes fro me. My soule breaketh out for the verye feruente desyre that it hathe alwaye vnto thy iudgementes.
Thou hast rebuked the proude, and cursed are they that do erre from thy commaũ-dementes. O turne fro me shame and rebuke: for I haue kepte thy testimonies.
Princes also dydde sytte and speake a-gaynste me, but thy seruaunte is occupyed Psal. 44. b in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are D my delyte and my counseylers. * My soule cleaueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordynge to thy worde. I haue knoweledged my wayes, and thou heardest me: O teache me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous woorkes. My soule mel-teth alwaye for verye heuynesse, comforte thou me accordynge vnto thy worde.
Take fro me the waye of lying, and cause thou me to make muche of thy lawe. I haue chosen the way of truthe: & thy iudgementes haue I layed before me. I haue stycken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde con-founde me not. I wyll runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast sette my hearte at lyberte. E Teache me, O Lorde, the waye of thy statutes: and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Syue me vnderstandyng, and I shall kepe thy lawe:
yea, I shall kepe it with my whole hearte.
Make me to go in the pathe of thy commaundementes: for therein is my desyre.
Encline my hearte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousenes. O turne away myne eyes, lest they beholde vanitie: and quicken thou me in thy waye. O stablishe thy worde in thy seruaunte, that I may feare thee. Take awaye the rebuke that I am afrayed of: for thy iudgementes are good.
Beholde, my delyte is in thy commaunde-mentes: O quicke me in thy righteousnes. F Let thy louing mercy come also vnto me, O Lorde: euē thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy worde. So shall I make answere vnto my blasphemers: for my trust is in thy worde. O take not the worde of truth vtterly out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I alway kepe thy lawe: yea, for euer and euer. And I wil walke at lyberte, for I seke thy cōmaunde-mentes. I wyll speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges: & wyl not be ashamed. And my delyte shalbe in thy cōmaũ-dementes which I haue loued. My hādes also will I lyfte vp vnto thy commaundemētes which I haue loued: & my study shal be in thy statutes. O thynke vpon thy ser- G uaunt as cōcernyng thy word, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust. The same is my comforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me exceadynglye in derision, yet haue I not shrynked from thy lawe. For I remem-bred thyne euerlasting iudgementes, O Lorde: and receyued comforte. I am horrible afrayed for the vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue been my songes in the house of my pylgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lorde in the night season: and haue kept thy lawe.
This I hadde, because I kepte thy commaundementes. * Thou art my portion, mm, 18. c O lorde: I haue promysed to kepe thy lawe. H I made myne humble peticion in thy presence with my whole hearte: O be mercyfull vnto me accordyng vnto thy worde.

I cal myne owne wayes to remembrance, and turne my feete vnto thy testimonies. I made haste, & prológed not the time to kepe thy cómaundemétes. The cógregacós of ꝑ vngodlye haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotten thy lawe. At midnight wyll I ryse to gyue thankes vnto thee: because of thy righteous iudgementes. I am a companion of all them that feare thee: and kepe Psal.xv.a thy commaundementes. * The earthe O lord, is full of thy mercye: O teache me thy
I statutes. O lorde thou haste dealte graciously with thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy worde. O learne me true vnderstandyng, & knowlege: for I haue beleued thy cómaudemétes. Before I was troubled I went wrong: but now haue I kept thy worde.
Matth.19.c * Thou art good and gracious: O teache me thy statutes. The proude haue ymagyned a lye agaynst me, but I wyl kepe thy commaundementes with my whole heart.

Their heart is as fat as brawne, but my delite hath been in thy lawe. It is good for me ꝑ I haue been in trouble, ꝑ I maye learne thy statutes. The law of thy mouth is dearer vnto me, then thousandes of gold K and syluer. * Thy handes haue made me
Gene.1.d and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstan-Iob.10.a dyng, that I maye learne thy commaundementes. They that feare thee will be glad whe they se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O lorde, that thy iudgementes are right, & that thou of verye faythfulnes hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercyfull kyndnes be my comforte, accordyng to thy worde vnto thy seruaunt. O let thy louing mercyes come vnto me, that I maye lyue: for thy lawe is my delyte. Let ꝑ proude be confounded, for they go wickedly about to destroye me: but I wil be occupied in thy cómaundementes.

Let suche as feare thee, & haue knowé thy testimonies, be turned vnto me. O let mine heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not
L ashamed. * My soule hath longed for thy saluation: and I haue a good hope, because of thy worde. Myne eyes long sore for thy word, saying: O when wylt thou cómforte me? For I am become lyke a bottle in the smoke: yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaunte whe wilt thou be auenged of them that persecute me? The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whiche are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundementes are true, they persecute me falsly: O be thou my helpe.

They had almoost made and ende of me vpon earth: But I forsoke not thy cómaundementes. O quicken me after thy louing kindnes, and so shal I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth. O lord, thy worde endureth M for euer in heauen. * Thy trueth also re- Psa.40.a

thou hast layd the foundacion of the earth, and it abideth. They continue this daye, accordyng to thyne ordinaunce: for all thynges serue thee. If my delyte had not been in thy lawe, I should haue perished in my trouble. I wyll neuer forget thy commaundemétes, for with thé thou hast quickened me. I am thine, Oh saue me: for I haue sought thy commaundementes. The vngodly layed wayte for me to destroy me: but I wyll consydre thy testimonies. I se that al thynges come to an ende: but thy cómaundemente is exceadyng broade. (Lorde)
N What loue haue I vnto thy lawe? all the daye long is my study in it. Thou, thorowe thy commaundementes, haste made me wyser then myne enemyes, for they are euer with me. I haue more vnderstandyng then my teachers: for thy testimonies are my studye. I am wyser then the aged: because I kept thy cómaundementes.

I haue refrayned my feete from euerye euill waye, that I maye kepe thy worde.

I haue not shunked from thy iudgementes: for thou teacheste me. O howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte? Yea, sweter then honye vnto my mouthe.
Thorowe thy commaundementes I gette vnderstandyng, therfore I hate all wicked wayes. * Thy worde is a lanterne vn- O

I haue sworne, and am stedfastly purposed to kepe thy righteous iudgementes.

I am troubled aboue measure: quyeken me, O Lord accordyng vnto thy word.

The vngodlye haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of myne hearte.

I haue applyed myne hearte to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye: euen vnto the ende.

I hate them that ymagine euill thynges, ꝑ but thy lawe do I loue. Thou arte my defence and shylde, and my truste is in thy worde.

awaye fro me ye wycked, I wyll kepe the commaundementes of my God. O ſtablyſh me accordyng vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and lette me not be dyſapoynted of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I ſhalbe ſafe: yea my delyte ſhall euer be in thy ſtatutes. Thou haſte troden downe all them that departe from thy ſtatutes, for they ymagine but diſceyte. Thou putteſt awaye all the vngodlye of the earthe lyke droſſe: therfore I loue thy teſtimõyes. My fleſhe trembleth for feare of the: and I am afrayed of thy iudgemẽtes. I deale with the thyng that is lawful and righte: O gyue me not ouer vnto myne oppreſſours.

Make thou thy ſeruaunt to delyte in that whyche is good: that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are waſted awaye wyth lokynge for thy healthe, and for the worde of thy righteouſneſſe. O deale with thy ſeruaũt accordyng vnto thy louyng mercye: and teache me thy ſtatutes. I am thy ſeruaunt, O graunte me vnderſtandyng, that I maye knowe thy teſtymonies. It is tyme for ther Lorde to laye to thyne hande, for they haue deſtroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde & precious ſtone. Therfore holde I ſtreyghte all thy commaundementes and all falſe wayes I vtterly abhorre. Thy teſtimonyes are wonderful: therfore dothe my ſoule kepe them. When thy worde goeth forth, it geueth lyght and vnderſtandyng, euen vnto the ſymple. I opened my mouth and drue in my breath, for my delyte was in thy commaundementes. O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyfull vnto me: as thou vſeſt to doe vnto thoſe that loue thy name. Ordre my ſteppes in thy worde: and ſo ſhall no wyckednelle haue dominõ ouer me. O delyuer me from the wrongefull dealynges of men, and ſo ſhall I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the light of thy countenaunce vpon thy ſeruaunt, and teache me thy ſtatutes. Myne eyes guſh out wyth water, becauſe men kepe not thy lawe. Ryghteous art thou, O Lorde: and true is thy iudgemente. The teſtimonyes that thou haſte commaunded, are exceadyng ryghteous and true. *My zeale hath euen conſumed me, becauſe myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes. ‡ Thy worde is tryed to the vttermoſte: and thy ſeruaunt loueth it. I am ſmall, and of no reputacõ: yet do not I forget thy commaũdemẽtes. Thy ryghteouſneſſe is an euerlaſting righteouſneſſe: & thy lawe is ‡ trueth.

Trouble and heuyneſſe haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my delyte in thy commaundementes. The ryghteouſneſſe of thy teſtimonies is euerlaſtyng: O graunte me vnderſtandyng, and I ſhall lyue. Early in the morꝛyng do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my truſt. Myne eyes preuente the nyghte watches, ‡ I myghte be occupyed in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndneſſe: quicken me accordyng as thou art wont. They drawe nye ‡ of malyce perſecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lorde: for all thy commaundementes are true. As concernyng thy teſtymonyes, I haue knowen longe ſyns, that thou haſte grounded them for euer. O conſyder myne aduerſitye, and delyuer me: for I do not forget thy lawe. Auenge thou my cauſe, and delyuer me: quycken me accordynge vnto thy worde. Healthe is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy ſtatutes. Greate is thy mercy, O Lorde: quycke me as thou art wont. Great is the peace that they haue whyche loue thy lawe, & they are not offended at it. Lorde I haue loked for thy ſauyng health, and done after thy commaundementes. Let my complaynt come before the, O Lorde: gyue me vnderſtandynge, accordynge vnto thy worde.

The Prouerbes of Salomon.

The fyrst Chapter.

The prayse of wysdome. We maye not herken vnto the voluptuous prouocation and intisinges of synners. Wisedome complayneth her to be despised of all men, and prophecyeth destruction vnto her despysers.

THe Prouerbes of Salomon the sone of Dauid kyng of Israel: to learne wysedome, & to perceyue the instruccio, & to perceyue þ wordes of vnderstanding: and therby to receyue prudence, rightcousenesse, iudgement & equitie. That the very symple might haue wytte & that þ yong me might haue knowledge & true vnderstandyng. By hearing þ wyse m̄ shal come by more wisedom: & he þ is indued w vnderstāding shal obtayne wytte to perceyue a parable, and þ interpretacio therof, the wordes of the wise, & the darke speaches of the same. * The feare of the Lord is the beginnyng of wysdome. But foles despise wisdome and instruction. My sonne heare thy fathers doctrine, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shall bryng grace vnto thy heade and shall be as a chayne about thy necke. My sonne cōsent not vnto synners yf they entyse thee, and saye: come with vs, we will laye wayte for bloude and lurke priuely for the innocent without a cause: we shal * swalowe the vp lyke the hell and deuoure them quick & whole as those that go downe into the pyt. So shal we fynde al maner of costly riches, & fyll oure houses with spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs: & let vs haue al one purse. My sonne walke not thou with them: refrayne thy foote from their way. For * their feete runne to euel: and are hastye to shed bloude. But in vayne is the net layed forth before the byrdes eyes yea they them selues laye wayte one for anothers bloud, and one of them wolde slay another. These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous, the one wolde rauyshe anothers lyfe. * Wisdome cryeth without and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorowe the cytie, saying: O ye childre howe long wyl ye loue childishnesse howe lōg wil þ skorners delite in scorninge, and þ vnwise be enemies vnto knowledge? O turne you vnto my correction: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, and no man regarded it: but all my counsels haue ye despysed: and set my correccyon at nought. Therfore shal I also laugh in your destruccion, and mocke you when that thyng that ye feare cōmeth vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye be afrayde of falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, and your misery lyke a tempeste: yea, when trouble and heauynes commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge, and receyued not þ feare of the Lorde: but abhorred my counsell and despysed al my correccion. Therfore shall they eate the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with their owne inuencions, for the turnyng awaye of the vnwyse shal slaye them: and the prosperitie of fooles shall be their owne destruccion. * But whoso harkeneth vnto me shall dwell safely, and be sure from any feare of euell.

The .ii. Chapter.

Wysedome is to be embraced and set by. And an aduouterous woman is to be eschued.

MY sonne yf thou wylt receiue my wordes and kepe my commaundementes by thee, that thou wilt enclyne thyne eare vnto wysdome, applye thyne hearte then to vnderstandyng. For yf thou cryeste after wysdome, and callest for knoweledge: yf thou seketest after her as after money, and byggest for her as for treasure: then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knoweledge of God. * For it is the Lorde that geueth wysedome, oute of his mouthe commeth knoweledge and vnderstanding. He hydeth vp health for the righteous. He preserueth the welfare of the righteous & defendeth them that walke sincerely: he kepeth them in the right pathe, and preserueth the waye of suche as serue him with godlynes. Then shalt thou vnderstande righteousnesse, iudgement, and equitie: yea & euery good pathe. Yf wysedom entre into thine heart, and thy soule delite in knowledge: the shall counsel preserue thee, & vnderstandyng shal kepe the. That thou mayest be holpen from the euyll ware, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges. From such as leaue ꝯ hye strete, & walke in the wayes of darknesse: whyche reioyce in doynge euell, and delyte in wycked thynges: whose wayes are croked, and they frowarde in theyr pathes.

and

That thou mayst be delyuered also * from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thyne owne: which geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunte of her God. For her house is enclyned vnto deathe, and her pathes vnto hell. All they that goe in vnto her come not agayne, neyther take they hold of the waye of lyfe. Therfore, walke thou in the waye of suche as be vertuous, and kepe the pathes of ꝯ ryghteous. For the iust shall dwell in the lande, and they that be perfecte shall remaine in it: but the vngodly shalbe roted out of the lande, and the wicked doers shalbe roted out of it.

The.iii.Chapiter.

¶ The cõmaundementes of God must be diligently regarded and obserued.

MY sonne, * forget not thou my lawe, but se that thyne herte kepe my commaundemẽtes. For they shall prolong the daies & yeares of thy lyfe, and bryngе the peace. Let mercy and faythfulnes neuer go from the: bynde them aboute thy necke, and wryte thẽ in the tables of thyne harte. So shalte thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstandynge, in the sight of God and men. Put thy trust in God with all thyne hart: and leane not vnto thyne owne wyt. In al thy waies haue respect vnto hym: and he shal ordre thy goinges. * Be not wise in thyne owne conceyte: but feare the lorde, and departe from euell: so shall thy nauell be whole, & thy bones stronge. Honour the Lorde with thy substaunce: and with the fyrstelynges of all thyne encrease, (geue vnto the poore:) so shall thy barnes be fylled wyth plenteousnesse: and thy presses shall flowe ouer wyth swete wyne. My sõne despyse not the chastenyng of ꝯ lord, neither faynt when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom ꝯ lord loueth, hym he chasteneth, and yet delyteth in hym, euen as a father in hys owne sõne. Wel is him ꝯ findeth wysdome, & obteyneth vnderstandyng: for the getting of it is better thẽ any marchandyse of syluer, & the profyte of it is better thẽ gold. * Wisdome is more worth then pretious stones: and all the thynges that thou canste delyre are not to be compared vnto her.

Upon her ryght hande is longe life, and vpon her lefte hande is ryches & honoure. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that laye hold vpon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her faste. Gene.2.b

Wyth wysdome hath the lord layd ꝯ foũdacyon of the earth: & thorowe vnderstãdinge hath he stablysched the heauens. Thorowe hys wysdome the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dewe. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe & my counsell, that thou mayest haue the pleasure of long lyfe and vnderstandyng: for they shalbe lyfe vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth. Then shalte thou walke safely in thy waye: and thy fote shall not stomble. * Yf thou sleapeste, thou shalt not be afrayde: but shalt take thy reste, & slepe swetely. Thou nedeste not to be afrayd of any sodeine feare, neither for the violent rushynge in of the vngodlye, whẽ it commeth. For the lord shal ſãde by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withdraw no good thynge frõ them that haue nede, so longe as thine hand is able to do it. Say not vnto thy neyghbour, go thy waye, and come agayne, to morowe wyl I geue the: whereas thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neyboure, seyng he doeth dwel in rest by thee. Stryue not ryghtely wyth any man without cause, where as he hath done the no harme. * Folowe not a wicked man, & chose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde, but hys counsell is amonge the righteous. The curse of the lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the ryghteous. Is for the scornefull doeth not he laugh thẽ to scorne? but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The slouthfull and slouggysh is pyched and stryd to worke. The systematyck is reproued. A dyscreet ought to be ernestly enspyred.

Why

My sonne * yf thou be suertye for thy neighbour, & haste stryked thyne hande for another man, thou art bounde wyth thyne owne wordes, and taken with thine owne speche. Therefore my sonne do thys, and thou shalt be discharged: when thou art come into thy neyghbours daunger. Go thy wayes then soone, humble thy selfe, and wyth thy frendes entreate thy creditoure, let not thyne eyes sleepe, nor thyne eyelydes sloumber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hande of the hunter, and as a byrde from the hande of the foulet. Go to the Emmet (thou slouggard) consider her wayes, and learne to bee wyse. Whe hath no gyde, nor ouerseer, nor ruler: yet in the sommer she prouydeth her meat, & gathereth her foode together in the harueste. * Howe long wylte thou slepe thou slugghe manne? When wylte thou aryse out of thy slepe? Yea slepe on stil a litle, sloumber a litle, foulde thyne handes together yet a litle, that thou mayst slepe: so shall pouertie come vnto thee as one y trauayleth by the way, and necessitie like a weaponed manne. (But if thou lete not slouthfull, thy harueste shall come as a spryngyng wel, and pouertye shall flye farre from thee.) An vngodlye persone, a wicked man, goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with hys feete, he poynteth with hys syngers, he is euer imaginyng mischiefe and frowardenesse in his hert, and causeth discorde. Therfore shall hys destruction come hastely vpon him, sodenly shal he be al to broken, and not be healed. * These sixe thinges doeth the lorde hate, and the seuenth he vtterlye abhorreth: A proude looke, a lying tongue, handes that shede innocent bloude, an hearte that goeth about with wicked imaginacions, * feete that bee swyfte in running to doe mischiefe, a false witnes that bryngeth vp lyes, and suche one as soweth discorde amonge brethren. My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundement, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Putte them vp together in thyne hearte, and bynde them about thy necke. That they may leade thee where thou goeste, preserue thee when thou art a slepe, and that when thou awakeste, thou mayst talke of them. * For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea chastenyng and nurture is the waye of lyfe, that they may kepe thee from * the euel womanne, and from the flatteryng tounge of the harlot, that thou luste not after her beauty in thyne hearte, and lest thou bee taken with her slayze lookes. An harlotte wyl make a manne to begge his breade, and a woman wyll hunte for the precyous lyfe. May a manne take fyre in hys bosome, and hys clothes not bee brente? Or canne one goe vpon hote coales, and hys feete not be hurte? Euen so, whosoeuer goeth into his neighbours wyfe, & toucheth her, cānot be vnpunyshe. * Yet do not vtterly despyse a theefe y stealeth to satisfie his soule, whē he is hūgry: but if he may be gotte, he restoreth again seuen tymes as muche, or els he maketh recompēce with al the good of his house. But whoso committeth aduoutry with a woman, he is a foole, and bryngeth hys lyfe to destruccion. He getteth hymselfe also shame and dyshonoure, suche as shall neuer bee putte oute. For the gelousye and wrathe of the manne wyll not be intreated: nor, though thou wouldest ofte hym great gyftes to make amendes, he wyll not receyue them.

The. vii. Chapter.

God ought to be feared and honoured. His commaundementes ought to be kept: wanton appetites and desyres ought to be shunned.

My sonne * kepe my woordes, and lay vp my commaundemētes by thee. Kepe my commaundementes and my law, euē as the apple of thyne eye, and thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fyngers, and wryte them in the table of thyne hearte. Saye vnto wysedome, thou arte my syster: and call vnderstandyng thy kynswoman: * that they maye kepe thee from the straunge woman, and from the harlotte whiche geueth swete woordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I looked thorowe the lattelle, and beheelde the symple people: and among other younge folkes, I spyed one younge foole, goyng ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes house, in the twylyght of the euenyng, when it began nowe to be nyght & darke. And beholde, there mette hym a woman * with open tokens of an harlot, onely her herte was hydde. She was ful of loude woordes, and readye to vaine: whose feete coulde not abyde in the house, nowe is she without, nowe in the stretes, and lyeth a wayte in euerye corner: she caught the yong man, kyssed hym, & was not ashamed, saying: I had a vowe of peace offrynges to pay, & this day I performe it. Therfore came I forth to mete thee, that I myght seke thy face, and so haue I founde thee. I haue decked my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come lette vs lye togyther, and take our pleasure tyll it be dayelyght: and we wyll enioy the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of money with hym: and wyll returne home at the appoynted solempne feast. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, and with her flatterynge lyppes she entysed hym sodaynlye to folowe her: as it were an oxe ledde to the slaughter, and like as it were a foole that laugheth when he goeth to the stockes to be punyshed, so long tyll she had wounded hys lyuer wyth her darte: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowyng that the perpl of his lyfe lyeth therupon. Heare me nowe therfore, O my children, and marke the wordes of my mouthe. Let not thyne herte wãdre in her wayes, and be not thou deceyued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, & caste downe: yea, many a stronge manne hath been slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waye vnto hel: and bryng men doune into the chambers of death.

The. viii. Chapter.

The prayse of the wysedome of God.

WIsedome not * wysedome cryeth, doeth not vnderstandyng put foorthe her voyce? Standeth she not in the hye places, in the streates and wayes? doeth she not crye before the whole cytie, and in the gates where menne goe oute and in? It is you, O ye menne (sayeth she) whome I call. Vnto (the children of menne) doe I lyfte vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledge, O ye ignorauntes: bee wyse in herte, O ye fooles. Geue eare, for I wyll speake of great matters, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght. For my throte shalbe talkyng of the trueth, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouthe are ryghteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falsehed therein. They are all playne to suche as will vnderstande, & ryght to them that fynde knowledge. Receyue my doctrine, & not syluer: and my knowledge more then fyne golde. * For wysedome is more worthe then precious stones: yea, all thynges that thou canste desyre, may not bee compared vnto it. I wysedome haue my dwellyng wyth knowlage, and prudent counsayle is myne owne. The feare of the Lord abhorreth wickednes, pryde, dysdayne, and the euyll waye: and a mouthe that speaketh wycked thynges, I vtterlye abhorre. I canne geue counsayle, and I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstãdyng, I haue strength. * Thorowe me, kynges raygne: thorowe me, counsaylers make iust lawes. Thorowe me, doe prynces beare rule: and all iudges of the earthe execute iudgemente. I am louyng vnto those that loue me: and * they that seeke me early shall fynde me. Ryches and honoure are wyth me: yea, excellent goodes and ryghteousnes. My frute is better the golde & precious stone, & myne increase more worthe then fyne syluer. I wyll gyde thee in the waye of righteousnes, & in þ strete of iudgement. That I maye sende prosperitie to those that loue me, & to encrease their treasure.

* The Lorde hymselfe had me in possession in the begynnynge of hys wayes, or euer he beganne hys workes afore tyme. * I haue been ordeyned from euerlastynge, and from the begynnynge, or euer the earthe was made. When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor sprynges of water. Before the foundacyons of the mountaynes were layed: yea, before all hilles was I borne. The earth and all that is vpon the earthe was not yet made, nor, not the groundes selfe. * For when he made the heauens, I was presente: when he sette vp the depthes in order, when he hanged the cloudes aboue, when he fastened the sprynges of the deepe. When he shut the sea wythin * certayne bounder, that the waters shoulde not goe ouer theyr markes that he commaunded. When he layed the foundacions of the earthe I was wyth hym, ordeynyng all thynges: delytynge daylye, and reioysynge alwaye before hym. As for the rounde compasse of hys worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to bee among the children of menne. Therfore herken vnto me, O ye children, blessed are they that that kepe my wayes. O gene eare vnto nurtoure, be wyse and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me: watchinge dayly at my gates, and geuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For whoso findeth me, findeth life: & shal obtaine fauoure of the Lord. But whoso offendeth against me, hurteth his owne soule. All they that hate me, are the louers of deathe.

Wysdome moueth all men to embrace her. & the propertie of an harlot.

WYsdome hath buylded her selfe an house, and hewen out seuen pylleres: she hath killed her beastes, poured out her wine, and prepared her table. She hath sente forthe her maydens to crye vpon the hyest place of the cytie. Whoso is ignoraunte, let hym come hyther. And to the vnwyse she sayeth: Come on youre waye, eate my breade, & drynke my wyne whiche I haue poured out for you. Forsake ignoraunce, & ye shal liue: & set that ye go in the waie of vnderstanding. Whoso reproueth a scorneful person, getteth hym selfe dyshonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodly stayneth hym selfe. Reproue not a scorner, lest he owe thee evill wyll: but rebuke a wyse man, and he will loue thee. Geue a discrete man but occasyon, and he wyll be the wyser: teache a ryghteous manne, and he will encrease in knowledge. *The feare of the Lorde is the beginninge of wysdom. and the knowledge of holye thynges, is vnderstandyng. For thorowe me thy dayes shalbe prolonged, and the yeares of thy life shalbe many. Yf thou bee wyse, thy wysdome shal doode thy selfe good: but yf thou thynkest scorne thereof, it shalbe thine owne harme. A foolishe rechelesse woman full of wordes, & suche a one as hath no knowledge, sitteth at the doore of her house, & in the hye places of the cytie, to call suche as go by, and that walke strayght in their wayes. Whoso is ignoraunte (sayeth she) let hym come hyther, and to the vnwise she sayeth: stollen waters are swete, and the breade that is priuely eaten, hathe a good taste. And he doth not consider, that they are but dead whiche be there, & that her gestes are in the depe of hel: (For he that wyl be wonne vnto her, shal go downe to hell; but he that auoydeth from her, shalbe saued.)

The.x.Chapter.

In this chapter and in all that followe vnto the thyrtye, the wyse man exhorteth by diuers sentences (which he calleth parables) to folowe vertues, & flye vices. And sheweth also what profyte cometh of wysdome: & what hynderaunce procedeth of foolyshnesse.

Prouerbes of Salomon.

A wyse sonne maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is an heuines vnto his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profyte nothynge: but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. *The Lorde will not let the soule of the righteous suffer hunger, but he taketh away the richesse of the vngodly. An idle hand maketh poore, but a quycke labourynge hande maketh riche. (whoso regardeth lesynges, feedeth the wynde: and doeth but folowe byrdes that haue taken their flyghte.) Whoso gathereth in Sommer, is wise: but he that is slouggish in harueste, bringeth hym selfe to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the head of the ryghteous, & the mouth of the vngodlye kepeth myschefe in secrete. *The memoryall of the iuste shall haue a good reporte: but the name of the vngodly shall stynke. A wyse man wyll receyue warnynge, but a prateynge foole shalbe punyshed. He that leadeth an innocente lyfe, walketh surely: but whoso goeth a wrong waye, shalbe knowen. *He that winketh with hys eye, wyll doe some harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouthe, shalbe beaten. The mouthe of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouthe of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. Euyll wyll stryreth vp stryfe: * but loue couereth the multitude of synnes. In the lyppes of him that hath vnderstandynge a man shal finde wisdome: but the rod belongeth to ye backe of the foolyshe. Wyse men lay vp knowledge, but the mouthe of the foolysh is nye destruccion. The ryche mans gooddes are hys stronge holde, but their owne powerrie feareth the poore. The ryghteous laboureth to do good, but the vngodly vseth his encreasse vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nourtoure, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to bee reformed, discyeueth hym selfe. *Dissembling lippes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speadeth anye sclaundre, is a foole. Where muche babblynge is, there must nedes bee offence: and he that refrayneth his lyppes, is wise.

An innocente tongue is a noble treasure: but the hearte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe. The lyppes of the ryghteous fede a whole multitude: but fooles shall dye in theyr owne folye. The blessynge of the Psal.37.a Eccl.11.b Lorde maketh ryche men, * as for carefull trauayle it doth nothynge thereto. A foole doeth wickedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: but wisdome ruleth the mã that hath vnderstandynge. The thynge that the vngodly are afraied of, shal come vpon them, but the ryghteous shall haue theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempest commeth: but the ryghteous remayneth sure for euer. As vineger is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto ỳ eyes, euẽ so is a sloughgish person to them that sende hym forthe.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shalbee shortened. The patient abydynge of the ryghteous, shall bee turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shall perysh. The waie of ỳ Lord geueth a courage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wycked Eccl.12.a doers. ❡ The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shal not remaine Psal.37.c in the lande. * The mouthe of the iust will be talkinge of wisdome, but the tongue of the frowarde shall perysshe. The lyppes of the ryghteous are occupyed in acceptable thynges: but the mouthe of the vngodly taketh them to the worste.

The.xi. Chapter.

A * false balaunce is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde: but a true weyghte pleaseth hym. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlynesse, there is wysdome The innocente dealynge of the iuste shall leade them, but the wickednesse of suche as dissemble, shalbe theyr owne destruction. * Ryches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth frõ deathe. The righteousnesse of the innocente ordreth his way: but the vngodly shal fal in hys owne wickednesse. The ryghteousnesse of the iuste shall deliuer them: but the wycked shalbe taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse.

* When an vngodly man dyeth, hys hope is gone: the confidence of rychesse shall perysshe. The ryghteous shalbee deliuered oute of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in hys stede. Thorowe the mouthe of the dissembler is hys neyghboure destroyed: but thorowe knowledge shall the iuste bee deliuered. * When it goeth well with the righteous, the cytie is merie, and when the vngodly perysshe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealthe, the cytie prosperethe: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foole bryngeth vp a sclaunder of hys neyghboure: but a wise manne wyll kepe it secrete. * A dyssembling person wyl dyscouer priuy thinges, but he that is of a faythfull hearte wyll kepe counsayle. * Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can gyue counsayle, there is wealth. ❡ He that is suretye for a straunger hurteth hym selfe: and he that medleth not with surtyshyppe is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they mayntayne rychesse. * He that is mercyfull, dothe hym selfe a benefyte: but whoso hurteth hys neyghboure, is a tyraunte. The labour of the vngodly prosphereth not, but he ỳ soweth ryghteousnesse shall receyue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse bryngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euell bryngeth deathe. The Lorde abhorreth them that ber of a fayned hearte, but he hath pleasure in them that are of an vndefyled conuersacyon. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the seede of the ryghteous shalbe preserued. A fayre woman without discrete maners, is like a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is indygnacyon. * Some manne geueth oute hys goodes, and is the richer: but the nygarde (hauyng inough) wyll departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in pouertye. ❡ He that is lyberall in geuynge, shall haue plentye: and he that watereth, shalbee watered also hym selfe. * Whoso hoordeth vp hys corne, shalbee cursed amonge the people: but blessynge shall lyghte vpon hys heade that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, fynderh hys desyre: but whoso seketh after mischefe, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in hys rychesse, shall haue a fall: but * the righteous shall florish, as the greene leafe. Whoso maketh dyssquietnesse in hys owne house, he shall haue wynde for hys heritage, and the foole shalbee seruaunte to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of lyfe: ❡ he that endeuoureth hym selfe to wynne mens soules, is wyse.

*yf the ryghteous be recompensed vpon pro.11.b earth, howe muche more then the vngod-ly and the synner.

The.xii.Chapter.

Whoso loueth wysedome, wylbe I contente to bee reformed: but he that hateth to bee reproued is a foole. * A good manne is pro.12.a acceptable vnto the Lorde, but the wyc-ked ymagyner wyll he condemne. A manne can not endure in vngodlynesse:
but the roote of the ryghteous shall not bee moued. A housewyfelye woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth herselfe vnhonestlye, is a corupcion in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght: but the ymagynacions of the vngodlye are disceytful. The talkyng of the vngodly is howe they maye laye wayte for bloude: but the mouthe of thy ryghteous wyll dely-uer them. * God ouerturneth the estate ps.37.f of the wycked, and they stande not: but B the house of the ryghteous shall stande stedfast. A manne shall bee commended prou.12.b for hys wysedome, but a foole shall bee despysed. * A symple manne whiche la-boureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgyous and lacketh bread. A ryghteous manne regardeth the lyfe of prou.12.b hys cattell, but the vngodlye haue cruell hertes. * He that tylleth hys lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he that followeth ydlenesse, is a verye foole. (Whoso hath pleasure to continue at the wyne, seeueth dishonestye in his owne dwellyng.) The de-syre of the vngodly hunteth after myschiefe: but the roote of the ryghteous bryngeth forthe frute. The wycked falleth into the snare, throwe the malyce of hys owne mouthe: but the iust shall escape oute of peryll. Euery manne shall enioy good, accordyng to the frute of hys mouthe, and after the workes of hys handes shall he bee rewarded.
Loke what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyll be counsayled. A foole vtte-reth hys wrathe in all the haste: but a C dyscrete manne couereth wronge. A iust manne wyll tell the trueth, and shewe the thyng that is ryghte: but a false wytnesse dysceyueth. A sclaunderous person pyrcketh lyke a swerd, but a wyse mannes tounge is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constaunte: but a dys-sembling tounge is soone chaunged.
They that ymagyne euyll in theyr mynde, wyll dysceyue: but the counsaylers of peace shall haue ioy folowyng them. There shall no mysfortune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall bee fylled wyth mysery. * The Lorde prou.9.b abhorreth lying lyppes: but they that laboure for trueth please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doeth hyde wysedome: but an vndiscrete herte telleth out hys folyshnesse. A dilygente hande shall beare rule: but the ydle shalbe vnder trybute. * Heuynesse dyscourageth D the herte of manne: but a good woorde *pro.15.b maketh it glad agayne. The ryghte- and.17.d ous excelleth hys neyghboure: but the eccles.30.c waye of the vngodly will dysceyue themselues. The dysceytfull manne shall not roste that he tooke in huntyng, * but 2.tim.2.b the ryches of the iust manne is of great Deut.13.a value. In the waye of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe: and in the same waye there is no death.

The.xiii.Chapter.

A wyse sonne wyll herken to hys I fathers warnyng, but he that is scornefull, will not heare when he is reproued. A good manne shall enioy the frute of hys mouthe, but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall bee spoyled. He that kepeth hys mouthe, kepeth his lyfe:
but whoso openeth hys lyppes to euyll, destroyeth hymselfe. The slogard would fayne haue, & cannot gette his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shal haue plenty.
A righteous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodlye shameth both other and hymselfe. Righteousnes kepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynes doeth ouerthrowe the sinner. * Some men are riche, ps.37.b though they haue nothyng: againe, some and.112.a. men are poore, haupng greate rychesse. prou.11.c With goodes euery man delyuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyll not be reproued.
The lyght of the ryghteous maketh ioy- B full, but * the candle of the vngodly shalbe * pro.24.c put out. Among the proude there is euer stryfe: but among those that doe all thinges with aduisement, there is wysedome. Vaynely gotten goodes are soone spente: but they that bee gathered together wyth the hande, shall increase.
Longe tarying for a thyng that is deferred, greeueth the herte: but when the de-syre commeth, it is a tree of lyfe.

Whoso despyseth any thyng shall be hurte for the same: but he that feareth the commaundement, shall haue the reward.

C The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyse, that it may kepe hym from the snares of death. Good vnderstandyng gaineth fauoure, but harde is the waye of the despysers. A wise manne doeth all thynges with discreccion: but a foole wyll declare his folye. An vngodly messenger falleth into myschefe: but a faythfull ambassadoure is wholsome. He that thynketh scorne to bee reformed, commeth to pouertie and shame: but whoso regardeth correccion shall come to honoure. When D a desyre is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but fooles counte it abhominacion to departe from euyll. He that goeth in the company of wysemen, shalbe wyse: but whoso is a cõpanyõ of fooles, shall bee hurte. Myschefe followeth vpon synners, but the ryghteous shall haue a good reward. He that is vertuous leaueth an enheritaunce vnto his chylders Iob.27.c. chylderen: and *the ryches of the synner is layed vp for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in the feldes of the poore: but the feld not wel ordred, is without frute. He that sparyth the rod hateth his sõne: *Ecc.30.a Deu.11.b but whoso loueth hym chasteneth hym betymes. *Apsa.34.b The ryghteous eateth, and is satisfyed: but the bely of the vngodly hath neuer ynough.

The xiiii. Chapter.

A Wyse women vpholde theyr house: but a foolyshe wyfe plucketh it downe. He that walketh in the ryght pathe of the Lorde, feareth hym: but he that turneth himselfe awaye from his wayes, despyseth hym. In the mouth of the foolyshe is the rod of pryde: but the lyppes of the wyse wyll preserue them. Where no oxen are, there the crybbe is empty: but where the oxen labour, there is muche frute. A faythfull wytnesse will not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye. A scornefull bodye seketh Prou.3.a wysedome, and fyndeth it not: but *knowledge is easye to come by, vnto hym that wyll vnderstande. Bee that thou medle not with a foole, in whome thou perceyuest to bee no knowledge. The wysedome of hym that hath vnderstandyng, is to take hede vnto his waye: but the foolyshnesse of the vnwyse dysceyueth. Fooles make but a spoyle of synne, but there is a fauourable loue among the ryghteous. The herte feleth his owne lyues bytternesse, neither shall B the straunger bee partaker of hys ioye. The house of the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the ryghteous shall florysshe. * There is a Pro.16.c waye whyche some menne thynke to bee Deu.12.c ryght: but the ende thereof leadeth vnto deathe. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrthe is heuynesse. A backslydyng herte shall be fylled wyth hys owne wayes, but a good manne shall lyue of hys frutes. An ignorannt body beleueth al thynges: but whoso hath vnderstandyng loketh well to hys goynges. (A deceytfull sonne shall haue no good: but a discrete seruaunt shall do full well: and his way shall prosper.) A wise man feareth, and departeth from euyll: but a furyous foole goeth on presumptuousnesse.

An vnpaciente manne dealeth foo- C lyshly: but he that is well aduysed, is hated of the foole. The ignorannt haue foolyshnesse in possession, but the wyse are crouned with knowledge. The euyll shall bowe themselues before the good: and the vngodly shall wayte at the dores of the ryghteous: The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Whoso despyseth hys neyghboure doeth amysse, but *blessed is he that hath pytie of the poore. Pro.14.d (He that putteth his truste in the Lorde loueth to see mercyfull.) Wythout doubte they erre that ymagyne wyckednesse, but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen mercye and faythfulnesse.

In euerye laboure there is some pro- fyte. But onely lyppe laboure, bryngeth forthe penurye. Rychesse are as a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignorannce of fooles is verye foolyshnesse. A faythfull wytnesse delyuereth soules, but a deceytfull wytnesse bryngeth forthe lyes. The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, and hys chylderen are vnder a sure defence. The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of deathe. The encrease and prosperitie of the com- D mens, is ꝑ kinges honour: but the decaye of the people, is the cõfusion of ꝑ prynce. He that is paciente, hath muche vnderstanding: but he that is soone displeased, prouoketh foolyshnesse. A merye hearte is the lyfe of the body: but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. *He that dothe a poore man wronge blasphemeth hys maker: but whoso hath pytie of ỹ poore, doth honoure vnto GOD. The vngodly is cast awaye for hys iniquitie, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in deathe. *Wisdome resteth in the heart of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and it shalbee knowen amonge them that are vnlearned. *Ryghteousnesse exalteth vp the people, but the sacrifyce of the heathen is synfull. A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest prouoketh him vnto wrathe.

The.xv.Chapter.

A *Softe answere putteth downe displeasure: but froward wordes prouoke vnto angre. The tonge of such as bee wyse, vseth knowledge a right: as for a foolish mouth it blabbeth oute nothinge but foolyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place, beholdyng bothe the good and bad. A wholsome tongue is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mind. A foole despyseth hys fathers correction, but he that taketh hede when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandynge. (Where ryghteousnesse is plentyfull, there is very great power: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly shalbe rooted oute.) The house of the righteous is full of richesse, but the encreace of the vngodlye are nye destruccion. A wyse mouthe powreth out knowledge, but the hearte of the folish doth not so. *The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto hym. The waye of the vngodly is an abhompnacion vnto the Lord: but whoso folowith ryghteousnesse, hym he loueth. He that forsaketh the righte way, shalbe sore punyshed, and whoso hateth correction shal die. The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lord: how moche more then the heartes of menne? *A scornefull body loueth not one that reproueth him: neyther will he come vnto the wyse. ‡A merye hearte maketh a chearfull countenaunce: but an hevy heart compelleth a man to sighe. The hearte of hym that hathe vnderstandynge doth seke after knowledge: but the mouth of fooles is fed with foolyshnesse. All the dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quyet hearte is a contynuall feaste. *Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lord, then greate treasure with sorowe. Better is a messe of pottage with loue, then a fat oxe with euell will. *An angrye man stryreth vp stryfe, but he that is pacient stylleth discorde. The way of a slouthfull manne is as it were hedged with thornes: but the stree of the ryghteous is wel cleansed. *A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth hys mother. A foole reioyseth in foolysh thynges, but a wyse man loketh well to hys owne goynges. Vnadvysed thoughtes shall come to naughte: but where as men are that can geue good counsayle, there is stedfastnesse. A ioyfull thing is it to a man, whē his counsaile is followed: and very pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season. The way of lyfe leadeth vnto heauen, that a man shoulde beware of hell beneth. The Lord wyll breake downe the house of the proude, but he shall make faste the borders of the wyddowe. The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacions of ỹ wicked, but pure wordes of innocentes are pleasaunce vnto hym. The couetous man rooteth vp his owne house, but whoso hateth rewardes shall lyue. (Thorowe mercye and faith are synnes purged, and thorow the feare of the Lord doth every one eschewe euyll.) The harte of the righteous studyeth hys answere afore: but the wicked mans mouth spueth out myschefe. The Lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghteous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the hearte, so dothe a good name fede the bones. The eare that herkeneth to the reformacion of lyfe, shall dwell amonge the wise. He that refuseth to be reformed, despiseth hys owne soule: but he that submytteth hym selfe to correccion is wise. The feare of the Lorde is the right science of wysdome: and lowlynesse goeth before honoure.

The.xvi.Chapter.

MAN maye well purpose a thynge in hys hearte, but the answere of the tongue commeth of the Lorde. *A manne thynketh all his wayes to bee cleane, but it is the Lorde that iudgeth the mindes. ‡Commit thy workes vnto the Lorde, and loke what thou deuyseſt, it shal prospere. The Lorde doth all thynges for hys owne sake: yea, and when he keepeth the vngodly for the daye of wrathe.

The Lorde abhorreth all suche as be of a proude harte, hys hande is agaynst theyr hand, & they that not escape as innocentes.

B With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse, synnes bee forgeuen: and whoso feareth the Lorde eschueth euyll. When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he maketh hys very enemyes to bee hys frendes.

Better is it to haue a lytle thynge with ryghteousnesse, then greate rentes wrongfully gotten. * A man deuyseth a waye in his harte, but it is the Lord that ordreth his goinges. When the prophecye is in the lippes of the kynge, hys mouth shall not go wrong in iudgement. * A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes iudgement, he maketh al weightes. It is a great abhomynacion, when kynges are wicked, for a kyngrs seate shoud be holde vp with ryghteousnesse. Righteous lyppes are pleasaunt vnto kynges: and he that speaketh the truth, shalbe beloued. The kynges displeasure is a messēger of death, but a wise man will pacifie hym. The cherefull countenaunce of the kyng is life: and his louing fauour, is as the cuenyng dew. * To haue wisdome in possessiō, is better then to haue golde: and to get vnderstandinge, is rather to be chosen then to haue syluer. The path of the ryghteous is to eschue euyll, & who so loketh well to hys wayes kepeth hys owne soule. Presumptuousnesse goeth before destruccion, & after a proude stomake there foloweth a fall. Better is it to bee of humble minde with the lowlye, then to deuyde the spoyles with the proude. He that handleth a matter wisely, obtayneth good: and * blessed is he that putteth hys truste in the Lorde. C Whoso hath a wise vnderstandyng, shalbe called to counsayle and he that can speake fayre, shall haue the more lernynge. Understandyng is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it: as for the chastening of fooles, it is but folishnesse. A wise heart ordreth hys mouth wiselye, and amendeth the doctrine in hys lyppes. Fayre wordes are an hony cōbe, a refreshing of the mynde, and health of the bones. * There is a way that semeth ryght vnto her ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. A troublous soule disquieteth her selfe, for her owne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly persone stryreth vp euell, and in hys lyppes he is as an hote burnynge fyre. A frowarde body causeth stryfe, & he that is a blabbe of his tongue, maketh deuision amonge princes. A wicked man begyleth hys neyghboure, and leadeth him into the waye that is not good. The vngodly that loketh gastely with hys eyes, ymagyneth mischefe: and when he moueth his lippes, he wyl doone some harme. Age is a crowne of worshipe, yf it bee founde in the waye of righteousnesse. A patient man is better thē one strong: and he that can rule hym selfe is more wrothe then he that wynneth a cytie. The lotes are cast into the lappe, but the ordrynge therof standeth all in the Lorde.

The. xvii. Chapter.

BEtter is a dyre mosel with quietnes, then a house ful of fat of fryngе wyth stryfe. * A discreet seruaunt shal haue more rule thē the sonnes that haue no wisdome, and shal haue lyke heritage with ỳ brethren. * Like as syluer is tryed in the fyre, and golde in the fornace, euen so doth the Lorde proue the heartes. A wicked bodye geueth audience to false lyppes, and a frowarde person geueth eare to a discreatfull tongue. * Who so laugheth the poore to scorne, blaspheme th hys maker: and he that is glad of another mans hurte, shall not bee vnpunyshed. Children childrē are a worshippe vnto the elders, & the fathers are the honoure of the children. Sprache of auctoryte becommeth not a foole, moche lesse a lyinge mouthe then besemeth a prynce. A reward is as a precious stone vnto hym ỳ hath it: but vnto whōsoeuer it turneth it maketh hym vnwyse. Whoso couereth another mans offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the faute, seperth the prynce against hymselfe. One reproue onely doth more good to hym that hath vnderstanding, thē a C. strypes vnto a foole. A * seditious person seketh mischefe, and therfore is a cruel messenger sente agaynst hym. It were better to come agaynst a fher Beare robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a fole (trusting) in his foolishnesse. * Whoso rewardeth euell for good, the plage shall not departe from his house. The begynnyng of stryfe is, as when a man maketh an Issue for water: therfore or the meryng be, leaue of contencion. The Lorde hateth as well hym that iustifyeth the vngodly, as him that condēneth the innocente. What helpeth it to geue a foole treasure in hys hande, where as he hath no myndе to bye wysdome? * (Whoso buyldeth hys house to hye, seketh destruccion: and he that refuseth to learne, shall fall into mischefe.) He is a frende that alway loueth: and in aduersitie a man shall knowe who is hys brother.

*Whoso promyseth by the hande, and is suretie for his neyghboure, he is a foole. He that delyteth in syn, loueth stryfe: and whoso setteth hys doze to hye, seketh after a fall. Whoso hath a frowarde hearte obteyneth no good: and he that hath an ouerthwarte tonge, shall fall into myschefe.

He that begetteth a foole, begetteth hys sorowe, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. *A merye hearte maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynde dryeth vp the bones. The vngodly taketh gyftes oute of the bosome, to wrest ye wayes of iudgemente. *Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstanding, but the eyes of fooles wander thorowe out all landes.

An vndiscrete sonne is a grefe vnto his father, and an heuinesse vnto hys mother.

To punishe the innocente, and to smyte the princes that geue true iudgement, are both cruell. *A wyse man vseth a fewe wordes, and he is a manne of vnderstandynge, that maketh moch of hys spirite. Yea a very fole (when he holdeth his tongue) is counted wyse: and to haue vnderstanding when he shutteth hys lyppes.

The.xviii. Chapter.

HE accompanyeth him selfe with all stedfaste and wholesome doctryne, that hath a feruent delyte to it, and is seperate from cõpany. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstandynge, but onely in those thynges wherein hys hearte reioyseth. When the vngodly commeth, then commeth also disdaine: and with the dishonest person commeth shame and dishonoure. The wordes of a wyse mans mouthe are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a ful streame. * It is not good to regarde the persone of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgemente. A fooles lyppes are euer brawlynge, and hys mouthe prouoketh vnto battayle. A fooles mouthe is hys owne destruccion, and hys lyppes are the snare for hys owne soule. The wordes of a slaunderer are very woundes, and go thorowe vnto the innermoste partes of the body. (Peare casteth downe him that is slouthfull: and the soules of suche as lyue in voluptuousnesse shall hunger.) Whoso is slouthfull and slacke in hys labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, the ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and is in sauegarde. But the ryches mans goodes are hys stronge holde: yea, he taketh them for an hye wall rounde aboute hym. After pryde commeth destruccion: and honour after lowlynes. *He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heareth it, is a foole: and worthye to bee confounded. A good stomache dyneth awaye a mànes byrase: but when the spyrite is vexed, who maye abide it? A wyse hearte laboureth for knowledge, and a prudente eare seketh vnderstandyng. Liberalytie bringeth a manne to honoure and worshippe, and setteth hym amonge greate menne. The ryghteous declareth hys owne cause fyrste hym selfe, yf hys neyghboure come, hee shall fynde hym. The lot pacyfyeth the bacyaunce, and parteth the myghtye a sondre. A brother thoughe he bee greued with offence, yet is he more worth then a very stronge castel: and they that holde together are lyke the barre of a palace. A mans belye shalbe satisfyed with the frute of his owne mouthe, and with the increase of hys lyppes shall he bee fylled. Deathe and life are in the instrument of the tongue, and they that loue it shall enioye the frute therof. *Whoso fyndeth a (GOOD) wife, fyndeth a good thynge: and receyueth a wholsome benefyte of the LORDE.

(He that putteth away a good woman, putteth away a good thynge: but he that kepeth an harlot, is a foole and vnwyse.) The poore maketh supplycacyon and prayeth mekely, but the ryche geueth a roughe answere. A manne that loueth hys frendes wyll bee companable with them: and some frende stycketh faster to a man then hys brother.

The.xix. Chapter.

BEtter * is the poore that lyueth godly: then the blasphemer that is but a foole. Where no discrecio is, there the soule is inclined to the thyng that is not good: and is swyfte on fote, and offendeth. Folysthnes maketh a manne to go out of hys waye, & then is hys harte vnpacyent agaynst the Lorde. Riches make many frendes: but the poore is forsaken of hys neyghbourr. *A false wytnes shal not remayne vnpunished: and he that speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate menne: and euery manne fauoureth hym that geueth rewardes. As for the poore, he is hated amonge all hys brethren: yea, hys owne frendes wythdrawe from hym:

and yf he aske them the cause, they disdaine to answere him. He that is wyse, loueth his owne soule, and kepeth vnderstandynge, that he maye pꝛosper. A false witnesse shall not remayne vnpunished: & he that speaketh lyes shall perysshe. Pleasure becommeth not a foole, moch moꝛe vnsemelye is it, a bond man to haue the rule of pꝛinces. A wyse man can put of displeasure: & it is his honoure to let some fautes passe.

These are also the sayinges of the wyse. *It is not good, to haue respecte prou.28.b of anye persoune in iudgemente. He that sayeth to the vngodly thou art righteous, hym shall the people curse: yea, the comynaltye shal abhorre hym. But they that rebuke the vngodlye, in them doth God delyte, and a ryche blessynge shall come vpon them. Euerye man shall kysse his lyppes that geueth a good answere.

I went

I wente by the felde of the slouthfull, and by the vyne yarde of the foolysh man. And lo, it was all couered with nettels, & stoode ful of thystles, and the stone wal was broken downe. Thys I sawe, and consydered it well: I loked vpon it, and toke it for

The.xxv. Chapter.

These are also the parables of Salomon, which the men of Ezechias kynge of Juda copyed oute.

A IT is the honoure of GOD to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honoure is to searche oute a thynge. The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges heart is vnsearcheable. Take the drosse from the siluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessell therof. Take awaye vngodlynesse from the kyng, and hys seate shalbe stablyshed with rygh teousnes. Put not forth thy selfe in the presence of the kynge, & prease not into the e Eccl.8.d Matth.5.d whom thou seest with thyne eyes. B Be not hastye to go to the law, lest haply thou do some offece after the strife be ended, whereby thy neyghboure put the to shame. Handle thy matter with thy neyghboure hym selfe, and discouer not another mans secret: lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dyshonoure, and leste thyne euel name doe not ceasse. (Grace and frendshyp hath delyuer, which see that thou kepe for thy selfe, leste thou be reproued.)

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a graued worke of siluer.
The correccyon of the wyse is to an obedient eare, a golden cheyne, and a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the wynter coole in the haruest, so is a faythful messaungre to them that

The hope that is put in a false man in tyme of nede, is lyke a rotten torth, and a slippery fote. Whoso taketh awaye a mans garmente in the colde wether, is lyke vyneger vpon chalke: or lyke vnto that syngeth songes to an heuye harte. The.xxvi. Chapter.

A LYke as snowe is not mete in sommer, nor raine in haruest: euen so is worshyp vnsemely for a foole. Lyke as the bryd and the swalowe take theyr flyghte and flee here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyght vpon a man. *Vnto the horse belongeth a *Prou.26.a fete, yea dronckē is he in vanitie, that committeth any message to a foole. Lyke as in B a lame man his legges are not equal, euen so is a parable in ỹ fooles mouthe. He that setteth a foole in hye dygnitie, that is euen as yf a man put a stone in a slynge. A parable in a fooles mouthe, is lyke a thorne that prycketh a dronken man in the hande.

(Greate is he that hath formed all thynge, he rewardeth the foole and recompenseth the transgressour.)
A man of experience discerneth all thinges well: but he that putteth the foole to syl-lence endeth the stryfe.

*Lyke

*Lyke as the dogge turneth agayne to hys owne vomite, euen so a foole be-gynneth hys folyshnesse againe a freshe. yf thou seest a manne that is wyse in hys owne conceyte, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

C * The slouthful sayeth: there is a Lyon in the waye, & a Lyon in the myddest of the stretes. Lyke as the doore turneth aboute vpon the henges, euen so doeth the slouthfull welter hymselfe in his bed.
* The slouthful body thrusteth hys hand into his bosome, & it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouthe. The slogarde thynketh hymselfe wyser then seuen men that syt and teache. Whoso goeth by and medleth with other mennes stryfe: he is lyke one that taketh a dogge by ye eares.
Lyke as a madde man that casteth fyrebrandes, and shooteth deadly arowes and dartes: euen so doeth a dyssembler wyth his neighbour. And then sayeth he: (when he is taken) I dyd it but in sporte. Where no wood is, there the fyre goeth oute: Euen so where the tale bearer is taken away, there the stryfe ceaseth. * Cooles kyndle heate, and wood the fyre: euen so doeth a brawlyng felowe stere vp varyaunce.

D A talebearers woordes are lyke menne that strike wyth hammers, but they pearse the inwarde partes of the bodye.
Venemous lyppes and a wicked herte, are lyke a potsharde couered with syluer drosse. An enemye shall bee knowen by hys talkyng, and in the meane season he ymagineth mischefe, but when he speaketh fayre, beleue hym not: for there are seuen abhominacions in his hert. Whoso kepeth euill will secretly to doe hurte, his malice shalbe shewed before ye whole congregacion. * Whoso dyggeth vp a pyt, shall fal therin: and he that weltreth a stone shall stomble vpon it hymselfe. A dissemblyng tongue hateth one that re-buketh hym; and a flatteryng mouthe worketh mischefe.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

Make not thy boast of to morow
* for thou knowest not what may happen to daye. Lette another man prayse thee, and not thyne owne mouthe: yea, other folkes lyppes and not thyne. The stone is heuye, and the sande weightie: but a fooles wrathe is heuyer then them bothe. Wrathe is a cruell thyng, & furyousnes is a very tem-peste: but who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.
Faythful are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemy are cruell. He that is full abhoreth an hony combe, but vnto hym that is hongry, euery sower thing is swete. He that ofttymes flitteth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her nest. Balme and swete incense make the herte merye:
so is the swete counsel of a mans frend agreeth to hys purpose. Thyne owne frend and thy fathers frend see thou forsake not: but goe not into thy brothers house in time of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande then a brother farre of.
My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad herte: so that I shall make answere vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seeyng the plage, wyll hyde hymselfe:
as for fooles they go on styll, and suffre harme. * Take his garment that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mannes sake. He that is to hastye to prayse his neighbour aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth him an euil report. * A brawling woman and the roofe of the house dro-pyng in a raynye daye, may well be compared together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, & holdeth the ople fast in his hand. Lyke as one yron whet-teth another, so doeth one man comforte another. Whoso kepeth his fygge tree, shall eutoy the frutes therof: euen so, he that wayteth vpon hys master, shall come to honour. Lyke as in one water there appeare dyuerse faces, euen so dy-uerse men haue dyuerse hertes. Lyke as hell and destruccion are neuer full, euen so * the eyes of menne can neuer be satis-fyed. Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, & so is a man, when he is openly praysed to his face. (The herte of a wicked man seketh after mischefe, but a true herte seketh for knowledge.) Though thou shoudeste braye a foole wyth a pestell in a morter lyke frumentye corne, yet wyll not hys foolyshnesse goe from hym.

See that thou knowe the nombre of thy cattell thy selfe, and looke well to thy flockes. For ryches abyde not al-waye, and the crowne endureth not for euer. The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vppe, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shall clothe thee, and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandrye.

Thou

Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough to fede thee, to vyholde thy housholde, and to susteyne thy maydens.

The.xcviii. Chapter.

THe vngodlye flyeth when no man chaseth hym: but the ryghteous standethe stille as a Lyon. * Because of synne the lande doeth oft chaūge her p;ynce: but thoꝛowe menne of vnderstandyng and wysedom, a Realme endureth long. One pooꝛe man oppꝛessyng an other by vyolence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute. They that forsake the lawe, p;ayse the vngodlye: but suche as kepe the lawe, abhoꝛre them. * Wycked men dysceme not the thing that is right, but they that seke after the Loꝛde dyscusse all thynges. * A pooꝛe man leading a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Whoso kepeth the lawe, is a chylde of vnderstandyng: but he that is a companyon of ryotous me, shameth his father. He that by vsurye and vntuste gaynes gathereth ryches, he shall laye them in stoꝛe foꝛ a man that wyll pytye the pooꝛe. * He that turneth awaye his eare from hearyng the lawe, his p;ayer shall be abhominable. Whoso leadeth ỹ ryghteous into an euyll waye, shall fall into hys owne pyt, but the iust shal haue the good in possession. The ryche manne thynketh hymselfe to bee wyse, but the pooꝛe that hath vnderstandyng, can perceyue hym well ynough. * When ryghteous menne are in p;osperitie, then doeth honour florisshe, but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that hydeth his synnes shall not p;osper: but * whoso knowlegeth them, & foꝛsaketh them shall haue mercye. Well is hym that standeth alway in awe, as foꝛ hym that hardeneth hys herte, he shall fall into myschefe.

Lyke as a roryng Lyon, and an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly p;ynce ouer the pooꝛe people. Where the p;ynce is without vnderstandyng, there is greate oppꝛession and wꝛonge: but he that hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe reygne. * He that by vyolence sheddeth any mans bloud, shalbe a renagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be able to succoure him. * Whoso leadeth a godly & an innocent lyfe, shalbe saued: but he that goeth frowarde wayes shall once haue a fal. * He that tylleth his land, shal haue plentyousnes of bꝛead: but he that followeth ydelnesse, shall haue pouertye ynough. A man that dealeth faythfully, shall bee fylled with blessynges, and * he ỹ maketh to muche haste foꝛ to be ryche, shall not be vngyltie. To haue respect of persons in iudgement, is not good. And whye a man wyll doe wꝛonge: yea, euen foꝛ a peece of bꝛead. He that wylde ryche all to soone, hath an euill eye: and consydereth not, that pouertie shall come vpon hym. He that folowyng my p;eceptes reproueth a man, shall fynde moꝛe fauoure at the laste, then he that flattereth hym. * Whoso robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a destroyer. He that is of a p;oude stomake and without feare, steareth vp stryfe: but he that putteth hys trust in the Loꝛd, shalbe well fed. He that trusteth in hys owne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe. * He that geueth vnto the pooꝛe, shall not lacke: but he that turneth awaye his eyes frō suche as bee in necessitie, shall suffre greate pouertie hymselfe. * When the vngodly are come vp, menne are fayne to hyde themselues: but when they perishe, the righteous increase.

The.xcix. Chapter.

HE that is stiffe necked, & wyll not be refourmed: shal sodenlye be destroyed wythout any helpe. * When the ryghteous haue the ouerhande, ỹ people are in p;osperitie, but when the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne. Whoso loueth wysedome, maketh hys father a glad man: * but he that kepeth company with harlottes, spendeth awaye that he hathe. With true iudgemente the kyng setteth vp the lande: but yf he be a manne ỹ oppꝛesseth the people ỹ gatherynges, he turneth it vpsyde downe. Whoso flatereth his neyghboure, layeth a nette foꝛ hys fete. The synne of the wycked is hys owne snare, but the ryghteous doeth syng and reioyce. The ryghteous consydereth the cause of the pooꝛe: but the vngodlye regardeth no vnderstandyng. Wycked people kyndle a cytie in deraye, but wysemen let it vp agayne. yf a wyse man go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale wyth hym frendly oꝛ roughlye) he getteth no rest. The bloudthyꝛste hate the righteous, but the iuste seeke his soule.

A foole powreth out his spyte altogether, but a wyse man kepeth it in til afterward.
yf a prince delite in lies, all his seruauntes are vngodlye. The poore and the lender meete together: and the Lorde lyghteneth both theyr eyes. * The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall cotinue sure for euermore. The rod and correction minister wisedome, but yf a chylde be not looked vnto, he bryngeth hys mother to shame. When the vngodlye come vp, wickednesse increaseth: but the righteous shall see theyr fall. Nurture thy sonne wyth correction, and thou shalte be at rest:
yea, he shall doe the good at thyne hearte.

When the woorde of God is not preached, the people perysshe: but well is hym that kepeth the lawe. A seruaunte will not bee ledde better for wordes, for thoughe he vnderstande: yet will he not regarde them.
yf thou seest a man that is hasty to speake vnaduised, thou mayst trust a foole more then hym. He that delicatelye bryngeth vp his seruaunte from a chyld, shall make him his maister at length. An angry man styrreth vp strife, and he that beareth euill will in his mynde, doeth much euel. After pride commeth a fall, * but a lowly spyte bryng-eth greate worshippe. Whoso kepeth co-panye with a theefe, hateth hys own soule: he heareth blasphemyes, and telleth it not forth. He that feareth men, shall haue a fal: but whoso putteth his truste in the Lorde is without daunger. Many there be that seeke the princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement commeth from the Lord. The righteous abhorreth the vngodly, but as for those that be in the right way the wicked hate them. * (A childe that kepeth the worde alle without destruccion.) *

phecy that the same manne wledge of holye thynges. Who hathe climed and thou be founde a lyar. Two thynges B haue I required of thee, that thou wylte

Remoue fro me vanitie and lyes: geue me me a necessarye lyuynge. Leste yf I bee to Exod.5.a is a generacion that curseth theyr father, & generacion that thynke themselues cleane, and yet is not clensed from theyr filthines.

There is a generacyon that hath a proude

There is a generacion whose teeth are swoordes, and wyth theyr chawe bones they consume, and deuour the symple of ꝑ

The horseleeche hathe two daughters crying: bryng hyther, bryng hyther. C fyed: yea, foure thynges saye neuer hoe.

the rauens picke out his eyes in the valley, and deuoured be he of the younge Iegles.

There bee three thinges to hye for me:
and as for the fourth ꝑ passeth my knowledge. The waye of an Iegle in the ayre, the waye of a serpente ouer a stone, the waye of a shippe in the sea: and the waye of a manne with a younge woman. Such is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, whiche wypeth her mouth lyke as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: As for me, I haue done no harme. Through three thynges the earth is dysquieted, and the fourth may it not beare. Through a seruaunte that beareth rule: Through a foole that hath to muche bread, through a wyfe worthye hatred when she is maryed, and through an handemayden that is heyre to her maistres. These bee foure thynges in the earth, the whiche are verye litle, but in wysedom they exede the wise.

Prou.6.a The Emmites are but weake people, *yet gather they theyr meate together in the haruest. The conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they theyr couches amonge the rockes. The grashoppers haue not a gide, yet goe they foorth together by heapes. The spyder laboureth wyth her handes, and is in kynges palaces. There bee three thynges that goe styliye: yea, foure are comelye in gooynge. A Lyon whyche is strongeste amõg beastes, and geueth place to no manne: A greyhounde strong in the hynder partes: A rammе also and a kynge, agaynste whome no manne ariseth vp.

yf thou haste done foolishely when thou waste in hyeestate, or yf thou haste taken euill counsayle: thenlaye thyne hand vpon thy mouthe. Whoso thyrmeth milke, maketh butter: and he that rubbeth hys nose, maketh it bleede: Euenso he that causeth wrath bryngeth foorth stryfe.

Kinges ought to iudge iustely. The properte of an honeste maryed wyfe.

The wordes of

Kyng Lamuell and the lesson that his mother taught hym.

MY sõne (why do ye so) ye sõne of my body: O my dere beloued sonne geue not ouer thy strengthe & wayes vnto wemen, whiche are the destruccion euen of kynges. O Lamuell, it is not for kynges, it is not (I saye) for kinges to drinke wyne, nor princes strong drynke (for there is no secret where dronkennes raygneth, &c) lest they be yng dronken forget the lawe, and peruert the iudgemẽt of all poore mennes childrẽ. Geue strong drinke vnto such as are cõdemned to death, & wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye drynke it, and forget their miserye & aduersitye. Bee thou an aduocate for the dombe, and stand in iudgemente thy selfe, to speake for all suche as bee socourlesse in this transitorye worlde. Open thy mouth, defend the thing that is lawful and right, and the cause of the poore and helples.

B +Whoso fyndeth an honeste faythful woman, she is muche more worth thẽ pearles. The hearte of her housebande maye safely truste in her, so that he shall fal in no pouertye. She wyll doo him good and not euill, all the dayes of her lyfe. She occupyeth wol and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchauntes ship, that bryngeth her vitailes from a far. She is vp in the nyghte season, to prouide meate for her houshoulde, and foode for her maidens. She consydereth lande, and byeth it, and wyth the fruite of her handes she plãteth a vineyard. She girdeth her loins wyth strength, and courageth her armes. And yf she perceiue that her housewiferye dothe good, her candle goeth not oute by night. She laieth her fingers to the spindle: and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe.

C She openeth her handes to the poore, yea she stretcheth foorth her handes to suche as haue nede. She feareth not that the cold of winter shal hurt her house, for al her houshoulde folkes are clothed with scarlet. She maketh her self fayre ornamentes, her clothyng is white silke and purple. Her housbande is much set by in the gates, when he sitteth among the rulers of the lande. She maketh cloth of silke, and selleth it, and deliuereth girdels vnto the marchaunte. Strength and honor is her clothyng, and in the latter daye she shall reioyce. She D openeth her mouth with wisedome, and in her tongue is the lawe of grace. She looketh well to the wayes of her houshoulde: and eateth not her bread with idlenes. Her childrẽ shal arise, and cal her blessed: and her housebande shall make much of her. Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but ye goodlyste aboue them al. As for fauor, it is disceitful, and beawty is a vaine thing, but a woman that feareth the Lord, she is worthy to bee praysed. Geue her of the fruyte of her handes, and lette her owne woorkes praise her in the gates.

The booke of the Preacher: otherwyse called Ecclesiastes.

The fyrste Chapter.

All that is in this worlde, is vanitye.

THese are the woordes of the Preacher the sonne of Dauid, kyng of Ierusalē. * All is but moste playne vanitye (sayeth the Preacher) and all is moste vaine (I saye) & but playne vanitye. For what elles hathe a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder ỳ sunne? One generacion passeth away, another commeth: but the yearth abideth styll. The sunne ariseth, the sunne gooeth downe, and returneth to hys place, that he may there ryse vp again. The wynde gooeth towarde the south, and turneth vnto ỳ north, ketcheth his coumpasse, whirleth about, and goeth forth, and his circuite returneth agayne to hymselfe. * All floudes runne into the sea, and yet the sea it selfe is not fylled: for looke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe againe. All thinges are so hard to be knowen that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not satisfied wyth syghte: the eare is not fylled with hearing. ¶ The thing that hath bene, cōmeth to passe again: and the thyng that hath bene done, shalbee done agayne: There is no newe thyng vnder the sunne. Is there any thing wherof it may be said: loe this is newe? For it was long a goe in the times that haue beene before vs. The thyng that is past is out of remēbraunce: Euen so the thinges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon among thē that come after. I my selfe the Preacher was kynge of Israell at Ierusalem, and dyd apply my minde to seke out and search for ỳ knowlage of al thinges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauaile and labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercise themselues therein. Thus haue I consydered all the thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: and loe, they are al but vanitye, and veracion of mind. The crooked can not bee made streyght, nor the thynge that is vnperfecte, cannot bee accompted with thynges that are perfecte. I communed with mine owne heart, saying: loe, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wisedome, then all they that haue been before me in Ierusalem, yea, my heart had great experience of wisedom and knowledge, for therevnto I applyed my mynde, that I myghte knowe what were wysedom and vnderstanding: what were errour and foolyshenesse: and I perceiued, that this also was but a veracio of mind: for where muche wisedome is, there is also great trauayle and disquietnesse: and the more knowledge a manne hath, the more is his care.

The .ii. Chapter.

Abundaunce of ryches, of pleasure, and of buyldyng, are vayne thynges.

THen sayde I thus in my hearte: I Nowe goe to, I wyl take mine ease, and haue good dayes. But loe, that is vanitie also: insomuch that I sayd vnto the man geuen to laughter: thou art mad, and to mirth: what doest thou? So I thoughte in my hearte, to geue my flesche vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysedome, and to comprehende foolyshenesse, vntyl the tyme that (amonge all the thynges whiche are vnder the Sunne) I myght see what were beste for men to doe, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen. * I made gorgeous fayre woorkes. I builded me houses, and planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them, of al maner fruites. ¶ I made pooles of water, to water the greene and fruitfull trees wythall. I boughte seruauntes and maydens: and had a greate housholde. As for cattell and sheepe, I hadde more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer & gold together, euen a treasure of kinges and landes. I prouided me singers, & women, which coulde playe on instrumentes, to make men myrth and pastyme. I gatte me psalteries and songes of musycke. And I was greater, and in more worshyppe thē all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysedome remayned wyth me: and looke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherein soeuer my hearte delyted or had anye pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my hearte reioysed in all ỳ I did: and thys was my porcio of al my trauayle. But when I consydered all the woorkes that my handes had wrought, & all the labour that I had taken therein: lo, al was but vanitye and veracion of mind, & nothyng of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to cōsider wisedom, er-errour and foolishenesse: (for what is he C amonge menne that mighte bee compared to me the kinge in suche woorkes ?) and I sawe that wisedome excelleth foolishenes, as farre as lighte doeth darkenesse. For a wise manne hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darkenesse: I perciued also that they both had one ende. The thoughte I in my minde: yf it happen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what ne-deth me then to labour any more for wise-dome? So I confessed within my hearte, that this also was but vanitye. For the wise are euer as little in remembraunce as the foolishe, for the dayes shall come when all shalbee forgotten: yea, the wyse manne dyeth as wel as the foole. Thus beganne I to be werye of my lyfe, insomuch that I could away with nothing þ is done vnder the Sunne, for all was but vanitye and vexacion of minde: yea I was wery of all my labours, which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I shoulde be faine to leaue them vnto another manne that commeth after me: And who knoweth whether he shalbee a wise manne or a foole? And yet shall he bee Lorde of al my labours, which I with suche wisedome haue taken vnder the sunne. This is also a vaine thynge.

D So I turned me to refraine my minde frō al such trauaile, as I toke vnder the sunne: forsomuche as a manne should werie himselfe with wisedom, with vnderstanding, and opportunitie, and yet bee faine to leaue his labours vnto another, þ neuer swet for them. This is also a vayne thynge and greate mysery. For what getteth a manne of all the labour and trauayle of hys mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heauinesse, sorowe, and disquietnes all the dayes of hys lyfe? Insomuche, that hys hearte can not reste in the nighte:
this is also a vayne thynge. * Is it not Eccle. 5. b better then for a manne to eate and drinke, and hys soule to bee merye in his labour? yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God.

For who will eate or goe more lustely to hys woorke then I? And why? God geueth to the manne that is good before hym, wysedome, vnderstanding and glad-nesse: but vnto the synner he geueth wery-nesse (and superfluous care,) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynge that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is nowe a vayne thynge: yea a very disquietnesse and vexaci-on of mynde.

The. iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in theyr time, and passe awaye in theyr tyme.

EVerye thynge hathe a tyme:
yea, all that is vnder the heauen hathe hys conuenient season. There is a tyme to bee borne, and a time to dye.
There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng that is planted. A time to slaye, and a time to make hoole. A time to breake downe, and a tyme to builde vp.
A tyme to weepe, and a time to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a time to daunce. A tyme to caste awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A time to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracinge.
A tyme to winne, and a time to lose. A time to spare, and a time to spende. A time to cutte in peeces, and a tyme to sowe toge-B ther. * A tyme to keepe silence, and a tyme Eccle. 3. b to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A time of warre, and a time of peace.
What hathe a manne elles (that doeth any thinge) but werinesse and labour? For as touchynge the trauayle and carefulnes, whiche God hathe geuen vnto menne, I see that he hathe geuen it them, to bee exercised in it. All this hath he ordeyned mar-ueylous goodly, to euerye thynge hys due tyme. He hath planted ignorauncе also in the heartes of menne, that they shoulde not comprehend the groūd of his woorkes, whiche he doeth from the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceyued, that in these thynges there is nothyng better for a mā, C then to bee merye, and to doe wel so longe as he liueth. For all that a manne eateth and drynketh: yea, whatsoeuer a manne enioyeth of all hys labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I consydered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothynge can bee putte vnto it, nor taken from it: and that God doeth it to thentente that menne should feare hym. * The thynge that hathe beene, is Eccle. 3. d nowe: and the thinge that is for to come, hathe beene afore tyme, for God restereth agayne the thynge that was paste.
Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sunne vn-godlines in the stead of iudgement, and in-quitye, in steade of ryghteousnesse. Then thought I in my minde: God shal seperate the righteous from the vngodly, and then shalbe the time and iudgement of al comsaules and workes. I cōmuned with mine owne

owne hearte also, concerning the childzen of men: how God hath chosen them, and D yet letteth thē appeare, as though they were beastes: foz it happeneth vnto men as it doeth vnto beastes: and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of dzeth: so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vnto vanitye. They go al vnto one place, foz as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto duste again. * Who knoweth the spirit of man þ a goeth vpward, & the dzeth of the beast þ goeth downe into the earth? Wherfoze I perceiue that there is nothing better foz a man, then to be ioyful in hys labor: foz that is hys portion. But who wil dzing him to see the thing that shal come after hym?

The.iiii.Chapter.

The miseryes of the innocente. The superfluous labours of men. The childe that is poore & wise. &c.

SO I turned me, and * cōsidzed all the violente wzong that is done vnder the sunne: and behold, þ teares of such as wer
A oppzessed, and there was no man to confoze them, oz that would deliuer and defend them from the violence of their oppzessoz. Wherfoze I iudged those that are dead, to be moze happy then those þ be alyue: yea, hym þ is yet vnboznе to be better at ease then they both, because he seeth not the miserable wozkes that are done vnder the sunne. Again, I saw that
B all trauaile and diligence of labour that eurry man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst hys neighbour. This is also a vaine thing, and a vexation of minde. The foole foldeth hys handes together and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (sayeth he) is better with reste, then both the handes full with labour and trauayle of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanitye vnder the Sunne. There is one manne, no moe but hymselfe alone, hauyng neyther childe noz brother: yet is there no ende of hys carefull trauayle: hys eyes cannot bee satysfyed with rychesse, (yet doeth C he not remembre himselfe, and say:) foz whome doe I take suche trauayle? foz whose pleasure doe I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and miserable thyng. Therefoze two are better then one: foz they may wel enioy the profit of theyz labour. Foz if one of them fal, hys companyon helpeth hym vp agayne: But woe is hym that is alone: foz if he fal, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Again whē two slepe together they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme alone? One may bee ouercome, but two maye make resystaunce. A three folde gable is not lyghtely broken. A poore chylde being wyse is better then an olde king that doteth, and cannot beware in tyme to D come. * Some one cummeth out of prison, and is made a kyng: and another whiche is borne in the kyngdome cummeth vnto powerrye. And I perceyued that all menne liuyng vnder the Sunne, goe with the seconde chylde, that shall stande vp in the stede of the other. As foz the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after hym, they are innumerable. And they that come after hym shall not reioyce of hym. Thys is also a vayne thyng and vexacyon of mynde. When thou cummeste into the house of God, kepe thy foote, and draw nye, that God which is at hande may heare: * that thou geue not þ offringes of fooles: foz they know naughte but to doe euil.

wrested in the lande, meruayle not thou at suche a thyng, for one great manne keepeth touche with an other, & the mighty men are in authoritie ouer the poore. The increase of the earth vpholdeth al thing: yea ꝑ king himself is maintained by husbandry. He that loueth money wil neuer be satisfied with money: & whoso delyteth in riches, shal haue no profit therof. Thys is also a vayne thyng. Where as much riches is, there are many also that spend thē away. And what pleasure more hath he ꝑ possesseth them, sauing that he may loke vpon thē with hys eyes? A laboring man sleepeth swetely, whether it be litle or much ꝑ he eateth, but ꝑ abundaunce of ꝑ riche, will not suffer hym to slepe. yet is there a sore plage, which I haue seene vnder ꝑ sūne, (namely) riches kept to ꝑ hurt of him ꝑ hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perysche with hys great misery & trouble: & if he haue a childe, it getteth nothyng. * Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayn: & caryeth nothing away with hym of all hys labour. This is a miserable plage ꝑ he shall goe awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then ꝑ he hath labored in ꝑ wind? Al the dayes of his life also, he did eate in ꝑ darke, with great carefulnes, sickenes, & sorow. * Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thyng, a manne to eate and drynke and to be refreshed of all hys labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his life, which God geueth hym, for thys is hys portion. For vnto whōsoeuer god geueth riches, goodes, and power, he geueth it hym to enioy it, to take it for hys portion, and to bee refreshed of his labour: this is the gyft of God. For he thynketh not muche howe long he shal liue, for somuch as God filleth hys heart with gladnes.

The. vi. Chapter.

The misery of the riche and couetous. The differences of a foole and a wise man.

THere is yet a plague vnder the sunne, and it is a generall thing among menne, when God geueth a manne rychesse, goodes and honour so that he wanteth nothyng of all that hys heart can desyre, and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another manne spendeth them. Thys is a vayne thing, and a miserable plage. If a manne beget a hundred chyldren, and lyue manye yeres, so that hys dayes are manye in numbre, and yet can not enioye hys good, neyther be buried: as for him I say, that an vntimely byrth is better then he. For he cummeth to nought, and spendeth hys tyme in darknes, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more reste thē the other. Yea though he liued two thousand yeres, yet hathe he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh is for hymselfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath ꝑ wise more then ꝑ foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke with fooles, before the liuing? The cleare syghte of the eyes is better then that the soule shoulde walke after desyres of the luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thyng, and a disquietnes of mynd. The thing that hath bene is named already, and knowen that it is euen man himselfe, neither may he goe to law with hym that is mightier then he. Many thinges ther be that encrease vanitye: and what hath a man els? For who knoweth what is good for man liuing, in ꝑ dayes of hys vayne lyfe, which is but a shadow? Or who wil tell a manne what shal happen after him vnder the Sunne?

The. vii. Chapter.

That whiche passeth our strengthes and wittes ought we not to seeke after.

A * Good name is more worth, then a precious ointmente, and the day of death is better thē the day of birth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banketyng house. For there is the ende of al men: and he that is liuing, taketh it to hert. Grauitie is better then to laugh: for when the countenance is heauy, the heart is reformed. The hert of the wise is in the mourning house, but the hearte of the foolyshe is in the house of myrthe. * It is better to geue eare to the chastning of a wyseman, then to heare ꝑ song of fooles. For the laughing of fooles is like ꝑ crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And ꝑ is but a vaine thing. The wise man hateth wrong dealing: and abhorreth the heart that coueteth rewardes. Better it is to consydre the ende of a thyng, then the begynning. The pacient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Bee not hastelye angrye in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome some of fooles. Say not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde time were better then they that be nowe: for that were no wyse question. Wisedome with enheritance is good: yet better is it with them ꝑ without care may beholde the Sunne. For wisedome defendeth as wel as money, & the excellẽt knowledge & wisdom, geueth lyfe vnto him ꝑ hath it in possessiõ. Considre ꝑ worke of god, how ꝑ no man can make ꝑ thing streight C which he maketh croked. Use wel ꝑ time of prosperity, & remẽbre ꝑ tyme of misfortune: for god maketh the one by ꝑ other, so ꝑ a man can finde nothyng eis. All thinges haue I considered in the time of my vanitye: ꝑ the iust man perysheth for his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednes. Therfore, *be ꝑ Eccl.12.c neither to righteous, nor ouerwise, that thou perishe not: be neyther to vnrighteous also nor to foolishe, lest thou dye before thy time. It is good for the to take holde of this, & not to let that goe out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, cummeth furth with them al. Wisedome geueth more courage vnto ꝑ wyse, then x̃ mighty men of the citie: for there is not Eccl.6.g one iust vpon the earth ꝑ doeth good, & Prou.20.b. synneth not. Take not hede vnto euerye 1.Ioh.1.b word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunt curse thee: for thyne own heart knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft times spoken euil by other men. All these thinges haue I proued in wisedome: for Eccl.2.c I thought to be wise but she went farther fro me then she was before, yea and so depe that I might not reche vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto know- D ledge, and to seeke and searche oute sci- ence, wysedome and vnderstandyng: to know the foolishenes of the vngodlye, & the errour of doting fooles. And I foũd Prou.7.b that *a woman is bytterer then deathe, for she hath cast abroade her hearte as a net that men fysche with: and her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shal escape from her: but the sinner wil be taken with her. Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thing must be considered with an other, that a man may come by knowledge: whiche as yet I seke and fynde it not. Among a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one womanne among al. Loe, this onely haue I found, Gene.1.d that *God made manne iuste and vpright, but they sought many inuencions.

The. viii. Chapter.

The kinges commandement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of ꝑ chefe thinges vnder the sũne.

WHo is wyse? Who hath knowledge A to make an answere? A mans wisedom *maketh his face to shine: but Ps.10.17.b vnshamefastnesse putteth it out of fauor. Iob.9.b I must kepe the kinges commaũdement, and the oth that I haue made vnto god. Be not hasty to goe out of his sight, and see thou continue in no euyll thyng, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym, that dooeth he. Like as whẽ a kyng geueth a charge, his commaundemente is myghtye: Euen so, *who may say vnto hym: what doest Iob.9.b thou? ‡ Whoso kepeth the commaunde- ‡Eccl.12.a mente, shall feele no harme: but a wyse mannes hearte dyscerneth the tyme and iudgemente. For euerye thyng will haue opportunitye and iudgemente, and thys B is the thyng that maketh menne full of carefulnesse and sorow. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who will tel hym? Neyther is there any manne that hath power ouer the spirite, to keepe styll the spirite, nor to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: is it not he also that can make an end of the battail? neyther may vngodlynesse delyuer them that medle withal.

All these thinges haue I considered, & applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sunne: howe one manne hath lordshyp vpon an other, to hys own harme. For * I haue seene often the vn- Ps.37.c godlye brought to theyr graues: and yet they haue returned into the citie agayne, and came from the place of holye menne, whiche in the citye were growen oute of memorye, as were those also that lyued wel. Thys is also a vayn thing, because C nowe that euil woorkes are not hastely punyshed, the hearte of manne geueth hymselfe ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euyll persone offende an hundred tymes, and God defer, geuing him long lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall goe well with them that feare God, because they haue hym before theyr eyes. Again, as for ꝑ vngodly it shal not be wel with hym, neyther shal he prolong his dayes, but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God. Yet is there a vanitye vpon earthe: There be iuste menne, vnto whome it happeneth, as thoughe they hadde the woorkes of the vngodlye. I-gayne, there be vngodly, with whome D it goeth as though they had the wozkes of the righteous. This haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therfoze I commende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the sunne, then to eate and dzynke, and to be mery: foz that shall be haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, whiche God greueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applied my mynde to learne wysedome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the wozlde (and that of suche a fashyon that I suffered not mine eies to slepe, neither day noz night:) I vnderstode of all the wozkes of god, but it is not possible foz a man to attayn vnto the woozkes that are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe hys laboure to seeke them out, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyse mã wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

The.ir. Chapter.

A manne worketh not by the righteousnes of hys owne woorkes, whether he bee worthye of loue or hate. A manne ought to liue merily with his wife. A prayse of wisedome.

I Oz al these thynges purposed I in my minde to seke out. The ryghteous and wyse, yea, and theyr seruantes also, are in the hande of God: and there is no manne that knoweth eyther loue oz hate, but al thynges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: it goeth with the ryghteous as with the vngodlye: ✻ Iob.9.c with the good and cleane, as with the vncleane: with him that offereth, as with hym that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with the verteous, so goeth it also with the sinner. As it happeneth vnto the per-iured, so happeneth it also to hym that is afrayde to bee fozswozne. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a miserye, that it happe-neth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hearties of menne are ful of wickednesse, and madde foolyshenesse is in theyr heartes, as longe as they lyue, but yll they dye.

B And why? as long as a manne liueth he hath an hope: foz a quicke dogge (say they) is better the a dead Lyon: foz they that bee liuynge, knowe that they shall dye: but they that bee deade, knowe nothyng, neyther deserue they anye moze.
Foz theyr memozyall is forgotten, so that they bee neyther loued, hated, noz enuyed: neyther haue they any moze part there was founde a poore manne (but he was wyse) whiche with hys wisedome delyuered the citye: yet was there no body that had anye respect to such a simple manne. Then sayd I: Wisedome is better then strength. Neuertheles a symple

The.x. Chapter.

The difference betweene a foole and a wyse manne. Fortunate and happye is that Realme, whiche hath a wyse prynce.

I dead

A Dead flye doth corrupt swete oyntmente, and maketh it to stynke: Euen so otte tymes he that is made for wisedome and honour, is abhorred because of a litle foolysheneſſe. A wyse mannes hearte is vpon the ryghthande, but a fooles heart vpon the left. A foole will shewe hymselfe when he goeth by the way: yet thynketh he that euerye man dooeth as foolyshelye as hymselfe. If a prynces pall spirite bee greuen thee to beare rule, *bee not negligente then in thyne office: for he that can take cure of hymselfe auoydeth great offences. An other plague is there, whiche I haue seue vnder the Sunne: namelye, the igno-raunce that is commenlye among pryn-ces, in that a foole sytteth in great dyg-nitye, and the ryche are sette downe beneath. I haue seene seruaunte ryde vpon horses, & princes goyng vpon theyr feete as it were seruaunte. *But he that dyggeth vp a pyt shal fal therin himself, and whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal byte him. Whoso remoueth stones, shall haue trauayle withall: and he that heweth wood, shalbe hurt therewith. When an yron is blũt, & the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that with might: Euen so doth wisedom folow diligence. A babler of his tong is no better then a serpent ỹ stingeth without hyssing. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth, are gracious: but ỹ lippes of a foole wil destroye himselfe. The beginning of his talking is foolisheneſſe, & the last worde of his mouthe is starke madnes. A foole is ful of wordes, and a man cãnot tel what shal come to passe, who will then warne him of it that shal folow after him? The labour of the foolyshe is grieuous vnto them, while they know not how to goe into the citie. Woe be vnto thee (O thou lande) whose king is but a chylde, & whose princes are early at theyr bankets. But well is thee (O thou lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose princes eate in due season, for neceſſitie and not for luste. Thorow slouthfulnes ỹ balkes fal downe, & thorrow vydle handes it raineth in at ỹ house.
Meate maketh mẽ to laugh, & *wine ma-keth them mery: but vnto money are all thinges obedient. 20. Iche the kyng no euil in thy thought, and speake no hurt of the riche in thy priuy chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

The.xi. Chapter.

Riches ought to be distributed vnto the nedye.

LAy thy bread vpon wete faces, & so shalt thou fynde after many dayes.
Geue parte seuen dayes, & also vpon the.viii. for thou knowest not what misery shal come vpon earthe. When the cloudes are ful, they powre out rayne vpon ỹ earth. And when the tree falleth (whether it be toward ỹ south or north) in what place soeuer it fal, there it lyeth.
He that regardeth ỹ wind, shal not sow:
and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes, shall not reape. Nowe, lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the spirite how it entreth into the litle body, being yet in the mothers wombe: Euen so thou kno-west not the woorkes of God, which is the woorkemaister of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy han-des to sowe thy seede, whether it bee in the mornyng or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether thys or that shall prosperе: and if they bothe take, it is the better. The lyghte is swete, and a pleasaunte thyng is it for the eyes to looke vpon the Sunne. If a manne lyue many yeres, and bee gladde in them all, lette hym remembre the dayes of darkeneſſe, whiche shalbe many: and that folowth, all thynges shall bee but vanitye. Bee gladde then (O thou younge manne) in thy youth, and let thy hearte be merye in thy yonge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne heart, and the luste of thyne eyes, but be thou sure, ỹ God shall bring thee into iudgement for al these thinges.

The.xii. Chapter.

From our youth ought we to consider, and re-garde the goodnes of God.

PUt away dyspleasure out of thyne heart, & remoue euill frõ thy body: for childehood, and youth is but vanitie. Remembre thy maker ỹ soner in thy youth, or e-uer the dayes of aduersitie come, & or the yeres drawe nye, whẽ thou shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in thẽ: before the sunne, the light, the mone & starres be darkned, and or the cloudes turne agayne after ỹ rayne, when ỹ kepers of ỹ house shal trẽble, and when the stronge men shal bowe themselues, when the mylners stande styl, because they bee so fewe, and when the syghte of the wyndowes shall waxe dymme

dymme, when the doores in the stretes shalbe shut, & when the voyce of the mylner shalbe layed downe: when men shall ryse vp at the voyce of the birde, & when al ꝑ daughters of musik shalbe brought low: when men shal feare in hye places, and be afrayde in the stretes: when ꝑ Almond tree shall florysshe, & be laden with the grasshopper, & whē al lust shal passe (because man goeth to hys long home: & the mourners goe about ꝑ stretes.) Or euer the syner lace be taken away, & or the golden wel be brokē. Or the pot be broken at the wel, & the whele vpon ꝑ cesterne. Then shal the dust be turned again vnto earth, from whence it came: and the spirit shal returne vnto god, which gaue it. * Al is but vanitie, (sayth ꝑ preacher) Eccles.1.a al is but playne vanitye. The preacher was yet more wyse, and taught the people knoweledge: he gaue good heede, sought out the grou̇nd, and set furth many parables: his diligence was to finde out acceptable wordes, right scripture, Hebr.4.c and the wordes of truethe. For * the wordes of the wyse are lyke prickes & nayles, that gor thorow, wherwith the stuffe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepehearde onelye. Therfore beware (my sonne) of that doctryne that is beside thys: for to make manye bookes, it is an endelesse worke: and to loude crying werieth the body. Lette vs heare the conclusion of al thynges: Feare God, and kepe hys commaundementes: For that toucheth all menne. For God shall iudge al workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euil.

The Ballet of

Ballettes of Salomō: called in Latin, Canticum Canticorum.

The.i. Chapter.

A mistical song of the spirituall and godlye loue betwene Christe the spouse, and the churche or congregacion his spousesse.

I That he woulde kysse me wt the kisses of his mouth: for thy loue is more pleasaunte then wyne, and that beecause of the good and pleasaunte sauoure of thy moste precious balmes. Thy name is * a swete smellyng oyntmente when it is shed furth: therfore do the maidens loue thee, drawe thou me vnto thee, we will runne after thee. The king hath brought me into his priuie chambres. We wil be glad and reioyce in ther: we thinke more of thy loue then of wyne. They that bee righteous loue thee. I am blacke (O ye B daughters of Ierusalem) lyke as * the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hanginges of Salomon, but yet am I fayre and wel fauoured withal. Maruell not at me that I am so blacke: for why, the sūne hath shyned vpon me. My mothers chyldren had euill wil at me, they made me the keper of ꝑ vineyardes, but myne owne vineyard haue I not kept. Tel me of hym whome my soule loueth where thou feedeste the shepe, where thou makest them rest at the noone daye: for why shall I be lyke him that goeth wrong about the flockes of thy companions. If C thou know not thy selfe (O thou fayrest among weomen) then go thy way furth after the footesteppes of the shepe, and fede thy goates beside the shepheardes tentes. Vnto * the hoost of Pharaos cha- Ca.1.d rettes, haue I compared thee, O my loue. Thy chekes and thy necke is beautyfull as the turtles, and hanged with spanges, and goodly Jewelles: a necke- bande of golde will we make thee with syluer buttons. When the king sitteth at the table, he shall smell my Nardus: a boudle of myrre is my loue vnto me, he will lye betwixt my brestes: a clustre of D Camphore in the vineyardes of Engaddye is my loue vnto me. * O howe fayre Cant.1.e arte thou (my loue,) Oh how fayre arte thou, thou hast doues eies. O how faire art thou (my beloued,) how wel fauored art thou. Our bed is dect with floures, the sylynges of oure house are of Cedre tree, and our crosse ioyntes of Cipresse.

The.ii. Chapter.

I Am the lilye of ꝑ field, & rose I of ꝑ valleyes: as ꝑ rose among ꝑ thornes, so is my loue amōg the daughters. Like as the appie tree amōg the trees of ꝑ wood, so is my beloued among the sōnes. My delite is to sit vnder his shadow, for hys fruit is swete vnto my throte. He bryngeth me into his wineseller, his banner spred ouer me, is loue. Sette about me cuppes of wyne, cōfort me with apples: for

B ters of Jerusalem) by the roes & hindes of the fielde, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her: till she be content her selfe. We thinke I heare the voice of my beloued: lo, there cummeth he hoppyng vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the lytle hilles. My beloued is lyke a roe or a young hart. Behold, he standeth behind our wal, he loketh in at ꝑ windowe, & pepeth thorowe the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me: O stand vp my loue, my beautiful, & goe to thine owne: for loe, the winter is now past, the C rayne is awaye & gone. The flowres are come vp in the fielde, the time of the birdes singing is come, & the voice of ꝑ turtle doue is heard in our lande. The figtre brigeth furth her figges, & the vines beare blossomes, and haue a good smell. O stande vp then, and come my loue, my beautiful, & come I say (o my doue) out of the caues of ꝑ rockes, out of the holes of the wal: O let me se thy countenance, & heare thy voice, for swete is thy voice, & fayre is thy face. Get vs ꝑ foxes, yea the lytle foxes that hurt ꝑ vines, for our vynes beare blossomes. * My loue is Cant. 6.a mine, & I am his, whiche feedeth among the roses, vntill the day breake: and til ꝑ shadowes be gone. Come againe (O my beloued) and be lyke as a Roe, or a yong heart vpon the wide mountaynes.

The. iii. Chapter.

BY nyght in my bed I soughte hym, I whome my soule loueth: yea dilygently soughte I hym, but I found hym not. I will gette vp (thoughte I) and goe aboute the citie, in the wayes, in all the stretes will I seeke hym whome my soule loueth: but when I soughte hym, I founde hym not. The watchmen also that goe about the citie founde me.
B Sawe ye not hym whome my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I founde hym whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon hym, and will not lette hym goe, vntyll I bryng hym into my mothers house, & into her cham-

C bee contente her selfe. Who is thys that cummeth vp out of the wildernesse, lyke vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of myrre, frankensence, and al maner spices of the Apoticary? Behold, about Salomons bedstede there stand thre score valeant men of the most mighty in Israel. They hold swordes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery manne also hath his sword vpon his thygh, because of feare in the nighte. Kyng Salomon had D made hymselfe a palace of the wood of Libanus, the pillers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde is pleasantly paued with loue, for the daughters of Jerusalem. Goe furth, O ye daughters of Sion, and behold kyng Salomon in the croune wherwith his mother crowned him in ꝑ day of his mariage, and in the daye of the gladnes of his heart.

The. iiii. Chapter.

I BEhowe fayre arte thou my loue, Cant. 1.b behowe fayre arte thou? thou hast doues eyes, besyde that which lyeth hid within. * Thy heery lockes are Cant. 6.a lyke the wool of a flocke of goates that hee thorow vpon mounte Gilead: Thy teeth are lyke shepe of the same bygnes, which went vp from the washing place: where euery one beareth two twinnes, & not one vnfruictful among them. Thy lippes are lyke a rosecolored ribband, thy wordes are louely, thy chekes are lyke a piece of a pōgranat within thine heeres, thy necke is lyke the tower of Dauid buylded with costly stones, lying out on ꝑ sides, wherupō ther hāg a. M. childes, yea, al the weapōs of ꝑ Gyantes. * Thy Cant. 7.a two breastes are lyke two twynnes of young Roes, which feede among roses.
B O that I might goe to the mountayn of myrre, and to the hyll of frankensence: tyll the day breake, and til the shadowes be paste away. Thou art al fayre, (O my loue) and no spot is there in thee. Come to me from Libanus (O my spouse) come to me from Lybanus, looke from the toppe of Amana, from the toppe of Sanyr, and Hermon, from the Lyons dennes, and from the mountaynes of the Leopardes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my hert, O my sister, my spouse, thou haste bewitched myne hearte with one of thine eyes, and with one chayne of thy necke. O howe fayre are thy breastes, my syster, my spouse? Thy breastes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thyne oyntmentes passeth al spyces.

Thy

Thy lyppes, O my spouse, drop as the hony combe: yea, mylke and hony is vnder thy tounge, and the smell of thy garmentes, is lyke the smell of Libanus. A gardē wel locked is my sister, my spouse, a garden wel locked, and a sealed well.

C The fruites that are planted in thee, are lyke a very paradyse of pomgranates, with swete fruites: as Camphore, Nardus, & Saffrō, Calamus, & Sinnamon, with all swete smellyng trees: Myrre, Aloes, and all the beste spyces: a wel of gardens, a wel of liuing waters, which runne downe from Libanus. Up thou northwinde, come thou southwinde, and blow vpon my garden, þ the smel therof may be caried on euery side: yea, that my beloued may come into his gardē & eate of the swete fruites that growe therin.

The. v. Chapter.

A I Am come into my garden, O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I haue eaten hony with my hony combe, I haue dronke my wine with my mylke. Eate, O ye frēdes, drink and be merye, O ye beloued. Is I am a slepe, and my hearte is waking, I heare the voyce of my beloued, when he knocketh. Open to me, O my syster, my loue, my doue, my darlynge, for my head is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are full of the nyghte droppes. I haue putte of my coate, howe can I doo it on agayn? I haue washed my fete, how shal I fyle them agayne? My loue put in his hand at the hole, & my hert was moued within me. I stoode vp to open vnto my beloued, & my handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ranne downe my fyngers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his way. Nowe when he spake, my hearte was gone: I soughte hym, but I coulde not fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheles he gaue me no aunswere. So the watchemenne that wente about the citie, found me: smote me, and wounded me: yea, they that kepte the walles, C toke away my kercheafe fro me.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, if ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hym how that I am sicke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue aboue other louers, O thou fairest amōg women? Or what can thy loue do more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitly? As for my loue he is white, & red coloured, a goodly person among .x. thousande: his head is as the moste fyne gold, þ lockes of his heere are bushed, & blacke as a crow. His eyes are as þ eyes of doues by þ water brokes, as though they were washed with mylke, & are set lyke pearles in gold. His chekes are lyke D a garden bed, wherein the Apoticaryes plante all maner of swete thynges. Hys lippes are lyke roses that droppe swete smellyng Myrre. Hys handes are lyke golde ringes, hauing inclosed the precyous stone of Tharsys. Hys bodye is as the pure yuory, decte ouer with Saphires: Hys legges are as the pyllers of Marble, set vpon sockets of golde. Hys face is as Libanus, & as the bewty of þ Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouth are swete: yea, he is altogether louelye. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, suche one is my loue.

The. vi. Chapter.

WHither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayreste among weomen) whi- I ther is thy loue departed? We will seeke hym with thee. My loue is gone downe into hys garden, vnto the swete smellyng beddes, that he maye refreshe himselfe in the garden and gather roses. My loue is myne and I am hys, whiche feedeth among the roses. Thou arte beautyfull, O my loue, as is the place B of Thirza: thou art fayre as Jerusalem, fearefull as an army of men, with theyr baners. Turne away thyne eyes fro me, for they haue sette me on fyre. * Thy Cantic. heery lockes are lyke a flocke of goates, shorne vpon the mounte of Gilead. Thy teeth are lyke a flocke of shorne shepe, whiche goe oute of the washyng place, where euerye one beareth twynnes, and not one vnfruitfull among them. Thy chekes are lyke a piece of a pomgranate, within thy volupers. There are * .lx. 1. Reg. 11. Quenes .lxxx. wyues, and damoselles without noumbre: one is my doue, one is my darling. She is the onely beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her that C bare her. When the daughters sawe her they sayd she was blessed: yea, þ quenes and wiues praised her. What is she this that loketh forth as the morning-fayre as the moone, cleare as the Sunne, and fearefull as an army of men with theyr banners? I went downe into the nut garden to see what grewe by the brokes, and to looke yf the vyneyarde flouryshed, or yf ꝑ D pomgranates were shot forth. I knewe not that my soule had made me the chariot of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne againe, turne agayne, O thou perfecte one turne agayne, turne agayne and wee wyl looke vpon thee. What wyll ye see in the Sulamite? She is lyke menne of warre syngyng in a coumpanye.

The .vii. Chapter.

I HOw pleasaunte are thy treadinges vp thy shoes, thou princes daughter? Thy thighes are lyke a fayre Jewell, which is wrought by a cunnyng workemaysters. Thy nauell is lyke a round goblet, which is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a heape of wheate that is sette about vp roses. * Thy two brestes are lyke two Cant.4.a twins of younge roes. Thy necke is as it were a tower of yuory: thine eyes also are lyke the water pooles that are in Hesebon, beside the porte of Bathrabim: thy nose is B like the tower of Libanus, whiche loketh toward Damascus. That head that standeth vpon thee, is lyke Carmell: & the heare of thy heade is lyke purple, and lyke a kyng going forth with his garde about him. O how fayre & louely art thou my derlyng in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a palme tree, and thy brestes like the grapes. I said: I will clime vppe into the Palme tree, and C take hold of his hie braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vine clusters, the smell of thy nostrelles like as the smell of apples, and thy iawes like the beste wyne. Which Cant.5.d goeth straite vnto my beloued, & rusheth forth by the lyppes of the auncient elders. There will I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall turne hym vnto me. O come on my D loue, we wyll go forth into the fielde, and take oure lodgynge in the villages. In the mornyng will we goe se the vineyarde: we wyll see yf the vyne bee spronge forth, yf the grapes be growen, and if the pomgranates be shot out. There wyll I geue thee my brestes: the Mandragoras geue their swete smel, and beside our doores are al maner of pleasaunt fruites, bothe new & olde: which I haue kept for thee, O my beloued.

The .viii. Chapter.

I THat I myght finde thee without, and kisse thee, whom I loue as my brother whiche sucke my mothers brestes: and that thou shalt not be despised, I wyll leade thee and bringe thee into my mothers house: that thou mightest teache me, and ꝑ I myght geue thee drinke of spiced wine, and of the swete sappe of my pomgranates. * Hys Cant.2.c lefte hand shall bee vnder my head, and his ryghte hande shall embrace me. I charge B you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her tyl she bee contente her selfe. What is she this, that commeth vp from the wildernes, and leaneth vpon her loue? I waked the vp among the appell trees, where thy mother conceyued the, where thy mother (I saye) brought the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thyne heart, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mightye as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Her coles are of fyer, and a very flame of the Lorde: so ꝑ many waters are not able to quenche loue, neyther may the stremes drowne it. yea, if a man woulde geue all the good of C his house for loue, he shoulde counte it nothing. Our sister is but younge, and hath no brestes, what shal we do for our sister, when she shall bee spoken for? yf she bee a wal, we shal build a siluer bulwarke there vpon: yf she be an open doore, we shal faste her vp with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hathe founde fauoure in hys sight. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, and this vineyarde deliuered he D vnto the kepers: that euery one for ꝑ fruite therof shoulde geue hym a thousande pe-ces of siluer. My vineyard is in my sight: ꝑ (O Salomon) muste haue a thousande, & the kepers two hundreth wyth the fruit.

Thou that dwelleste in the gardins, O let me heare thy voice, that my companyons maye hearken to ꝑ same. O get the away, my loue, & be as a Roe, or a yonge heart vpō
the swete smellyng mountaynes.

The

The booke of the Prophete Esay.

The fyrste Chapter.

Esay prophecyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem, because of theyr synnes.

THe vision of Esay the sone of Amos, which he sawe vpon Juda & Jerusalem: in ỹ dayes of Uzia, and Joathã, Ahaz and Jehezikiah kynges of Juda.

Heare, O heauen, and herken O earth. For the Lorde hathe spoken. I haue nourished and broughte vppe children, but they haue done wyckedlye against me. The oxe hath knowen hys owner, and the asse his maysters crybb: but Israell hathe receyued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this sinfull nacion, a people of greate iniquitye: a frowarde generatiõ, vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the Lord, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backewarde. Wherby should ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer falling awaye. The whole head is sicke, and the heart is heauy. From the sole of the foote vnto the heade, there is no whole part in al your body, but al are woundes, botches, sores and stripes whiche can neyther be helped, bounde vp, mollifyed, nor eased with anye oyntmente. Your lande lyeth waste, youre cityes are burnt vp, your enemies deuour your lãde, and ye muste bee fayne to stand, and looke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemies in a battaile. Moreouer, ỹ daughter of Syon is lefte alone like a cotage in a vineyarde, like a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, lyke a besieged cytye. And except the Lord of hostes had left vs a fewe alme: we should haue bene as Sodoma, & like vnto Gomorra. Heare ỹ word of the lord, ye Lordes of Sodoma, and hearken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of ỹ burnt offerynges of wethers, and of the fatnes of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes, and goates. When ye appeare before me, who requireth you to tread within my porches? Offre me no mo oblations, for it is but loste laboure. Incense is an abominable thynge vnto me. I may not away with your newe Moones, your Sabbothes, and solemne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holye dayes and fastinges, & euen fro my very heart. They make me wery, I cannot abyde them. When you holde out your handes, I wyll turne mine eyes frõ you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wyll I heare nothynge at all, seeyng your handes are full of bloude. Wash you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euill thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doyng of euil. Learne to do ryght, applye youre selues to equitye, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to hys ryghte, let the widdowes complainte come before you. Nowe go to (sayeth the Lord) let vs talke together. Though youre synnes bee as red as scarlet, they shalbee as whyte as snowe. And though they were like purple, they shalbee as white as woll, yf ye be louinge and obediente, ye shall enioy the best thinge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye bee obstinate and rebellious, ye shalbee deuoured with the sworde: for thus the lorde hath promised with his own mouth. How happeneth it then that the righteous cytye (which was full of equity) is become vnfaythfull as an whore? Ryghteousnesse dwelt in it, but nowe murtherers. The syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne mixt with water. Thy princes are wycked and companyons of theues: They loue gyftes altogether, & gape for rewardes. As for ỹ fatherles, they helpe him not to hys right, neyther wyll they lette the widowes causes come before them. Therefore saieth the lorde God of hoostes, the mightye one of Israell: Ah, I muste ease me of mine enemies, and auenge me of mine aduersaries. I shall laye my hande vpon the, and burne out thy drosse from the fynest and pureste, and put out all thy tynne, and sette thy iudges againe as they wer sometime, and thy Senatoures as they wer from the beginning. Then shalt thou be called the righteous citie, the faithfull citie. Syon shalbee redemed with equitie, and they shall turne again vnto her in righteousnes. For ỹ trãsgressours & vngodly, & such as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, muste altogether bee vtterlye destroyed. And except ye bee ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so delited, and of the gardens that ye haue chosen, ye shalbee as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye: and as a garden ỹ hath

hath no moistnes. And as for the glorye of these thynges, it shalbee turned to dyre straw, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall bothe burne together, so that no manne shall bee able to quenche them.

The. ii. Chapter.

Of the commyng and deathe of Christe, and of the callynge of the Heathen.

THis is the woorde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda and Jerusalem. It wyll bee also in the laste day, that the hil where the house of ỳ lord is builded, shalbee the chiefe among hilles, and exalted aboue al litle hilles. And al nacions shall preace vnto hym, and the multitude of people shall goe, speakynge thus one to another: vp, * let vs goe to the hyl of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs hys waye, and that we may walke in his pathes. ỻ for the lawe shall come oute of Sion, and the woorde of the Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amõge the Heathen, and shall reforme the multitude of people: they shall breake theyr swoordes also into mattockes, and theyr speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyfte vppe a weapon againste another, neither shal they learne to fyghte from thence furth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the lyght of the Lord. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they goor farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sorceries (whom they haue as the Philistines hadde) and in straunge children they thinke themselues to haue ynough. Their land is full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of their treasure: Their lande is also full of horses, and no ende is there of theyr charretters. Their lande also is full of vaine Goddes, and bee fore the woorke of theyr own handes haue they bowed themselues, yea euen before the thynge that their owne fingers haue made. There kneleth the mã, there falleth the man down before them, so that thou canste not bring him away from there. And therfore get the into some rocke, and hide the in the ground, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glorye of hys maiestye: Whiche casteth downe the high lookes of presumpteous persones, and bringeth lowe the pride of man, and the Lorde onlye shalbee exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of Hoostes shall goe ouer all pride and presumpcion, vpon al the that exalt themselues, & shal bring them al down: vpon al high and stout Cedertrees of Libanus, and vpõ al the okes of Basa, vpon all highe hilles, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costelye towres, & vpon al stronge walles, vpon al shippes of the sea, and vpon euerye thynge that is glorious and pleasaunte to looke vpon. And it shall bring downe the pride of man, and lay mans presumpteousnesse ful low, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victory in that daye. But the idols shall vtterly be roted out. Men shall crepe into holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of ỳ lord, and for the glory of his maiesty: what time as he shall wake him vp to condemne ỳ earth. Thẽ shal mã cast away his goddes of siluer, and his goddes of golde, (which he neuertheles had made to honour them) vnto Moles and Battes. And they shal crepe into the caues and rockes, & into the cliftes of hard stones, for feare of god, & for the glory of his maiestie, when he ryseth to condemne the yearth. Feare not ye then any man, whose brith is in his nosetreis. For what is he of reputation?

The. iii. Chapter.

He prophecieth that at the tomming of Christ al strength and power shalbee put forth of Jury.

FOr loe, the Lord god of Hoostes doth take away from Jerusalẽ, & Juda, al possessions & power, al meat and drinke, the captain & the soulyer, ỳ iudge & the prophet, ỳ wise and the aged man, the prynce of fiftye yere old, & the honorable: the Senatours & men of vnderstanding, the maisters of craftes, and oratours. And I shall geue them children to bee theyr princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall bee pylled and polled, and one shall euer be doyng violence and wrong to another. The boye shall presume againste the elder, and the vyle persone agaynste the honorable. Yea, one shall take a frende of his own kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou haste clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs from this fall and parell.

Then shall he sweare and saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreouer, there is neither meat nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye, because that bothe theyr woordes and counsayles are againste the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of hys maiestye vnto anger. The chaungyng of their countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare declare theyr owne synnes themselues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Woe be vnto their soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto themselues. Byd the ryghteous do well for they shal enioy the fruites of theyr studies. But woe be to the vngodlye and vnrighteous, for they shalbe rewarded after theyr workes. Children are extorcyoners of my people, & wemen haue rule of the. O my people, þ leaders deceaue the and destroye þ way of thy fote steppes.

C The Lorde is here to common of the matter and standeth to geue iudgement of the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and Princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyarde, the preies in youre houses.

Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the poore, sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Seeyng the daughters of Sion are become so proud, and come in with stretched out neckes, and with vaine wanton eyes: seeyng they come in tripping so nicelye with theyr fete: Therefore shall the Lorde shaue the heades of the daughters of Sion, & shall discouer their shame. In that dayr shall the Lorde take awayr the gorgeousnesse of theyr apparell, and spanges chaines partelets, & collars braceletes, and hooues, the goodlye flowred, wide and broydred rayment, brooches, and headebandes, rynges and garlandes, holye day clothes and vales, kerchefes and pinnes, glasses and cipresses, bonets, and tasses.

And in steade of good smel, there shalbe stinke among them. And for theyr girdles, there shalbee loose bandes. And for wel set heere there shalbee baldnes. In steade of a stomacher, a sacke clothe, & for theyr brewtye wyth erdnes, and sunne burnyng. Your housemandes and mightye menne shal perysche with the sweerde in battayle. At that time shal their gates mourne & complaine, and they shall sit as desolate folke vpon the yearth.

The.iiii. Chapter.

For want of menne, seuen women desyre to haue one husbande.

I Then shall seuen wiues take holde of one man: and saye, we wyll saye all our meat & clothing together in cõmen: onelye that we maye be called thy wines, and that this shamefull reproche maye be taken from vs.

After that tyme shall the braunche of the Lorde bee bewtifull and mightye, and the fruit of the earth shalbe faire and pleasaut, for those Israelites that shall spring therof. Then shal the remnaunte in Sion, and the remnaunte at Jerusalem ber called holy: namely all suche as are written among the lyuing at Jerusalem: what tyme as þ Lorde shall washe away the filthynesse of the daughters of Syon, and pourge the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wind B of his iudgemente, and with fyre Moreouer, vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion, and vpõ their whole congregatiõ, shall the Lord prouide a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shining of a flamyng fyre by night, for al theyr glorye shalbee preserued. And Jerusalem shalbee a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place and refuge where a manne maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

The.v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyarde, with an exclamation of couetousnes and drunkennes.

NOwe wyll I synge my beloued I frende a songe of my frendes, because of hys vineyarde. My beloued frende hath a vineyarde in a verye fruitefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the middest of it builded he a towre, & made a winepresse therin: And afterwarde when he loked that it shoulde bringe hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye Citesens of Jerusalem and whole Juda:) Judge I pray you betwixt me & my vineyard. What more could haue ben done for it, þ I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I B loked to haue had grapes of it? Wel now I shall tell you howe I wyll doe with my vineyarde. I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wal, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neither bee dygged nor cutte, but beare thornes and bryers: I wyll also forbydde the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for þ vineyard of the lord of Hoostes: it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda his fayre planting. Of these he loked for equitie, but se there is wronge: for ryghteousnes, lo, it is but mysery.

Woe vnto them that ioyne one house to C another, & bringe one lande so nygh vnto another, that the poore can gette no more

grounde and that ye maye dwell vpon the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the lorde of Hostes: shall not many greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste that no man shall dwell in them? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a quarte, and thyrty bushels of sede shal geue but an Epha.

Woe be vnto them that ryse vp early to folowe dronkennes, & to them that continue so vntyl nyghte and tyll they be sette on fire with wyne. In those companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, & consydre not the operacion of hys handes. Therfore commeth my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstanding. Their glory is kampished wyth hunger, and their pryde is marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hel, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pryde, boastynge, and welth, wyth suche as reioyse therin may descend into it. Thus hath mā a fal, & is brought lowe, and the hygh loke of ꝑ proude shalbe layde downe. But the lorde of Hostes is exalted in iudgemente, and God that is holye, is praysed in righteousnelle: Then shall the shepe eate in order, and the ryche mens landes that wer laid wast, shall straungers deuoure. Woe be vnto thē, that drawe wickednes vnto them with cordes of vanytye: & synne, as it were with a carte rope. Wyche vse to speake on thys maner: let hym make haste nowe, and goe forth wyth hys worke, that we maye se it. Let the counsel of the holye one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. Woe be vnto them that cal euell good, and good euell, whych make darkenelle lyght, and light darkenelle, that make sowre swete, and swete sowre. Woe be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstanding. Woe be vnto them that are stronge to suppe out wyne, and experte men to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence wyth the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: euen so their roote shalbe as corruption, and their blossome shal vanyshe away lyke dust: for they haue cast away ꝑ lawe of ꝑ lord of Hostes, & blasphemed the worde of the holy maker of Israel. Therfore is the wrath of the lord kyndled also agaynst hys people, & he shaketh hys hande at them: yea, he hath smyten so that the hylles dyd tremble.

And their karcases did lye in ꝑ open stretes lyke myer. And in all thys the wrath of God hath not ceassed, but hys hande is stretched out styll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people, and call vnto them in a farre countrie: and beholde, they shall come hastelye wyth spede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor sleperye persoune. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, nor lowse the latchet of hys shooe. His arowes are sharpe, and all hys bowes bent. His horse hooues are like flint, and his carte wheles lyke a stormy wynde. His crye is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantche vp the praye, and no man shall recouer it, or gette it from thē. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the sea. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe all darknelle and sorowe. Yf we loke towarde heauen, behold, it shalbe darcke.

The. vi. Chapter.

Esay sawe the glory of the Lord, and was sente to prophecye the desolacion of Iurye.

IN the same yeare that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the lorde sittinge vpon an hygh and glorious seate, and hys traine fylled the temple. And about hym stode Seraphins, whereof euery one had syx wynges. Wyth twayne eche couered his face, wyth twayne his fete, and wyth twayne dyd he flye. They cryed also eche one to another on this maner: holy, holy, holy is the lorde of Hostes. The whole worlde is full of hys glorye. Yea, the greses and dorechekes moued at his crynge, & the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O woe is me, for I am lost: in as muche as I am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwel amonge people that hath vncleane lyppes also: for myne eyes haue sene the kyng and Lorde of hostes. Then flewe one of the Seraphyns vnto me hauynge a hote cole in hys hande, whyche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, & touched my mouth and sayd: lo, rhys hath touched thy lyppes & thyne vnryghteousnelle is taken away, and thy synne forgeuen. Also, I heard the voice of the lorde, saying on thys maner: Whom shal I send, and who wyl be our messāger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayd: go, and tell thys people: ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shal plainly se and not perceaue. Hardē the heart of thys people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes, that they se not wyth their eyes, heare not wyth their eares, & vnderstande not wyth their hertes, and conuerte, and be healed. Then spake I: lord, howe longe he answered: vntyl the cyties be vtterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shal take the me karte away so that the lande shall lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shall retourne and be layd waste. And as the Terebint tree and oke in wynter cast their leaues, and yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shall the holye sede continue in their substaunce.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Syrians mouet a tayle agaynste Jerusalem. A virgyne shal beare a chylde.

IT happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Jotham, whych was the sõne of Uziah kyng of Juda: that * Rasin the kynge of Syria, and Pechah the sonne of Romeliah kyng of Israell went vpwarde Jerusalem to besiege it: but Rasin was not able to winne it. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were cõfederate together, his herte quaked (yea & the hertes also of hys people) lyke as when a tree in the feldes is moued with the wynd. Then sayd God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Seariasub) at the head of the ouerpoole, in the hote path by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto hym: take hede to thy self, and be styl, but feare not, neyther be fayntе herted, for these two tayles: ꝑ is for these two smoking fyrebrandes, the wrath and furyousnes of Rasin the Syryan, and Romelyes sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim & Romelyes sonne haue wyckedly conspired against the, sayynge: We wyl go vp against Juda, vexe them, and bring them vnder vs, & set a kyng there euen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus sayth the Lorde God therto: It shal not so go forth: neyther come so to passe: for the heade cyte of the Syryans is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rasin. And after fiue & thre score yeare shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And ꝑ chief cyte of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Yf ye beleue not it cõmeth of this: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Moreouer God spake once again vnto Ahaz, saying: requyre a token of ꝑ lord thy God, whyther it be toward the depth beneth, or toward the heygthe aboue.

Then sayde Ahaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde. The lord answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shal geue you a toke: Beholde, a virgyne shal cõceaue C and beare a sonne, and (thou hys mother) shalte call his name Emanuel. Butter and houy shall he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For or euer the chyld come to knowledge, to eschue the euell, and chose the good: the lande (that thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of bothe her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed frõ Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assyryans. For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whystle for the flyes that are about the water of Egipt, & for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shal come and shal lyghte all in the desolate valeies, in the holes of stones, vpõ al thorny and bushy places. At the same tyme shall D the Lorde shaue the heere of the head, and the feete and the beard cleane of, wyth the rasour ꝑ he shal hyer beyõd ꝑ water: namely, wyth the kyng of the Assirians. At the same time shal a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of milke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whych remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme al vineyardes (thoughe there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande sylueryinges) shalbe turned to bryeares and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arowes & bowes, so shal al the land become bryears & thornes. And as for al hylles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpon them any feare of bryears and thornes. But the cattel shal be dryuẽ thyther, and the shepe shal fede there.

The. viii. Chapter.

The deliuerraunce of the lande by Emanuell. The stone of offence, at whych many shall stumble.

MOreouer, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leafe, and write in it, as me do with a penne: I make haste spede to robbe, and haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faithful witnesses to recorde. Uriah ꝑ preest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wente I vnto the prophetesse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne.

Then

Then sayd the lorde to me: geue him this name: a spedie robber, an hasty spoyler.
For why, or euer the chyld shal haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: shall the riches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, before the kinge of the Assirians. The lorde
B spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as this people refuseth the styll renning water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin and Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall bring myghty and greate floudes of water vpō them: namely, ꝑ kyng of the Assirians with all his power: Whyche shall clyme vp vpon all hys floudes, and renne ouer all their bākes. And shal breake in vpō Juda, flowyng & encreasing in power, tyl he gette him by the necke. He shall fyl also the widenes of thy lande wyth hys brode wynges, O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe broken downe: herken to all ye of farre countries. Muster you, & ye shalbe brokē downe: prepare you to battel, and you shalbe torne in peces: take your counsell together, yet muste youre counsell come to naught: go in hand withal, yet shall it not prospere, for God is wyth vs. For the C Lorde spake thus to me in the power of his hande, and warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I should not walke in the way of this people. He sayde moreouer: rounde wyth none of them whosoeuer say, ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, neither be afrayed of them, but sanctifye the lord of hostes, let hym be youre feare and dreade. For he shalbe the holy place to flye to, and stone to stomble at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both ꝑ houses of Israell, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fal, and be broken vpō hym: yea, they shalbe snared and taken.
D Nowe laye the wynesses together, and seale the lawe wyth my disciples. Thus wil I wayt vpon the lord that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for him. But lo, as for me and the children whyche the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of hostes sake, whyche dwelleth vpō the hyll of Syon.
And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the Sothsayers, Wytches, charmers, & conniurers, then make them thys answere: Is there a people any where, ꝑ asketh not Lib.14.a counsell at hys God? * Should men runne vnto the deade for the lyuynge? Yf any man wante lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, & the testymonye, whether they speake not after thys meaning. Yf he do not thys, he stumbleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger he is out of patience, and blasphemeth hys kynge and hys god. The loketh he vpwarde, and downeward to the earthe: and beholde, there is trouble and darkenes, vexacion is rounde about him, and the cloude of errour. And out of suche aduersytye shal he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme paste, it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon, & ꝑ land of Nephtaly (where thorowe ꝑ sea way goeth ouer Jordane into ꝑ land of Galile) was at the fyrst in lytle trouble: but afterward sore vexed.

The.ix. Chapter.

De prophecyeth of Christes natiuitye & dominiō.

THe people that walke in darkenes haue sene a great light. As for the J that dwel in the land of ꝑ shadow of death, vpon them hath ꝑ lyght shyned. Thou haste multiplyed the people and not increased theyr ioy. * They reioyse before the, euen as men make mery in harueste: and as men that haue gotten the victorye, when they deale the spoyle. For thou haste broken the yoke of the peoples burthē: the staffe of hys shoulder, and the rodde of his oppressoure, as in ꝑ dayes of Madian.
And truly euery battayll that the warriour
B accomplisheth, is done wyth confused noise, and defiling theyr garmentes with bloude. But thys battayle shalbe with burnynge, and consumynge of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Upon hys shulder doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called wyth hys owne name, wonderfull: The geuer of counsell, the mightye God, the euerlastyng father, the prince of peace: he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpō the seate of Dauid, and in hys kyngdome, to set vp the same, and to stablyshe it wyth equytie & ryghtousnesse from hence furthe C for euermore. This shal ꝑ gelowsy of ꝑ lord of hostes bring to passe. The lorde sent a word into Jacob, ꝑ same is come into Israel. And al ꝑ people of Ephraim shal knowe, & they ꝑ dwel in Samaria, ꝑ can say with pride & hye stomackes, on thys maner: The tile worke is fallen downe, but we wyl bylde it with squared stones. The molbery timber is broken, but we shall set it vp agayne wyth Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Rasin the enemy against the, and so ouer throwe their aduersaries, ꝓ the Syrians shal lay holde vpō them before, & the Philistines behinde: and so deuoure Israell wyth open mouthe. After all thys is not the wrathe of the lord ceassed, but yet is hys hād stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto him that chastyseth them, neither doe they seke the lorde of Hostes. Therfore hath the lorde roted out of Israel both heed & tayle, braunche and twygge in one daye. By the heade is vnderstande the Senatoure and honourable man, and by the tayle ꝓ prophet ꝓ preached lies: For al they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryght case, suche be dysceauers. Suche as men thyncke also to be perfecte among these, are but casteawayes. Therefore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their yong men, neyther fauour their fatherlesse and wyddowes. For they are all together ypocrytes and wycked, and al their mouthes speake folye. After al this, is not the lordes wrathe ceassed: but yet hys hāde is stretched out styll. For vngodlynes burneth as a fyre in the briers and thornes.

And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood, or a reede bushe: so ascendeth ꝓ smoke of their pryde. For because of the wrath of the lord of Hostes is the lande full of darknesse, and the people be consumed as it were with fire:
no man dothe spare his brother, but he rob-beth on the right hande, and doeth famishe:
he eateth on the left hand, & he shal not haue ynough. Euery mā shal eate ꝓ flesche of hys owne arme. Manasses, shal eate Ephraim, & Ephraim Manasses: & they both shal eate Juda. After al this is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet is his hand stretched out stil.

The.x. Chapter.

He threatneth the oppressours of the poore, and prophecyeth against Sennacherib.

WOe be vnto them ꝓ make vnrygh-teous lawes, and deuyse thynges which be to harde for to kepe: wherthorowe the poore are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemente: that widdowes may be their praye, and that they maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the vysytacion, and when destruccion shall come from farre? To whom wyll ye runne for helpe? and to whom wil ye geue youre honoure, that he may kepe it? that when I wyll drawe my hande, ye come not amonge the prysonners, or lye amonge the dead?
After al this doth not the wrath of the lorde ceasse, but yet is his hand stretched out still.

Woe be also vnto Assur, which is a staffe of my wrathe, in whose hande is the rod of my punyshmente. I shall sende hym among those hypocrytish people, among the people that haue deserued my displeasoure, shall I sende hym, that he may vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe, lyke ꝓ myre in the strete. Howebeit, his meanyng is not so, neyther thynketh hys hert on thys fassyon. But he ymagyneth onlye, howe he maye roote out and destroye moche people, for he sayeth: are not my princes al kynges? Is not Calno as easye to wynne as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus, then Samaria? As who saye: I were hable to wynne the kingdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Jerusalē and Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Jerusalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their idols? Wherfore ꝓ lord sayeth: Allone as I haue performed my whole worke vpon the hyl of Sion and Jerusalem, then wyl I vyset the noble and stoute hert of the kinge of Assyria wyth hys proude lookes. For he standeth thus in hys owne conceyte: Thys doe I thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome: For I am wyse: I am he that remoue the landes of the people: I robbe their treasures: & (lyke one of the worthyes) I dryue the from their hye seates. My hāde hath founde oute the strength of the people, as it were a neste. And lyke as egges that were layed here and there, are gathered to-gyther: So do I gather al countryes. And there is no man that darre be so bolde, as to touche a fether: that darre open hys mouth, or ones whysper. Shall the axe booste it selfe agaynste hym that heweth therewythe or dothe the sawe make anye braggynge agaynste hym that ruleth it? That were euē lyke, as yf the rod dyd exalte it self againste hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe shoulde magnifye it self, as whoe say, it were no wood. Therfore shall the Lord of hostes send hym among his fatlynges, leanesse: & burne vp his glory as it were wt a fire. But the lyght of Israel shalbe that fyre, and his Sanctuarye shalbe the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vp hys thornes & briers in one day: yea, all the glory of his woodes and feldes shalbe consumed wt bodye and soule: And they shalbe as an hooste of me, whose standerde bearer fayleth.

The trees also of the fielde which remaine, shalbe of suche a nombre, that a chylde may tel thē. After that daye shal the remnaunt of c Israel and suche as are escaped oute of the house of Jacob, seke no more cōforte at him that smote thē, but with faithfulnesse & truth shal they trust vnto the lord, the holy one of Israel. The remnaunte, euen the posteritie of Jacob, shall cōuerte vnto God the mightye one. For though thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the sea yet shal the remnaūt of thē conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that floweth in righteousnesse, and therfore the lorde of hoostes shall perfectly fulfyl the thyng that he hath determined in the middest of ỹ whole worlde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Syon, be f not afrayed for the kyng of the Assirians:
He shall smite thee with a rod, & shal wagge his staffe at thee, as the Egipcians did some tyme: But soone after shall my wrathe and mine indignacion be fulfilled in the destruccion of them. Moreouer, the lord of hoostes shall prepare a scourge for him, like as was the slaughter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyft vp his rodde ouer the sea, as he dydde sometyme ouer the Egipcians. Then shall his burthē be taken from thy shoulders, and his pocke from thy
C necke: yea, thesame pocke shalbe corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Iuah, and go thorow toward Mygrō: at Michmas shal he lay vp his harnesse, & go ouer the foorde. Gibea shalbe theyr restyng place: Ramath G shalbe afrayd: Gibea Saule shal flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe heard vnto Lais, and to Anothoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall trēble for feare, but the citezins of Gabim are manly, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that shal he D lyft vp his hande agaynste the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyl of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord god of hoostes shall take awaye the proude from thence with feare. He shall hewe downe the proude, and fell ỹ hye mynded. The bushes also of the wood shall he roote out with yron, and Libanus shal haue a mightie fall.

The.xi. Chapter.

The prophecieth of the Natiuite of Christ, and of his people: of the remnaunte of Israell, and of the fayth of the heathen or Gentiles.

I AND there shall come a rod forth of ỹ kynred of Isai, and a blossome shall florysshe out of his roote. The spirite of the Lorde shall lyght vpon hym: the spirite of wisdom and vnderstanding, the spirite of counsaile and strength, the spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lorde: & shall make hym feruent in the feare of God. For he shal not geue sentēce after the thyng that shalbe broughte before his eyes, neyther reproue a matter at the fyrste hearyng, but vp righteousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and with holynesse shall he reformme the symple of the world. He shall smyte the worlde with the rodde of his mouth, and with the breath of his mouth shal he slaye the vngodlye.
Righteousnesse shal ber the gyrdle of his loynes: truthe and faithfulnesse, the gyrding B vp of his reynes. The wolfe shal dwel with the lambe: and the Leopard shal lye doune by the goate. Bullockes, lyons, and cattell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chylde shall rule them. The kowe and the beare shal feede together, and theyr youngones shall lye together. The lyon shall eate strawe like the oxe or the kowe. The chylde whyle he sucketh shall haue a delyte to the Serpentes nest, and when he is weaned he shal put his hand into the cockatrice denne. No man shall do euell vnto another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the hyll of my holynesse. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of the lord euen as the sea floweth ouer with water. And in that daye shall the Gentiles enquyre after ỹ roote of Jesse C which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwellyng shalbe glorious. At thesame tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaunte of hys people (whiche shalbe left aliue) frō the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Assyrians, Elamytes, Caldees, Antiochyans: and from the Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token amōge the Gentiles, and gather together the dispersed of Israell: yea, & the outecastes of Juda frō the foure corners of the world. The hatred of Ephrai also and enemies of Juda shalbe cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare none euill will to Juda, & Juda shal not hate Ephrai: but they both together shall flye vpō the shoulders of the Philistines toward the weste, and spoyle them together that dwell toward the East. The Idumytes and the Moabytes shall D let theyr handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedyent vnto them.
The Lord also shall cleaue the tonges of ỹ Egiptians sea, & with a mighty wind shal he lyft vp his hād ouer Nilus, & shal smyte his scurn streames, and make men go ouer drie shod. And thus shal there be a waye for hys people that remaineth, from the Assirians: like as it happened to the Israelytes what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypte.

The song of the church for the obtayning of the victory and ouercommyng of the worlde.

A SO that thé thou shalt saie: O Lorde I wyl thanke thee, for thou wast displeased at me: but refrayne thou frō thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacion in whome I wyl trust, and not be afrayde. For the Lorde God is my strength & my songe, he also is become my saluacio. Therfore with ioye shal ye drawe B water out of the welles of the sauioure, and then shall ye saye: geue thankes vnto the lorde, call vpon hys name, declare hys cōsayles amonge the people, kepe them in remembraunce for his name is excellente. O sing prayses vnto the lord, for he hath done greate thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye out and singe thou ꝑ dwellest in Sion: for great is the holy one of Israell in the myddest of thee.

The prophecyeth the destruccion of Babilon: the captiuitie and the comming agayne of the people.

A THys is the heuy burthen of Babilon, whiche Esay ꝑ sonne of Amos dyd se. Lift vp the baner vpon the hye hyll, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the princes may go in at the doze. I haue sente for my deputyes & my grauntes (saieth the lorde) which shal execute wrath. I wyll call for suche as triumphe in my glory. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a greate people: a rushynge as though the kyngdomes of the nacions came together. (And the Lorde of hoostes musstereth hys armye to battayle.) They come oute of a farre countrey, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde hym selfe with the instrumentes of his wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Bourne ye, for the daye of the lorde is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer B from the almyghtye. Therfore shall all handes bee letten downe, and all mennes heartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them, and they shall haue payne as a woman that trauayleth with childe. One shal be abashed of an other and theyr faces shal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Behold, the daye of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion, furoure and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shall not geue theyr lighte: the sunne shalbe darkened in the ryssyng, & the moone shall not shyne with his lighte. And I wyll punyshe the wickednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, saith the lorde. The hie stomackes of the proude C wyll I take away, and wil laye doune the boastyng of tiraunte. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to bee more worth thé a golden wedge of Ophyr. Therfore I will shake the heauen, and the earthe shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the lord of hostes, & in ꝑ day of his fearefull indignacion. And Babilon shalbe as an hunted or chaced doo, & as a shepe ꝑ no man taketh vp. Euery manne shal turne to his own people, and flye eche one into his owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shalbe shotte thorowe. And whoso gather together shalbe destroyed w the sweard. * Their Psa.136 chyldren shall bee slayne before theyr eyes, D theyr houses spoyled, and theyr wiues rauished. For lo, I shall bryng vp the Medes agaynste them, whiche shall not regarde syluer nor be desirous of golde. With bowes shall they destroye the yonge children, and haue no pytye vpon women with childe, and theyr faces shal not spare the children. And Babilon (that glorye of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed * So- Gen.19 dome and Gomorra. It shal not endure for euer neyther shall there be any more dwellyng there, from generacion to generacion. The Arabians shall pytche no tentes there, neyther shall the shepheardes make theyr foldes there any more: but fearefull wylde beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbee full of greate owles. Estriches shall dwell there, and Apes shall daunce there: wylde cattes shall crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbee in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes shall not be prolonged.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prosperyne of the people of God, and afflictyon of theyr enemyes. The pryde of Babylon.

BVt the lorde wyll bee mercyfull vnto I Jacob, and wyll yet chose Israell agayne, and set thé in theyr owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get thé to the house of Jacob. The people shall people shall take them and cary them home to theyr owne lande. And make them to enherite the house of Israel in the land of the lord, that they maye be seruauntes and hãdmaydens of the lord. They shall take those prysoners whose captyues they had bene afore, and rule those that had oppressed thẽ.

B When the lorde now shal bring thee to rest from the trauayle, feare, & harde bondage, that thou wast laden withal: thẽ shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden trybute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken ỹ sceptre of the vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which when he is wroth smyteth ỹ people with contynuall strokes, & tyranously raygneth ouer ỹ Heathen whom he persecuted wythout compassyon. And therfore the whole worlde is nowe at rest, and quietnesse: and men synge for ioye.

C Yea euen the fyrre trees and Cedres of Lybanus, reioyse at thy fall, saying: Nowe that thou art layed downe, there come no mo vp to hewe downe vs. Hell also beneth trembleth to mete the at thy comming, and for thy sake hath raysed hys dead, and all nughtye men & princes of the earth. All kynges of the earth stande vp frõ their seates, ỹ they may all answere, & speake vnto thee. Arte thou become weake also as we? art ỹ become like vnto vs? Thy põpe & thy pryde is layed downe into the pyt, and so is ỹ melody of thy instrumentes. Wormes be layed vnder the, & wormes be thy couerynge.

D Howe art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynynge chylde? howe hast ỹ gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & arte become weaker then the people? For ỹ saydeste in thyne hert: I will clyme vp into heaue, and exalt my throne aboue, beside ỹ starres of God. I will syt also vpon ỹ holy mounte toward ỹ North. I will clyme vp aboue the cloudes, & wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seke the shal narowly loke vpõ the, & thynke in thẽ selues, saying: Is this the mã that brought all lãdes in feare, & made ỹ kyngdomes afrayed? Is thys he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whych let not hys pryssonners go oute?

E The kynges of ỹ nacyons lye euerye one in his owne house wyth worshyppe, & thou art cast out of the graue lyke a fylthye abhominable braunche: lyke as dead mens rayment that are shot thorowe wyth the sweard, and go down to ỹ stones of ỹ depe: as a dead corse that is troden vnder fete, & art not buryed wt them. Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generacion of the wycked shalbe without honoure for euer. Let there a waye be sought to destroy their children, that be in their fathers wyckednesse, ỹ they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of enemyes.

F I will stande vp agaynste them (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and roote out the name and remnaunte, sonne and sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll geue it to the Otters, and wyll make water puddles of it. And I will swepe them out with the besome of destruccyon, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The Lord of hostes hath sworne an oth, saying: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuysed. So that Assyria shall I destroy in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes will I treade hym vnder foote. Wherethorowe hys yoke shall come frõ them, and his burthen shalbe take frõ their shoulder. This deuise hath God taken thorowe the whole world: & this is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determyne a thynge, who is able to dysanull it? And yf he stretch forthe hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

G The same yeare that kyng Ahas dyed God threatened on this maner: Reioyse not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beateth the is broken: for oute of the serpẽtes rote there shall come an adder, and the frute shalbe a fyrye flynge worme. But the fyrste borne of ỹ poore shall be fed, and ỹ symple shal dwel in safetye. Thy roote also wyl I destroye wt hunger, & it shal slay thy remnaut. Mourne thou port, wepe thou cytie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layed waste, for there shall come frõ the north a smoke, ỹ not one alone may abyde in hys place. Who shall then answere the messengers of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablysshed Syon, and ỹ poore of hys people ỹ be therin, do put their trust in him.

The.xv. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynste Moab.

H This is the heuy burthen vpon Moab: I For of Moab was destroyed & ouerthrowen in ỹ night season. Yea also in Moab was destroyed, and perysshed in the nyght. They wente vp to the ydols house, euen to Dibon, to ỹ hye places to wepe for Nebo, & Moab did mourne for Medba: Al their heades were balde, & all their beardes shauen. In their stretes are they gyrded a-B boute with sackcloth. In all the toppes of their houses and stretes, shalbe nothynge but mournynge and weppynge. Helbon and Eleale shal cry þ their voyce shalbe hearde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleate oute, and crye for very sorowe of their myndes: Woe shall my herte be for C Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto the cytie of Zoar, which is lyke a fayre yonge bullock of thre yere olde, for they shall all go vp to Luith weppynge. Euen so by þ way towarde Horonaim they shall make lamentacio for their vtter destruccyon. For the waters of Nimrim shal be dryed vp by reason wherof the grasse is wythred, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are sory. As for their substaunce, the enemyes haue caryed them to the brooke of the wyllowes. For the D crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim, & vnto Beer Elim, was ther nothyng but mournyng, because þ waters of Dimon wer ful of bloud: for I the Lord shall sende more bloude vpon Dimon, and Lyons vpon the remnaunt of þ lande, & on them that are escaped from Moab.

¶ The .xvi. Chapter.

The destruccyon of Moab.

I Sende the Lorde of the worlde a lābe from the rocke that lyeth towarde þ deserte vnto the hyll of the daughter Sion. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblynge byrde þ is put out of hatuest, for they shall carye thē vnto Arnon: gather your counsayll, come together in iudgement, couer vs with your shadow in the mydday as the nyght doeth hyde the chaced, and bewraye not thē that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge agaynst the de-B stroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to nought, þ robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the trueth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgynge & seekynge iudgemēte, & makyng haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue heard of þ pryde of Moab, he is very proud, presumpteous, arrogant & ful of indignacion, & bayne are hys lyes. Therfore shal Moab make lamentacion because of þ Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yea, they shal wayle all together. Vpcause of the foundacions of þ cytie that is made of brycke, shall ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

For the vynes of Helbon are cut downe:
As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of þ C Heathen haue broken downe her principal braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wente on wandryng vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodlye braūches were throwen downe as they went ouer the sea. Therfore wil I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibna. I will poure my teares vpon the, O Helbon and Eleale for the crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpō thy sommer frutes, & vpon thy hervest. The mirth & chere is takē away out of the plentiful felde, & in þ vyneyardes there shalbe no ioye nor gladnesse. The treader shal treade out no wyne in the D presses, the sōge of their merry chere haue I layed down. Wherfore my bowels shal roble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, & myne inwarde partes, for the cyties sake that is made of brycke. And it shall come to passe, that whē it is sene that Moab shalbe made wery of hys hyl chapels, he shal come to his tēple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayinge that the Lord hath spoken concernyng Moab syns that tyme. But nowe the lord hath spoken, saying: In thre yeres, which shall be as the yeres of an hyred seruaunte, shall the glory of Moab be turned into confusyon, thorowcoute all hys multitude, whiche is verye great. And that whyche remayneth, shalbe very small and feble.

THis is þ heuy burthen vpon Damas- I cus: beholde, Damascus is taken away to be nomore a cytie, but shalbe an heape of broken stones. The wast cyties of Aroer shalbe foldes for catell, which shal lye there, and there shalbe none to fraye thē away: Ephraim also shall nomore be strōg, and Damascus shall nomore be a kyngedome, & the remnaunt of Syria shalbe as þ glorye of þ children of Israel, sayth the lord of hostes. And in that daye it shall come to passe, that Jacob shalbe made verye poore, and the fatnes of his flesh shal ware leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in hervest, euen lyke hym whose arme reapeth the eares of corne.

He shalbe also like him þ gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gatherynge in dede shall there be lefte in it, euen as in the shakynge of an olyue tree, there remayne two or thre beries in þ toppe of the of the vppermost bough, & foure or fyue in the brode fruytefull braunches therof, saith the Lord God of Israell.

B Then shall man turne agayne to hys maker, and hys eyes shall haue respect to ꝑ holy one of Israel. As for the aulters which are hys owne handywoorcke, he shall not regarde thē, and the thinges that his fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall he not cast hys eye vnto. In that daye shall theyr stronge cyties be as the forsaken shrubbes & braunches, whiche they left because of the children of Israell: & the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacō, & hast not bene myndfull of thy strong rock, therfore shalt thou set pleasaunt plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of an other mannes vyne. In the daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe, & early in the mornynge shalt thou make thy seede to florysshe. The heruest shalbe gone in the day of enheritaunce, and there shalbe sorowe wythout hope of comfort.

C Woe shalbe to the multytude of muche people, which shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of the sea. And the violence of the nacions which shal rage lyke the rushynge in of many waters: Euen lyke many waters shall ꝑ people rage. God shal rebuke hym, and he shal flye farre of. He shalbe chased away lyke as dyse strawe vpō ꝑ mountaynes before the wynde: & lyke a thyng that turneth before the stourme. At euē beholde, ther is trouble: and or euer it be mornynge, loe, he is gone. Thys is the portyon of thē that oppresse vs, & the lot of thē that robbe vs.

The.xviii. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Egypt.

A DThat lande that trusteth vnder the shadow of wynges, ꝑ lande which is beyonde ꝑ waters of Ethyopia: Sēdynge messaungers by the sea, euē in vesselles of reedes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye spedye messaungers) to a nacyon that is scatered abroade & robbed of that they had, a fearful people from their begynnyng hytherto: a nacyō troden down by litle & litle, whose lādes the floudes haue spoyled. All ye inhabytours of the worlde & indwellers of the earthe, looke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, & herken whē he bloweth with the trōpe. For so ꝑ lord sayd vnto me: as for me, I wil take my rest, and loke vpō the matter in my habitacyon, lyke a fayer heate after the rayne, and lyke a cloude of dewe in the heate of haruest.

B For afore the haruestе when the braūche is growen, there shall come rype fruyte out of the floure: and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shall he take away with hookes. Thus shall they be lefte together vnto ꝑ foules of the mountaynes, and to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, & euery beast of the lande shall be vpon it in the wynter. In that tyme shal ther a presēte be brought vnto the lorde of hoostes, euen a people that is scatered abroade, & robbed of that they hadde: that same people whych haue bene fearfull from their begynnynge hytherto, a nacyon troden downe by lytle & lytle, whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: to the place of the name of the Lorde of hooستes, euen to the mount Syon.

The.xix. Chapter.

The prophecye agaynst Egypte.

THe heuye burthen of Egypt: Beholde, the Lorde rydeth vpon a swift cloude, and shall come into Egypt: and the Idols of Egypt shall tremble at the presence of hym, and ꝑ herte of Egypte shall quake in the mydeste of her. And I will set the Egyptians one agaynste another, so that one brother shall fyght agaynste another, & one neyghboure agaynst another, Cytye agaynst Cytye and Realme agaynst Realme. The mynde also of Egypte shalbe cleane wythout councell wythin it selfe, and the deuyce that they take wyll I destroye, so ꝑ they shall seke counsel at Idols, and at sorcerers, at workers with spyrites, & at sothsayers. And the Egyptians wyll I geue ouer into the hande of a marueloꝰ cruell lorde, and a myghtye kyng shall haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the lorde God of hooستes: the waters of the sea shall fayle, & the ryuer shall decrease, & be dryed vp. The waters shalbe drawen out, ꝑ ryuers of Egipt shalbe emptyed and dryed vp, ꝑ reedes and flagges shalbe cut downe.

B The grasse in the ryuer and by the ryuers banck and all that groweth by ꝑ ryuer, shal wyther awaye and be broughte to naught. The fyshers also shall mourne, and al they that cast angle in to the water, shall make lamentacyon: and they that laye forth their net besyde the waters shalbe rotted out. Moreouer, they that worcke in flax and make fyne worckes, shalbe confounded: and so shall they that weue open worckes. For their open worckes shalbe euen destroyed: and al they that make pondes and stues for fyshe shall come to naught.

But ye foolish prynces of Soan, ye wise coū-

layers of Pharao, whose wyt is turned to foolyshenes, howe saye ye vnto Pharao? I am come of wyse men, and of auncyente kynges. Where are nowe the wyse men? Let the tell the (yf they can) what the Lorde of Hoostes hath deuysed vpon Egypte.

C The prynces of Zoan are become fooles, ꝑ prynces of Noph are dysceaued, they haue dysceaued Egypt, euen they that were taken for the chefe kynred therof. In the myddest of it hath ꝑ Lord poured ꝑ spyrite of wyckednesse, and they haue dysceaued Egipt in euery worke therof: euen as a dronken man stacketh in his vomyte. Nether shall the heade or tayle, ꝑ braunch or reede, be hable to do any worcke in Egipt. In that day shal Egipte be lyke vnto wemen: It shalbe afrayed and stande in feare at the mocyon of the hand of the Lorde of Hoostes, which he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shalbe afrayed of ꝑ lande of Juda, so that euery one which maketh mẽcyon of it shalbe afrayed thereat because of the councel of the Lord of hostes whyche he deuyseth for it.

In that daye shall fyue cytyes in the lãde of Egypt speake the language of Canaan, and sweare by the Lorde of Hoostes, the cyte of desolacyon shalbe called one of them. In that day shal ꝑ aultare of the Lorde be in ꝑ myddes of the land of Egypt, and this tytle beside it: Vnto the Lord. And it shalbe a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lorde of Hoostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto the lorde, because of suche as trouble them and he shall send them a Sauiour, ꝛ a greate man to delyuer them.

D And the lorde shalbe knowen in Egypt, ꝛ the Egyptians shall knowe the lord in that day, and do sacrifice and oblacion: yea they shall vowe a vowe vnto the lorde, and performe it. The Lord also shall smyte Egipt sore, and heale the agayne: and they shalbe cõuerted vnto ꝑ lord, and he shalbe intreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye oute of Egypte into Assyria, and Assyria shall come into Egypt: and Egypt into Assyria: so that the Egyptians and the Assirians shal serue the lord together. In that daye shal the nacion of Israel be the thyrde with Egypte ꝛ Assyria, and they shalbe blessed in the myddes of ꝑ lande, which lande ꝑ lord of hostes hath blessed sayenge: blessed is my people of Egypte: Assur also is the worke of myne handes: and Israell is myne enherytaunce.

The.xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypte and Ethyopia.

IN the yeare that Tharthã came vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kynge of Assiria had sent him) ꝛ had fought agaynst Asdod, and taken it, At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hand of Esaye ꝑ sonne of Amos, sayeng: Goe, ꝛ take of the sackecloth from thy loynes, ꝛ put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and barefoote.

And the Lorde sayd: lyke as my seruaũte Esay hath walked naked and barefote for a sygne and wonder thre yeares vpõ Egypt, and Ethyoppa: Euen so shall the kynge of Assyria take awaye oute of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, children ꝛ olde men, naked and bare fote, with their loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypte.

They shalbe broughte in feare also, and ashamed one of another: Ethyopia of Egypt, and Egypt of Ethyopia, cõsyderynge what glory they were in afore. And they that dwell in the same Ile shall saye in that day: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whyther shall we flye for helpe, that we maye be delyuered from the kynge of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabya.

THe burthen of the waste sea: Euen as the stormie wether that passeth thorowe at the noone day, to come from ꝑ wyldernes, from that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one dysceateful offender come agaynst another, and one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye seyge thou of Media, all their gronynge haue I layd downe. Therfore are my loynes fylled with sorowe: heupnes hath taken holde vpon me, as the panges of a woman that is trauaylynge. It made me stoupe when I heatde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. Myn hert panted, fearfulnes came vpon me. The nyght of my voluptuousnes, hath he turned agaynste me into feare. Whyle they garnyshed the table, the watchman loked: And whyle I was eatynge and drynckynge (it was sayde) vp ye Captaynes take you to youre shylde. For thus hath ꝑ lord sayd vnto me: Go, ꝛ set a watcheman to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charet whych two horsmen sat vppõ, with ꝑ carrage of an asse, ꝛ ꝑ carrage of a camel: So he loked ꝛ toke very dylygent hede. And

And behold, here commeth a charet of men with twoo horsmen. And he answered, and sayd: Babilon is fallen, it is fallen, & all the ymages of her gods hath he smytten doune vnto the grounde. Thou arte he whome I must threshe, and thou belongest to my corne flooze. This that I heard of the Lord of Hoostes the God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you. The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me oute of Seyr: Watcheman what hast thou espied by night? Watcheman what hast thou espied by night? The watcheman sayde: The morning commeth, and so doth the nyght. Yf ye will aske any question, then aske it: returne and come againe. The burthen concerning Arabia: In the pleasaunt grounde of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght euen in the stretes of Dedanim. The inhabitours of ỹ lande of Thema, brought forthe water to hym that was thirsty, they preuented hym with their breade, that was fled away. For because of swoordes are they become fugitiue, euen for ỹ drawen sword, and for the bente bowe, and because of the greuousnesse of warre. For thus hathe the lorde said vnto me: There is yet a yeare according to the yeares of an hyred seruaunt, and all the glory of Cedar shall fayle. And the number of them that shall escape from the bowes, shalbe mynished by the mightye chyldren of Cedar, for so the lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

The.xxii. Chapter.

Prophecye agaynste Jerusalem.

THe burthen of the vallye of vysion. What haste thou to do here, that thou clymeste vnto the house toppes? Thou that arte full of occuppeng, thou seductous and proude cytye: thy slayne men are neyther put to death with swoorde, nor dead in battayle. All thy captaynes are fugytyue together, the archers haue taken them prysoners. All they that are founde in thee, are in captyuytye together, because they fledde farre of. Therfore sayde I: let me alone, and * I will make lamentacyon. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destruccion of the daughter of my people. For thys is a daye of trouble, of ruyne, and of destruccion that the lorde wyll bryng to passe in the valley of vysion, breakyng downe the cytye, and crying vnto the mountaynes. Elam bare the quiuer with a charet of fotemen and of horsemen, & the cute of kyr shewed ỹ shilde open. Thy chyefe vallye also was full of charrettes, and the horsmen set theyr faces dyrectlye towarde the gate. And in that daye dyd the enemye take away the bewtye of Juda, and then dyddest thou looke toward ỹ armoure of the house of ỹ forest. Ye haue sene also ỹ broken places of the cytye of Dauid, howe that they are many, & ye gathered together the waters of ỹ lower poole. Ye for ỹ houses of Jerusalem ye haue nombred them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make ỹ wall stronge. Ye also haue ye made betweene ỹ two walles, for the waters of ỹ olde poole: & haue not regarded ỹ maker therof, nether had respect vnto hym ỹ toke it in hād.

And in that daye dyd the Lorde God of Hoostes call men vnto weppynge and mournynge, to baldnesse & gyrdynge about with sackclothe. And behold, they haue ioye and gladnesse, slayenge oxen & kyllynge shepe, eatynge flesshe, & drynckynge wyne. * Let vs eate & drynck, for to morowe we shall dye. And it came to ỹ eares of ỹ Lord of hoostes: This iniquitye shal not be pourged frō you till ye dye, sayeth the Lord God of Hoostes. Thus sayth the Lord God of Hoostes: Go, get the vnto ponder treasurer: euen vnto * Sebna, whyche is the ruler of the house. What hast thou to do here? and whom hast thou here? that thou shuldest here hewe the out a sepulchre, as it were one ỹ heweth him out a sepulchre on hygh, or that graueth an habitacion for him selfe in an harde rocke.

Beholde O thou man, the Lorde shall carye the awaye into captyuytie, & shal surely couer the with confusyon. The Lorde shall turne the ouer lyke a balle with his handes, (and shall send the) into a farre countrye, there shalte thou dye, & there (in steade of ỹ Charettes of thy pōpe) shall ỹ house of thy Lord haue confusyon. I wyll dryue the from thy place, & out of thy dwellynge shall he ouerthrowe the. And in that daye shall I cal my seruaunte Elyakym the sonne of Helkya. And with thy garmentes will I cloth hym, and with thy gyrdle will I strengthe hym: thy power also wil I cōmyt into his hande, and he shalbe a father of such as dwell in Jerusalem, and in the house of Juda.

* And the kepe of the house of Dauid will I laye vpon hys shulder, so ỹ he shall open and no man shall shut. He shal shut, and no man shall open. And I wyll fasten hym as a nayle in a sure place, and he shalbe ỹ glorious seate of his fathers house. Moreouer all generations and posterytes shal hange vpō hym all ỹ glory of theyr fathers house, all vesselles both great and small, and all instrumentes of measure and musyke.

Be aſhamed thou Sydon, for the ſea, (euē the ſtrength of the ſea) hath ſpoken, ſaying: I haue not trauayled nor brought forth chyldren, nor nouriſhed vp yong men or broughte vp vyrgyns. When tydynges commeth to the Egipcians, they ſhalbe ſorye for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Sette you to Tharſis, mourne ye that dwell in the Yle. Is not this that glorious Citie of yours, whiche hathe been of olde antiquite? Her owne feete ſhall carry her forth to be a ſoiourner vnto a farre countreye. Who hath deuiſed this agaynſte Tyre (ꝑ geueth garlādes vnto other Cities) whoſe marchaūtes are princes: & whoſe captaynes are honourable in the worlde? Euen the Lord of hooſtes hath deuiſed this, to put downe the pryde of al ſuche as be glorious, and to mynyſhe all them that be proude vpō earth: Get the out of ꝑ lāde vnto the daughter of Tharſis: ſeing ꝑ haſt nomore ſtregth.

He that ſmote the kyngdomes together, holdeth out his hande ouer the ſea, euen the Lord hymſelfe hathe geuen a commaundement againſt the ſame commō place of marchaundyſe, that they ſhall vtterlye deſtroye the myghte thereof. And he ſayd: Make nomore thy boaſt (O virgin thou daughter Sydon) thou ſhalte be brought downe: Vp, get thee ouer vnto Citym: where neuertheleſſe thou ſhalt haue no reſt. Behold this people come not of the Caldees: but Aſſur made the ſtronge with greate ſhippes. They ſette vp the ſtronge holde thereof, and deſtroyed his places, and he brought it in decaie. Mourne ye ſhippes of Tharſis for your ſtrengthe is brought downe.

And in that daye ſhal Tyre be forgotte ſeuentye yeares (accordyng to ꝑ yeares of one kyng) & after the ende of the ſeuentye yeares ſhal Tyre ſynge as doeth an harlot. Theyr occupying alſo and theyr reward ſhal be holy vnto ꝑ lord: Theyr gaynes ſhal not be layd vp nor kept in ſtore, but it ſhal be theirs that dwell before the Lorde: that they maye eate ynough and haue clothyng ſufficient.

A prophecie of tribulacion to come vpon the worlde becauſe of ſynne.

And the prieſt ſhalbe as the people, and ꝑ maſter as the ſeruaunt, the maſtreſſe lyke the mayde, ꝑ ſeller like the byer: He that lendeth vpon vſury, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vſury: ꝑ creditoure as the detter: The worlde ſhalbe cleane waſted and vtterly ſpoyled, for ſo the lorde hath ſpoken. The earth is ſorye, and conſumeth awaye: the worlde is feble and periſheth, the proude people of the earthe are come to naught. The earth alſo is become vnprofitable vnder the enhabitours therof, whiche haue tranſgreſſed the lawes, chaunged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlaſting couenaunt. Therfore hathe the curſe conſumed the yearth, & they ꝑ dwel therin are falē vnto treſpaſſe. Wherfore the inhabitours of the earth are peryſhed with drought, and fewe mē are left behinde. The wyne faileth, the wyne hath no mighte: all they that haue been mery of heart are come to mourning. The myrthe of tabrettes is layed doume, the noyſe of ſuche as haue made mery, is ceaſed, the ioye of the harpe is at an ende. For the bed is narowe, and not large: and the couerynge so small that a man cannot wynde hym selfe vnder it. * For the Lord shal stande as in mount Esa.16.f 2.Re.5.b Perazym, and shalbe wroth lyke as in the *Jos.10.b 2.par.13.b valley * Gybeon: that he may do hys worke, his straūge worke, & bring to passe hys acte, his straūge acte. Now therfore se that ye be F no mockers, lest your punishment increase: for I haue herde of the Lorde of hoostes, that there shall come a shorte ende vpō the whole earth. Heare ye the, and herken vnto my voyce, consydre and pondre my speche. Dothe not the husbandman plowe all the daye, and openeth and breaketh the clottes of hys ground that he maye sowe? when he hath made it plaine wil he not sprede abrod the fitches, and sowe comyn, and caste in wheate by measure, and hath appoynted barly and rye in theyr place? God wyll instructe hym to haue dyscrecion, euen hys God wyll teach him. For fitches shal not be threasshed wyth an harowe, neyther shall a carte whele be broughte thorowe the comyn: but the fitches are beaten oute wyth a staffe, and comin wyth a rod. But the sede that breade is made of, is threshed, though it be not alwaye a threshyng. And the cart whele muste be broughte ouer it, lest he grynde it wyth his teeth. This also commeth of the lorde of hoostes, whyche worketh wyth wonderfull wisdom, & bringeth excellēt workes to passe.

The.xxix. Chapter.

WOe vnto the O Ariel, Ariel the cite that 1.Re.5.b A Dauid dwelt in. Go on frō yeat to yeat, & let the lambes be slain. I wil lay sege vnto Ariel, so that there shalbe heuines & sorow in it, and it shalbe vnto me euē as an alter of slaughter. I wil besege the round about, and fight against the thorowe a bulwork and wil reare vp ditches against the. Thou shalt be brought downe, and shalt speake out of the grounde, and thy speche shal go lowe out of the dust. Thy voyce also shall come oute of the grounde, lyke the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whysper out of the dust.

Moreouer, the noyse of thy straunge ene-myes shalbe lyke thinne dust, and the mul-

B that cannot tary: euen sodenly & in hast shal they blaste goe. Thou shalte be vysited of the lord of hoostes wyth thonder, earthquake, and wyth a greate noyse: wyth storme and tempest, and wyth the flame of a consumyng fyre. And the multytude of al nacyons that fight agaynst Ariel, shalbe as a dreame sene Psal.73.c by nyght: * euen so shal al they be, that make warre agaynste it, and strong holdes to ouer-come it, and that lay any seyge vnto it. In conclusion, it shalbe euen as when an hongry man dreameth that he is eatynge, and whe he awaketh, hys soule is empty. Or as whe a thyrstye man dreameth that he is drync-kyng, and when he awaketh, he is yet faynte & hys soule hath apetyte. Euē so shalbe the multitude of all nacions that fyght against Sion. Wonder ye these thynges once in your Mat.11.b myndes, and wonder. * Blynded are they C them selues, and the blynd gyydes of other.
They are dronken, but not wyth wyne: they are vnstable, but not throwe strong drynke.

For the lorde hath couered you wyth a slombrynge spyrite, and hath closed youre eyes. Your prophetes also and rulers that Esai.6.b ghuld se, the hath he couered. * And the vysiō of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke ꝑ is sealed vp, whiche men delyuer to one that is learned, sayynge: Reade thou in it. And he sayth: I cannot,
for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto him that is not learned, sayyng: Reade thou Matth.15.a in it, and he sayeth: I am not learned. Ther-Mark.7.a. fore thus hath the Lorde sayde: * For somoch as thys people whē they be in trouble do honour me wyth theyr mouth and wyth theyr lyppes, but their herte is far fro me: & ꝑ feare which they haue vnto me, procedeth D of a commaundemēt that is taughte of mē:
Therfore wyl I do maruayles among thys

3.Esd.3.c a wonder. * For the wysdome of theyr wysemen shall perysshe, and the vnderstandynge of theyr wytty men shal hyde it selfe.

Woe vnto them ꝑ kepe secret their thoughtes, to hyde theyr counsel from the lord, & do Esa.47.d theyr workes in darkenesse, sayynge: who * Ezech.9.d seeth vs? & who knoweth vs? Doubles, your destructyō is (in my handes) in reputacion as the potters claye. And doth the worke saye of hym that made it, he made not me? And doth an earthen vessell saye of hym that fashioned it, he had no vnderstandynge?
Is it not harde at hande, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe fielde, and that the lowe field shalbe taken as ꝑ wood? And in that daye shall deafe men heare the wor-des of the boke, & the eyes of the blynd shall se euen out of the cloude & out of darcknes.

The meke spyrited also shalbe merye in G ꝑ lorde, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shal reioyse in the holy one of Israel.
For he that dyd violence, is broughte to naught, & the scorneful man is consumed: & they rooted out ꝑ were hasty so sone to vn-tyghteousnes, makyng a man to synne in the word, and that toke him in a snare, which reproued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the tyghteous to nought. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayeth he that redemed Abrahā: * Jacob shall not Gen.46 nowe be confounded, nor hys face pale. But when he seeth hys chyldren the worke of my handes in the myddes of hym, they shall sanctifie my name, and prayse the holy lord of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronious spryte, shall come to vnderstandyng, and they that haue bene scornefull, shall learne doctrine.

The. xxx Chapter.

Cayynge them that forsake the counsel of God, and cleue to ꝑ counsel of men. The prophet also threatneth the remnaunte of the people, that after the destruction of Jerusalem went into Egypt.

Alas, for those dysobedyente chyldrē, I (sayth the lorde) * that they wil take Esa.41.b counsell withoute me. Alas, that they wyll take a secrete aduyce, and not oute of my spyrite, and therfore adde they sinne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypt, and haue asked no questyon at my mouth, but seke strength in the myght of Pharao, and trust in the shadowe of Egipt.
Therefore shall the strength of Pharao be your confusion, and the trust of the shadowe of Egypte youre shame. For his captaynes were at Zoan, and his ambassadours came vnto Hanes. * They were al ashamed of the Esa.41.d people that coulde do them no good, and Jer.17.b ꝑ might not helpe them, nor shewe them any Esa.30.d profit, but were theyr confusion and rebuke.
The heuy burthē of ꝑ beastes of ꝑ south in B

Camels theyr treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vayne and nothyng worthe shall the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Jerusalem. They shall haue strength ynough, yf they wyll settle theyr myndes 30.15.a in quyetnesse.* Nowe therfore, goe thy waye, and wryte this before them in a table, and note it in a booke that it may fynally remayne and be kept styll for euer.
30.9.b For it is an obstinate people, * and dissemblyng chyldren: chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

C For they saye vnto the seers: See not, and to them that beleaue of iudgements: looke not out ryght thynges for vs: but speake fayre wordes vnto vs, looke out errours, gette you out of this waye, departe out of this path, and turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Wherfore thus sayeth the holy one of Israel: Because your herres ryse against this worde, and because ye trust in wronge dealyng and peruerse iudgemente, and put your confydence therein: Therfore shall ye haue this myschefe for your destruccyon and fall, lyke as an hye wall that falleth, because of some ryfte or blaste, whose breakyng commeth sodenlye.* And the hurte 30.14.b therof is lyke an erthen vessell, whiche breaketh without helpe: so that in the burstyng of it, there is not found one sheuer to fetch fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pytte. For thus sayeth the D Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel:
Ezec.14.c In repentaunce and in * rest shall ye bee Esa.32.d saue: in quyetnesse and sure confydence shall bee your strength. But ye haue had no lust therto, for ye haue sayde: Noe, but we will escape thorow horses. (Therfore shall ye flye) and we will get vs vp vpon swyfte beastes. And therfore shall youre Ezec.16.a. persecutours bee swyfter. * A thousande Esa.31.d. shall flye at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shall ye all flye, tyll ye bee lefte as a shyppe maste vpon the top of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an Esa.1.a. hyll.* Therfore doeth the Lorde cause you to wayte, that he maye haue mercye vpon you: to thintente that he may haue the preeminence, whē he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Blessed are all they that hope in hym. yf the people remayne in Sion, E and at Jerusalem, thou shalt not bee in heuynesse: but at the voyce of thy complaynte shall he haue mercye vpon thee. And when he heareth it he shal geue thee an answere. And though the Lorde geue you the bread of trouble, and the water of aduersitte: thy rayne shalbe nomore so skant, but thyne eyes shall see thy rayne. yea, and thyne eare shall heare the talkyng of hym that doeth speake behynde thee.* This is the waye, walke ye in it. Deu.4.a.
Turne not aside, neyther to the ryght hand nor to the left. Ye shall destroy also the couering of your syluer ymages, and the deckyng of your golden idols. Euen as fylthynes shall ye put them awaye. And thou shalt saye vnto it: Get the hēce.

Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy seede, that thou shalt sowe the grounde withall: and breade of the increase of the earth, whiche shalbe fatte and very plenteous. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fed in large pasture. The oxen lykewyse and the younge asses, that eate the ground, shal eate cleane prouēdre, which is pourged with the wynde and the fan.

Fynally, vpon euery hye mountayne F and hyll, shall there be ryuers and streames of waters, * in the daye of the great 2. Pet.3.b slaughter, when the towers fall. Moreouer, the light of the moone shall be as the lyght of the sunne: and the sunne lyght shall be seuen folde, and haue as muche shyne as in seuen dayes beside, when the Lorde byndeth vp the sore of his people, and healeth the stroke of theyr wounde. Beholde, the fame of the Lorde commeth from farre, and his presence is so hote, that no manne is able to abyde. His lyppes are full of indignacion, and his tong is as a consumyng fyre. His breth is as a vehemente floude of water that reacheth vp to the necke. That he may sifte awaye the heathen in the syue of vanitie. And hys breth is as a bridle of errour in the chawes of the people. And ye shall singe, G lyke as in the nyght, when the holye solemnitie begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of herte, lyke as when one commeth with a pype vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the moste myghtye one of Israel. And the Lorde shall cause hys glorious voyce to be heard, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenaunce, and with the flame of a consumyng fyre, wyth noysome lyghtening, with a shower, & with hayle stones. For thorowe the voyce of the Lorde shall Esa.10.a * Assur bee destroyed, whiche smote o- ther menne wyth the rodde. And it shall some to passe, that whythersoeuer he goeth, the rod shall cleaue vnto hym, which the Lorde shall laye vpon hym: with tabrettes, and harpes, & with greate warre Esay. 31. b shall he fyght agaynste hys hoste. * For the fyre of payne is ordeined from the begynnyng: yea, euen for kynges is it prepared. This hathe the Lorde sette in the depe, and made it wyde: the burnyng thereof is fyre and muche wood. The brethe of the Lorde, whiche is a ryuer of brymstone, doeth kyndle it.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for helpe of men.

¶ WOe bee vnto them that goe downe into Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & put their confydence in charettes, because they be many: and in horsemen, because they be lustye and strong. But they regarde not the holye one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lorde.
Where as he neuertheles (beeyng wyse best of all) plageth the wicked, and yet goeth not fro his worde, whe he steppeth forth, and taketh the victory agaynst the housholde of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euyll doers. Nowe the Egiptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesh and not spyrite. And allone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shoulde haue been helped, and they shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde Deut. 7. a spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the Lyon or Esay. 49. b the Lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye he hath gotten, & is not afrayde though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vp-on hym, neyther abashed for al the heape of them: So shal the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mounte Syon, and defend his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flotire about their nestes, * so shall the Lorde of Deut. 32. b hostes kepe, saue, defende, and deliuer Ierusalem. Therfore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne from that infidelitie, wherein you drowned youre selues. *
Esaye. 2. c For in that daye euery man shall cast out his ydols of syluer, & his ydols of golde, whiche ye haue made with youre owne Esai. 37. c handes vnto youre synne. * Assur also D shal be slayne with the sweard, not with a mans sweard, neyther shall the sweard of any manne deuoure hym: And he shall flee from the slaughter, & hys seruauntes shall be discomfyted in their hertes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, and his prynces shal flee from his badge.
This hath the Lorde spoken, whose light burneth in Syon, and his fyre in Jerusalem.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

The condicyons of good rulers and officers.

BEholde, a kynge shall gouerne A after the rule of ryghteousnesse, and the prynces shall rule accordynge to the balaunce of equitie. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynde, & as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thyrstie place, and the shadowe of a greate rocke in a dyre lande. The eyes of the seeyng shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shall take dylygent hede. The herte of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnperfyte toungue shall speake playnlye and dystynctly. Then shall the foolyshe nygarde bee nomore called gentle, nor the churle lyberall. But the nygarde wyll be B nygardly mynded, and hys herte wyll worke euyll, and playe the ypocrite, and ymagyne abhompnacions against God, to make the hongry leane, and to withholde drynche from the thyrstye. These are the perilous weapõs of the churlish, these bee his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with dysceytfull wordes: yea, euē there as be should geue sentence with the poore. * But the liberal Esa. 61. d person ymagineth honest thynges, and commeth vp for lyberalitie vnto promo-cion. Up (ye ryche and ydell wemen) her- C ken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cyties, marke my woordes. After yeares and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careles cyties. For harueste shall bee out, and the grape gatheryng shall not come.
O ye ryche ydell cytyes, ye that feare no parell. Be abashed, you that lyue in a-boundaunce: tremble you that lyue care-les: cast of youre raymente, make youre selues bare, put sacke clothe aboute you.
For as the infantes wepe whē their mothers teates are dryed: so shall you wepe for your fayre feldes and frutefull vyneyardes. My peoples felde shall bringe thornes and thistles: and so shall it bee euen in euery house of voluptuousnesse, and in euery cytie that reioyseth. The D palaces also shalbe broken, & the greatly occupyed cyties desolate. The towres and bulwarkes shall become dennes for euer

euermoze: the pleasure of mules shall be turned to pasture foz shepe: vnto the time that the spzyte be powzed vpon vs from aboue. Then shall the wyldernelle bee a frutefull fielde, and the plenteous fielde shall be tekened foz a wood. Then shall equitie dwell in the delerte, and tyghteousnelle in a frutefull lande. * And the re- Gen.3.a warde of tyghteousnelle shall be peace, and her frute, rest and quyetnes foz euer.

* And my people shall dwell in the Jer.33.d pnnes of peace, and in sure dwellynges, in lafe places of comfozte. And when the hayle falleth, it shall fal in the wood, and the cite shall be sette lowe in the valley. O howe happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely sowe pour sede belyde all waters, and dzyue thyther the feete of pour oxen and alles.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

Threatnyng against the Assyrians. A discryption of them that shall see the Lozde.

WOe to thee that destroyest, when thou waste not destroyed: thou breakest the leage, whereas none hath broken it with thee: foz whē Jere.12.d thou shalt leaue destroying, * thou thy Apo.13.d selfe shalt be destroyed. And when thou Esay.21.c ceasest from breakyng the leage, then Apo.7.d shall they breake it to thee. O Lozd, haue mercye vpon vs: we haue put our whole trust in thee. Be an arme to suche early: Psa.9.b and * our health, in ỹ time of trouble. At that confuse noyse, the people fled, and at thyne exaltyng, the heathen were scatered. And the spoyles shall bee gathered (whiche shall be pours) as are the gathe- tyng of Bzuchus. And the multitude go- yng to it shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro. The Lozde is exalted, foz it is he that dwelleth on hye: he hath fylled Sy- on with iudgemente and tyghteousnelle.

B And a sure stablyshing of thy times shal be strength, health, wisedome and know- ledge: and the verye feare of the Lozde shalbe the treasure of it. Behold, the mel- sengers shall crye without: and the am- bassadours of peace shall wepe bytterly. The stretes are waste, there walketh no manne therein. God hath broken the ap- poyntmente, the cyties are caste awaye, and menne are nothing regarded, the de- solate earth is in heuynelle. Libanus is shamed, and hewen downe. Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Charmell are spoyled of theyr frutes: and therfoze sayeth the Lozde: I wyll vp nowe, nowe wyll I be auaunced: nowe wyll I be ex- alted as a myghtye God. * Ye shall con- * Jere.5.c ceiue stubble, and beare strawe, and pour spzyte shall be the fyze, that it maye con- sume you, and the people shall be burnte lyke lyme, and as thoznes burne that are hewen of, and caste in the fyer. Nowe her- ken to ye that are farre of, howe I haue done: and consydze my powez, ye that be at hande. The synners at Syon are a- C frayde, a sodē fearfulnes is come vpon the ypocrytes. What is he amōg vs, say they, that shall dwell by the consumyng fyze? whiche of vs maye abyde that euer- lastyng heate? * He that leadeth a godlye * Psa.14.a lyfe saye I, and speaketh the trueth. He and.23.a that abhozreth gaynes wonne by vio- lence and disceyte: he that kepeth hys hande that he touche no rewarde: whiche stoppeth hys eares, that he heare no cod- sell against the innocente bloud: whiche holdeth downe hys eyes that he see none euyll. He it is that shall dwell on hye, whole sauegarde shall be in a bulwarke of rockes: to hym shall be geuen meate, and hys waters shall not fayle. Thyne eyes shall see the kyng in hys glozy, euen the kyng of the farre countreys shall they see: thyne herte studyed foz feare thynkyng thus. * What shall then be- 1.Cor.1.a come of the Scrybe? of the receyuer of our money? what of hym that tared oure fayzest houses? There shalt thou not see a people of a straunge tongue to haue so diffused a language, that it maye not bee D vnderstand, neyther so straunge a speche, but it shall bee perceyued. There shall Syon be sene the head cytie of oure so- lemne feastes. There shall thyne eyes see Jerusalem that glozyous habitacion, * Deut.9.b the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue: whose nayles shall neuer bee taken oute wozlde without ende: whose cozdes eue- rychone shall neuer corrupte: foz the glo- rious maiestie of the Lozd shall there be present among vs, as a place where fayze bzode ryuers and streames are, thozowe the whiche shall neyther galey rowe, noz greate hyppe sayle. * Foz the Lozde is * Jac.4.a our iudge, the Lozde is our lawe geuer. The Lozde is our kyng, and he hymselfe shalbe our saupour. There are the cozdes so layde abzode, that they cannot be bet- ter. And therfoze they haue not fyxed theyr maste, noz spzed abzode theyr sayle. Then there is dealed greate spoyle yea, lame menne runne after the pzay. There lyeth no man that sayth, I am sycke: but all euyll is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

The last destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kingdom & priesthode of that people was translated to the churche and congregation of Christe.

A Come ye Heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thou earth and all that is therin: thou round compasse and al that groweth there vpon: for the Lord is angrye with all people, and his displeasure is kyndled against all the multytude of them, he hath destroyed them, and deliuered them to the slaughter: So that their slayne shalbe cast out, and their bodyes styncke: that euen the very hilles shalbe wet with the bloud of them. All the starres of heauen shall waste, and the heauen shall folde together lyke a roll, and all the starres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vynes, and fyggetrees. For my sweard shall be bathed in heauen, and shall immediatlye come downe in iudgemente vpon Idumea and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

B And the Lordes sweard shalbe full of bloud, & be rusty with the fatnes & bloud of lambes and goates, with the fatnes of the kydneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a great offering in Bozra, and a great slaughter in ỹ lande of Idumea. There shall the Unicornes fall with thẽ, and the bulles with the gyauntes, and their lande shalbe thorowly soked with bloud and their grounde corrupte with fatnes. Unto the also, O Syõ, shal come the day of the vengeaunce of God, & the peare whẽ thine owne iudgemẽtes shalbe recompẽsed. And his floudes shalbe turned to pytche, and his earth to brimstone: and therwith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched daye nor night: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no mã shall go thorow it for euer. But pellicanes, storkes, great oules, & rauens, shal haue it in possessiõ,

C and dwell therein. For God shall spreade out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and weye it with the stones of emptinesse.

When kynges are called vpon, there shalbe none, and al princes shalbe away. Thornes shal grow in their palaces, nettles and thystles in their strong holdes, that the Dragons may haue their pleasure therin, and that they may be a court for estryches. There shal straung visures and monsterous beastes mete one another, and the wylde kepe companye together. There shal the Lamia lye, and haue her lodging. There shall the oule make her nest, buylde, bee there at home, and bryng forth his ponge ones. There shall the kytes come together, eche one to hys lyke. Seke thorowe the scrypture of the D Lorde and read it. There shall none of these thynges be left out: there shall not one, nor suche lyke, fayle. For what hys mouth commaundeth, thesame doeth his spyryte gather together, or fulfylleth. He hath caste the lot for them, and to those beastes hath his handes deuyded ỹ lyne: therfore those shall possesse the enheryteaunce, from generacion to generacion, and dwel therin for euer.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christe.

A But the deserte and wildernesse shall B reioyce, the waste grounde shall be glad and florysshe as the lylye. She shall florysshe pleasauntly and be ioyfull, & euer be geuing of thãkes more & more. For the glory of Libanus, the bewtye of Charmel and Saron, shalbe geuen her. These shall knowe the honoure of the Lord, and the maiestie of our god.* And therfore strength the weake handes, and confort the feble knees. Say vnto them that are of a fearfull herte: bee of good chere, and feare not.* Behold, your God B commeth to take vengeaunce: & you shal see the rewarde that God geueth. God commeth his owne selfe and wil delyuer you.* Then shal the eyes of the blynd be lyghtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an hart, & the* dumme mans tonge shall geue thankes. ‡ In the wildernesse also there shal wels sprynge, and floudes of water in the desert. The dry ground shal C turne to ryuers, & the thyrsty to springes of water. Where as Dragons dwelt afore, there shall growe swete floures and grene rushis. There shalbe fotepathes & comen stretes, this shalbe called the holy way. No vncleane person shal go thorow it: for the Lord himselfe shal go with thẽ, that way: & the wayfarer, nor ignorant shal not erre. There shalbe no Lyon, and D no rauyshyng beaste shall come therein, nor be there: but menne redemed shall go there free & safe. And the redemed of the

Lorde,

Lorde, I saye, shall conuerte and come to Syon with thanke geuynge. Euerlasting ioye shall they haue: pleasure and gladnes shalbe among them. And as for all sorow and heuynesse, it shall vanyshe awaye.

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

Jerusalem is besieged by Sennacherib, in the tyme of kynge Ezekias.

IN * the.xiiii.yere of kynge Hezekias came Sennacherib king of the Assirians downe, to laye seyge vnto all the stronge cities of Juda, to conquere them. And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabsaketh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynste kynge Hezekias, with an exceadyng host: whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpoole in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. And so there came forthe vnto hym Eliakim Helkias sone the presidēt * Sobna the scrybe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretorye. And Rabsaketh sayed vnto the: Tel Hezekias, that the greate kinge of Assirya sayeth thus vnto hym: what presumptiō is this, that thou trustest vnto? I saied: Surely thou trustest in vayne wordes, when councell and strength are necessarye to battayle: or els whereto trustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of from me? * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broke staffe of rede (I meane Egypt) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth into hys hand and shuteth hym thorowe. Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egypte vnto all them that truste in hym. But yf thou wouldest saye to me: We trust in the Lorde our GOD. A goodly God in dede: whose hie places and aultares Hezekia toke downe, and commaunded Juda, and Jerusalem to worshyppe only before the aulter. Nowe therfore deliuer Hostages, that thou rebelle nomore agaynst my Lorde the kynge of Assiryans. And I wil geue the two thousande horses: yf thou be able to set men vpon them. Howe dareste thou resist the power of the smallest prince, that my Lorde hathe? howe dareste thou truste in the charettes and horsmen of Egypt? Moreouer, thynkest thou that I am come vp hither to destroye this land without the Lordes wyll? The Lord sayde vnto me: go vp into the land, that thou mayst destroye it. Then sayed Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsaketh. Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Syryans language, for we vnderstande it well. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, leste the folke heare whiche syteth vpon the wal. Then answered Rabsaketh: thinke ye that the kynge sente me to speake thys onelye vnto thy Lord and the? hath he not sent me vnto them also that sye vpon the walle? that they may bee compelled to eate theyr owne donge, and drynke theyr owne thale with you? And Rabsaketh stode fyll, and cried with a loude voyce in the Jewes tongue, and sayed: nowe take hede, howe the great king of the Assirians geueth you warning. Thus sayeth the kynge: Let not Hezekias dyscreaue you: for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer, let not Hezekias comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: the Lorde without doubte, shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer thys citie into the handes of the kyng of the Assirians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the kynge of Assiria: obtayne my fauoure, enclyne to me, so maye euery man enioye his vyneyardes and fyg trees, and drynke the water of hys cesterne, vnto the tyme that I come my selfe and bringe you into a lande that is lyke youre owne, wherin is wheate and wyne, whiche is bothe sowen with seede, and planted with vineyardes. Let not Hezekias disceiue you when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shall deliuer vs. * Wyght the Gods of the Gētyles kepe euery mans land, frō the power of the kinge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of al the Gods of these landes hath deliuered theyr countrie out of my power? is the Lord in dede able to deliuer Jerusalem from my hande? Unto this Hezekias messaungers helde theyr tongues, and answered not one word, for the kyng had charged them that they shoulde geue him no answere. So came Eliakim Helkias sone the presydent, Sobna the Scrybe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretorye, vnto Hezekias with rente clothes, and tolde him the wordes of Rabsaketh.

The.xxxvii.Chapter.

Hezekias humbleth himselfe before the Lord. The armye of Sennacherib is slayne of the Angel of the Lord: and he hym selfe is killed of his owne sonnes.

WHē Hezekias heard that, he rent his clothes, and put on a sacke cloth and went into the temple of the Lord. But he sent Heliakim the president, Sobna the scribe with the eldest priestes clothed in sacke, vnto the prophet Esaie the sonne of Amoz, and they saied vnto him: Thus saieth Hezekias: this is the daie of trouble, of plage and blasphemie: for the children are come to the place of byrth: but there is no power to bringe the forth. The Lord thy God (no doubte) hath wel considered the wordes of Rabsaketh, whome his Lord the king of the Assyrians hath sent to defye & blaspheme the liuyng God, with suche wordes as the Lord thy God hathe heard rycht wel. And therfore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunt that yet are left. So the seruauntes of the kyng Hezekias came of Assiria laying seege to Lybnas, for he Tharhakas kyng of Ethyopia was come forth to warre against hym. And when the kynge of Assiria hearde that, he sente other the letter of the messaungers, and reade it, he went vp into the house of the Lord, & o-prayed before the Lorde on hys maner. O open thyne eyes, O Lord, & see, & ponder al the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the liuinge

Assiria haue conquered all kingdomes and D landes, & cast theyr goddes in the fyre. Not-therfore haue they destroied them. Deliuer vs thē, O Lord oure God, from the hāde of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the vnto Hezekia, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel. Where as thou hast made

The same waye that he came, he shall returne, & not come at this citie, sayeth the Lord. And I will kepe & saue the cytie (sayeth he) for myne owne, & for my seruaunt Dauides God promiseth to send hys Christ, which shal deliuer his people. He forgeueth sinnes for his owne sake.

NOw no we, the Lord that made the O Iacob, and he that fashioned thee O Israell, sayeth thus: * Feare not for I haue redemed thee. I haue called thee by name, thou art myne owne. * Yf thou goest thorow the water, I will be with the, that the strong floudes shoulde not pluck thee a waye. * And yf thou walkest thorowe the fyre, it shal not burne the, and the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, ỹ holy one of Israel thy sauiour. And to the south, kepe not backe: but bringe me my sonnes from farre, & my daughters from the endes of the worlde. Namely al those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, fashioned and made for my honoure.

You are my wytnesses (sayeth the Lorde) and my seruaunte, whō I haue chosen, therfore be certified & geue me faythful credence, and consider that * I

C am he, before whom there was neuer any God, & that there shalbe none after me. I am, euen I am, the only Lorde & besyde me there is no sauyour. I gaue warnynge, I made whole, I taughte you, when there was no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me youre selues (sayeth the Lorde) that I am god. And euē he am I from the beginninge, & * there is none ỹ can take any thing out of my hand. I do the worcke & who shall be able to let it? Thus saieth ỹ Lorde, ỹ holy one of Israel youre redemer: * for your sake I haue sent to Babylon, and brought downe the strongest of thē. All they are fugytiue with the Caldees that bost thē of their shippes. Euen I the Lorde youre holy one whiche haue made Israel, and am youre kinge.

This people haue I made for my selfe: & they shal shewe forth my praise. For thou (Iacob) wouldest not cal vpō me, but thou haddest an vnlust toward me, O Israel. Thou gauest me not thy beastes for burnte offeringes, neyther didest honour me w thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deare spyce with thy money, nether pouredst the fatte of thy sacryfyces vpon me. * Howbeit, I haue not bē chargeable vnto the in offerynges, nether greuous in incense. But thou hast laden me with thy sinnes, and weried me with thine vngodlines. * Where as I yet, euen I, am he only that for mine owne selues sake do awaye thyne offences, & forget thy sinnes, so that I will neuer thinke vpon them.

Put me nowe in remembraunce (for wee will reason together) & shewe what thou hast for the, to make the righteous. * Thy firste father offended sore, and thy rulers haue sinned againste me. Therfore I ether suspended, or slue the chefest princes. I did curse Iacob, and gaue Israel into reproue.

The deliuerauncе of the people by Cyrus. The coronyng of Christ, and callyng of the Gentyles.

THus sayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his annoynted, whome I haue taken by ꝑ ryght hand, to subdue nacions before hym.* I wyll leuse the gyrdle of kinges, and I wyll open the gates before his face, and not to shutte theyr doores. The.xlvii. Chapter.

The woorde of the Lorde against Babylon.

BVt as for thee (O daughter, thou byrgyn Babylon) sytte thou downe in the dust, syt vpon the grounde, and not in a throne (O þ maiden of Caldea.) Thou shalt nomore be called tendre & pleasaūt. Bring forth þ querne, and grynde meale: vntrusse thy hoyded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees, and wade thorowe the water ryuers. * Thy shame shalbe discouered, & thy priuities shalbe seen. For I will auenge me of thee, and will shewe no mercy to thee as I do to other mē, sayth our redemer: which is called the Lord of hostes, the holy one of Israel. Syt styll, hold thy tonge, & get thee into some darcke corner, (O daughter Caldea for þ shalt nomore be called lady of kingdomes. I was so wrothe with my people, þ I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. & Neuertheless, þ shewedst them no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them diddest thou oppresse right sore with thy yoke, & thou thoughtest thus: I shalbe lady for euer. And beside all that, thou haste not regarded these thynges, neyther remembred what was the end of that citie Ierusalem. Heare now therfore, thou wylfull that sittest so carelesse, & speakest thus in thine hert: * I am alone, & without me is there none: I shall neuer be wydowe nor desolate agayne. And yet bothe these thinges shal come to thee vpō one day, in the twynckling of an eye, & Namely, wyddowhead & desolaciō. They shal mightely fall vpō thee, for the multytude of thy wytches, & for the great heape of thy conturers. For thou hast trusted in thy wyckednes, and haste sayde: * No man seeth me. Thyne owne wysedom and cunning hath dyscepued thee. In that thou haste sayde: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon thee, and thou shalt not knowe from whence it shall aryse. Mysche se shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. Sodayne vtter destruccion shall come vpon thee, or euer thou be aware.

Nowe go to thy conturers, and to the multytude of thy wytches (with whom þ haste werped thy selfe from thy youth) if they may help the or strengthē the. Thou haste hitherto had many councels of thē: so let the heauen gasers & the beholders of starres, & moone prophetes, come on now & deliuer the: yea, & let thē shew whē these thinges shal come vpō the. Behold, they shalbe lyke strawe, which if it be kyndled with fyre, no man may rydde it for the vehemēcie of þ flame. And yet it geueth no sinders to warme a mā by, nor cleare fyre to sytte by. The.xlviii. Chapter.

The hypocrysye of the Iewes is reproued. The Lorde alone wil be worshipped, whiche hath chosen vs, and which succoureth vs for his owne sake.

HEare this, O thou house of Iacob, ye that are called by the name of Israel, & are come out of one stocke with Iuda: Which sweare by the name of the Lord, & beare witnesse by the God of Israel (but not with trueth and right) which are called * free mẽ of the holy citie, & are groũded vpon ꝓ God of Israel, * whose name is the Lord of hostes. The thynges ꝓ I shewed you euer sence the beginning, haue I not brought them to passe immediatly as they came out of my mouth, and declared them, & they are come? Howbeit, I know ꝓ thou art obstinate, & that thy neck hath an yron vaine, & that thy brow is of brasse: neuertheles I haue euer synce the begynning shewed thee of thynges to come, & declared them vnto thee, or euer they came to passe: that thou shouldest not saye, myne ydoll hath done it, my carued or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou hardest it before, & behold, it is come to passe: and whether can ye prophecye of thinges to come? But as for me I told thee before at ꝓ beginning, new & secrete thinges that thou knewest not of. * And some done now, not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer hardest before they were brought to passe: that thou cãst not saye: Behold I knew of them. Moreouer, there be some wherof ꝓ haste neither hard nor knowe, neither haue they been opened vnto thine eares afore tyme. For I knew that thou wouldest malycyously offend, therfore haue I called thee a trãsgressour, euen from thy mothers wombe. Neuertheles, for my names sake, I wil withdraw my wrath, & it shalbe for myne honours sake yt I pacietly forbeare thee & rote thee not out. Behold, I haue purged thee, yet not as syluer. * I haue chosẽ thee in the fyre of affliction, & that only for myne owne sake: yea, * euen for myne owne sake wyll I doe this: or els, what dishonour wouldе they doe to my name? Herken vnto me, O Iacob and Israel, whom I haue called. I am he, I am euẽ he that is, I am the first and the last. My hand hath layd the foũdacio of the earth, & my ryght hande hath spanned ouer the heauens. Assone as I call them they are there. Gather you altogether and herke: whiche of yonder goddes hath declared this? The Lorde hath a loue vnto hym, and he shall performe his wil agaynste Babell, and declare his power agaynste the Caldees. I my selfe alone, euen I haue told you this before: yea, I did call hym, and bryng hym forth: and he shall make his wayes prosperous. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken any thing darckelye, sence the begynnyng? when a thyng begynneth I am there. Wherfore the Lorde God and his spyryte hath sent me. And thus sayeth the Lorde God thy redemer, the holy one of Israel. I am the Lorde thy God: whiche teache thee * profytable thinges, and leade thee the waye, that thou shouldest goe. & O that thou haddest regarded my cõmaundementes, then had thy welthinesse been as the water streame, and thy ryghteousnes as the waues flowyng in the sea. Thy sede also had been lyke as the sande in the sea, and the fruite of thy bodye lyke the grauell stones therof. Hys name shoulde not bee rooted out, nor destroyed before me. * Go away from Babylon, flye from the Caldees: with a merye voyce speake of thys, declare it abrode, and go forthe vnto the ende of the worlde, saye ye: The Lord hath redemed his seruaunte Iacob, that they suffered no thurst, he led them thorowe the wyldernes, and caused the waters to flowe oute vnto them from out of the rocke. * He claue the rocke a sondre, and the water gushed out. & As for the vngodly, they haue no peace, sayth ꝓ Lorde.

A conſolacion and comforte to the people of God.

hath it pleased the lorde thus to burst him this deuice of the lord shall prosper in hys

The. liiii. Chapter.

Of the greate dompmon of Christe. The indignation of God endureth but a shorte space, but hys mercye is euerlastyng.

BE glad now, * thou baren that bearest not, reioyce, lyng and de thy tentes wider, & spreade out ꝑ hãginges of thine habitation: spare not, lay forth thy cordes, and make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt be multiplied on the right side and on the left, and thy seede shall haue the gentils in possession, & dwel in the desolate cyties.

Feare not, for thou shalt not be cõfounded: Bee not ashamed, for thou shalte not come to confusiõ. Yea, thou shalt forget ꝑ shame of thy youth, and shalte not remember the dishonoure of thy widdowheade. For he that made thee shalbe thy lord * and house-band (whose name is) the lord of hostes:) and thy redemer shalbee cum the holye one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole worlde.
For the lord hath called the beyng as a desolate sorowful womã, & as a yonge wife ꝑ hath broken her wedlocke saith thy god.
* A litle whyle haue I forsaken thee, but with great mercifulnes shal I take the vp face from the for a litle seasõ: but throughe euerlastyng mercy haue I pardoned thee, saith the Lorde thy redemer: * and this is vnto me as the water of Noe: for lyke as I haue swome that I wyll not bryng the water of Noe anye more vpon the worlde,

* so haue I swome ꝑ I will neuer bee angry with the, nor reproue the. The moun-taynes shall remoue, and the hilles shal fal downe: but my louyng kyndnes shall not moue, and the bonde of my peace shall not fal downe from the, sayeth the Lorde thy mercifull louer. Beholde, thou poore ouerwhelmed with tempest, & * without com-forte: I will make thy walles of precious stones, and thy foundacion of Saphires, thy windowes of Christall, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, & all thy borders of pleasaunte stones. * Thy children shall all bee taught of God, and I wil geue them plen-teousnes of peace. In righteousnesse shalte thou be grounded, & be far from oppressiõ, for ꝑ which thou nedest not to be afrayed: neither for hinderaunce, for it shal not come nye the. Behold, the aduaunt that was far from me, shal dwel with the: & he that fo-meth battayle against the, shal perysche. Be-holde, I make the smyth that blowethe the coales in the fyer, and he maketh a weapon after his handye woorke. I make also the waster to destroye: but all the weapons that are made against the, shal not prosper.
* And as for al tonges that shal resiste the in iudgment, thou shalt ouercome them, and condemne them. This is the heritage of the Lordes seruauntes, and their rightteousnes commeth of me sayeth the Lorde.

The. lv. Chapter.

A consolacion and comforte to the people. The fruite and profyte of the worde of God.

COme * to the waters al ye ꝑ be thirsty, and ye that haue no mo-nye. Come, bye that ye maye haue to eat. Come, by wine and milke without any mony, or mony worth:
wherefore doe ye laye out your monye for the thynge that fedeth not, and spend your labour aboute the thinge that satisfyeth you not? But hearken, hearken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the beste, and your soule shal haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Encline youre eares, & come vnto me, take hede (I saye) and your soule shall liue. * For I will make an euerlastynge couenaunt

uenaunt with you, euē the sure mercies of Dauid. Behold, I gaue him for a witnes among the folke, for a prynce and captain vnto the people. Loe thou shalt call an vnknowen people, and a people that had no knowledge of the, shal runne vnto the: because of the Lorde thy God, and the holy one of Israell, which glorifyeth the. Seke the Lorde while he maye bee founde: and call vpon him while he is nye. * Let the vngodly manne forsake his owne wayes, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde, so shal he bee mercifull vnto him: and to our God, for he is very ready to forgeue. For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, and your wayes are not my wayes: but as far as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre doe my wayes exceade yours, and my thoughtes yours.

* And lyke as the rayne and snowe commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thither agayn, but watereth ꝑ yearth, maketh it fruitful & grene, that it may geue corne vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eateth: So the worde also that commeth out of my mouthe, shall not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shal accomplish my wyl, and prosper in the thynge whereto I send it. And so shall ye go forth with ioye, and be ledde with peace. The mountaines and hilles shall synge with you for ioye, and all the trees of the field shall clap theyr handes. For thornes ther shal grow fyrre trees: and the Wirre tre in the stead of breares. And this shalbee done to the prayse of the Lord, and for an euerlasting token that shal not be taken awaye.

An exhortacion to iudgemente and righteousnes, & to the spirituall keping of the Sabboth. Against Shepeheardes that deuoure theyr flocke.

THus saith ꝑ lord: * kepe equity, & do right: for my sauing health shal come shortly, & my righteousnes shalbe opened. Blessed is ꝑ man that doth this, and the mans childe which keepeth the same. * He ꝑ taketh hede, ꝑ he vnhalow not ꝑ Sabboth (that is) he ꝑ kepeth himself ꝑ he do none euel. Thē shal not the straunger, which cleaueth to ꝑ lord say: * Alas the lord hath shut me cleane out from his people. Nether shal * ꝑ gelded mā say: loe, I am a drye tree. For thus saith ꝑ Lord: vnto the gelded ꝑ kepeth my Sabboth, namelye that holdeth greatly of the thyng that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaūte: Unto thē will I geue in my house holde, and within my walles, a better heritage and name, thē if they had bene called sonnes and daughters. * I wil geue them an euerlastyng name, that shall not perish. ¶

Againe, the straungers that sticke to the lorde, to serue him, and to loue his name, * and to bee his seruauntes: And all they which kepe themselues, that they vnhalow not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyl my couenaunt: Them will I bringe to my holy mountaine, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Theyr burnt offeringes and sacrifices shalbee accepted vpon myne alter. * For my house shalbe called an house of prayer, for all people. Thus sayeth the Lord God whiche gathereth together the scattered of Israell: I wil bring yet another congregacion to him. Come all ye beastes of the fielde, that ye maye deuoure all the beastes of the wood. * For his watchmen are al blynde, they haue altogether no vnderstandynge, they are all dūme dogges, not beeyng able to barke, they are slepye, sloggishe are they, and lye snorynge: they are shameles dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The shepeheardes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng, * but euerye man turneth his owne waye, euerye one after his own couetousnes with al his power. * Come (say they) I wil fetch wine, so shal we fil our selues, that we maye bee dronken. And doe to morowe lyke as to daye: yea, and muche more.

The .lvii. Chapter.

The Iewes are rebuked for their iniurye done to Christ.

THe * righteous perisheth, and noman regardeth it in his hert. Good godly people are taken awaye and noman considereth it. Namely, ꝑ the righteous is conueyed away frō the wicked. He cōmeth into peace, & godly men rest in their chambers, & before the godly man goeth peace. Come hither therfore ye charmers childrē, * ye sonnes of the aduouterer, & the whore: wherin take ye your pleasure? vpō whom gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out your tōge? Are ye not childrē of aduoutrye And a seed of dissimulacion? * Ye make your fyer vnder ꝑ okes, & vnder al grene trees, & ye offer children in the valleyes and dēnes of stone. Thy part shalbe with the stonye rockes by ꝑ riuer: Yea, euē these shalbe thy part. For there thou hast powred meate & drinke offering vnto thē. Should I delite ꝑ? Thou hast made thy bed vpō hie moūtaines, thou wentest vp thither, and there haste haſt thou ſlayne ſacrifices.* Behinde the doores, and poſtes, haſt thou ſet vp thy remembraunce. When thou hadſt diſcouered thy ſelfe to an other then me, when thou wenteſt vp, and made thy bed wyder, and with thoſe ydolles haſt thou made a couenaunte, and loueſte theyr couches, where thou ſaweſte them.

C Thou wenteſt ſtreighte to kynges, with oyle, and diuers oyntmentes, (that is) thou haſt ſente thy meſſengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pyt thereby. Thou arte werye for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet ſaydſte thou neuer: I will leaue of. Thou haſt had ꝑ lyke that thy handes wrought, and therefore thou art careles. For whē wilt thou be abaſhed or feare, ſeeing thou haſt broken thy promes, and remembreſt not me, neyther haſt me in thyne heart? Thinkeſt thou, that I alſo will holde my peace (as afore tyme) that thou feareſt me not?
yea, verely I will declare thy goodnes and thy woorkes, but they ſhall not profite thee: when thou cryeſt, let thy choſen heape delyuer thee. But the wynde ſhall blow them foorth, and vanitie ſhall take them al away.* Neuertheleſſe they that put theyr truſte in me, ſhall enherite the lande: and haue my holy hil in poſſeſſion.
And therefore thus he ſayeth:* Make D playne, make playne: & clenſe the ſtreete, take vp ꝑ ſtumblyng blockes, out of the way, that ledeth to my people. For thus ſaith ꝑ hie & excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlaſtyngneſſe, whoſe name is the holye one:* I dwell hye aboue, and in the Sanctuarye: and with hym alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpiryte do I dwel: that I maye reuiue the troubled minde, and a contrite heart. For I chide not euer, and am not wrothe withoute ende. But the blaſtynge goeth from me: and is included in the body, and I made the breathe: I am wrothe with hym for hys couetouſneſſe. I ſmyte hym, I hyde me, and am angrye, when he turneth hymſelfe, and foloweth the by waye of hys owne hearte. I haue ſeene hys wayes, and I heale hym.* I leade him, and reſtore to hym cumfort, and to thoſe ꝑ were ſory for hym. I make the fruites of thankeſgeuing, ꝑ he may ſay: Peace, peace* vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nigh, ſaith the lord, and I make him whole. But the wicked are lyke the ragyng ſea, that can not reſte, whoſe water cometh with the myre and grauell.* Euen ſo the wicked haue no peace ſayeth God.

The.lviii. Chapter.

The lord (by the mouth of the prophet) reproueth the people for their faſtinges, which were ful of hypocriſye.

CRye* nowe as loude as thou canſt, leaue not of, lifte vp thy voyce lyke a tropet, and ſhew my people theyr offences, and the houſe of Iacob theyr ſynnes. For they ſeeke me dayly, and wil know my wayes, euen as it were a people that did ryght, and had not forſaken the ſtatutes of theyr God. They argue with me concerning right iudgemēt, and wil be nye vnto god.* Wherfore faſt we our ſoules to ſtraitnes, and thou regardeſt it not:* Beholde, when ye faſt, your luſt remayneth ſtil, for ye doe no leſſe violence to your detters: lo, ye faſt to ſtrife wickednes. Now ye ſhall not faſt thus, that you may make your voyce be heard aboue.* Thynke ye this faſt pleſeth me, that a man ſhoulde chaſten hymſelfe for a day, and to writh his head about lyke a cloth? Should that be called faſtyng, or a day ꝑ pleaſeth the lord? Doth not thys faſting rather pleſe me, that thou* leuſe

* Then ſhall thy lighte breake furth as ces ỹ haue euer ben wast, shalbe builded of thee: there shalt thou laye a foũdacion seth thy selfe in my holye daye, and thou cal the pleasant holy and glorious Sabbothe of the Lorde, and that thou geue him the honour, so that thou doe not after thine owne ymaginacion, neither seke thyne owne wil, nor speake thyne owne woordes: Then shalt thou haue thy ple-sure in the Lorde, and I will cary thee hye aboue the earth, and fede thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the Lordes owne mouth hath so promised.

they maye not couer them with theyr lainges is no equitye: theyr wayes are so croked ỹ whosoeuer goeth therein, knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause ỹ equitie is so farre from vs, & that righ-teousnes cummeth not nie vs. * We loke for light, loe, it is darkenes: for the morning shine, &c. we walke in the dark. We grope lyke the blinde vpon the wall, we grope eũ as one that hath no eyes. We stomble at the noone daye as though it were toward night, in the fallinge places like men that are halfe dead. We roare al lyke beares, and mourne stil like doues.

We looke for equitie, but there is none: for healthe, but it is farre from vs. For our offẽces are many before the, and our sinnes testifye against vs: yea, we must confesse that we offende, and knowledge that we do amysse: Namely, transgresse and dissemble against the Lorde, and fal away from our god, vsyng presumpteous and trayterous ymaginacions, and castyng false matters in oure hearres.
And therefore is equitie gone aside, and righteousnes standeth farre of, * truth is fallen downe in the strete, and the thyng that is playne and open, may not be shewed. Yea the trueth is taken away, and he that refrayneth hymselfe from euyll, must be spoyled. When the Lorde sawe thys, it displeased hym sore, that there was no equitie. He sawe also, that there was no manne ryghteous: and he wondred that there was no manne to helpe him. Wherfore he helde him by his owne power, and he sustained him by his own ryghteousnesse. He * putte righteousnes vpon him for a brestе plate, & set the helmet of healthe vpon hys head. He put on wrathe in stеade of clothyng, and tooke gelousy about hym for a cloke: (lyke as when a manne goeth furth wrathfullye to recompence hys enemies, and to be a-C uenged of hys aduersaryes.) Namelye, that he might recompence and rewarde the Ilandes, where thorow the name of the Lord myght be feared from the ry-sing of the sunne, & his maiestie vnto the going downe of ỹ same. For he shal come as a violẽt water streame which ỹ wind of the Lord hath moued. * But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, and vnto them in Jacob that turne from wickednes, sayth the Lord. I wil make this couenaunt with them (sayth the lord.) My spirit that is vpon thee, and the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shal neuer goe out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouthe of thy chylders chyldren, from thys tyme forthe for euermore, worlde without ende, sayeth the Lorde.

A consolation and comfort to Jerusalem.

A GEt thee vp by tymes and be bryght (O Jerusalem) for thy *light cummeth, and the glorye of the lorde is risen vp vpon thee. For loe, whyle the darkenes and cloude couereth the earth & the people, the lord shal shew the lighte: and his glory shalbe sene in thee. *The gentiles shal come to thy lighte, and kynges to the brightnes þ springeth furth vpon thee. *Lift vp thine eies, and loke rounde about the. All these gather themselues, & come to thee: thy sonnes shall come vnto thee from farre, and thy daughters shal gather themselues to thee on euery side. Then thou shalt se this and be glorious: þ shalt marueile excedingly, & thine heart shalbe opened, when the aboundance of þ sea shalbe conuerted vnto the, (that is) whē the riches of the gentiles shal come vnto the. The multitude of Cameis shal couer thee, the Dromedaries of Madian and Epha: *All they of Saba shall come, bringing gold and incense, & shewing the prayse of þ lord. All þ catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, þ rammes of Nabaioth shal serue thee, to be offred B acceptablye vpon mine aulter. *which I haue chosen: & in the house of my glorye which I haue garnished. But what are these that flee here like þ cloudes, & as þ doues flying to theyr wyndowes? The Iles also shal wayte for me, and specially the shyppes of Tharsis, þ they maye bring thy sōnes from farre, & their siluer and theyr golde with them, vnto þ name of the lorde thy God, vnto the holye one of Israel, þ hath glorified thee. *Strāgers shall builde vp thy walles, & theyr kynges shal doue thee seruice. For when C I was angrye, I smote thee: and of my mercy I pardoned the. *Thy gates shal stande open stil both day and nighte, and neuer be shut, that the hoost of the gentiles maye come, and that theyr kynges may bee brought vnto thee. For euerye people & kingdom that serueth not thee, shal perishe, and be destroyed with vtter destruction. The glory of Libanus shall come vnto thee. The fyre trees, Boxes and Cedres together, to garnishe the place of my Sanctuary, for I will glorifye the place of my feete.

Moreouer, those shal come kneeling vnto thee, that haue vexed thee: and all they that despysed thee, shall fall downe at thy foote. Thou shalt bee called the citie of the Lord, Syon the citie of the holye one of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, so that no man went thorow thee: I wil make thee glorious for euer & euer, and ioyful thorowout all posterities. *Thou shalt sucke þ milke of the Gentiles, and kinges breastes shal fede thee. And thou shalte knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauiour and redemer, the myghtye one of Jacob. For brasse will I geue thee golde, and for yron syluer: D for wood brasse, and for stones yron. I will turne thyne oppressyon into peace, and thyne exactyons into ryghteousnes. Violence and robberye shall neuer bee heard of in thy lande, neither harme and destruccyon within thy borders. Thy walles shalbe called healthe, and thy gates the prayse of god. *The Sunne shal neuer bee thy daye lyghte, and the lyght of the moone shall neuer shyne vnto thee: but the Lorde hymselfe shalbe thyne euerlasting light, and thy God shalbe thy glory. *Thy sunne shal neuer goe down, and thy moone shall not bee hyd: for the Lorde himselfe shalbe thyne euerlasting light, and thy sorowful dayes shalbe ended. Thy people shalbee all righteous, and possesse the lande euer, the floure of my plantyng, the woorke of my handes wherof I will reioyce. The yongest and leaste shall growe into a thousande, and the symplest into a strong people: I the lorde shall shortely bryng thys thyng to passe in hys tyme.

The.lxi.Chapter.

He prophecyeth that Christ shalbe annointed, and sent to preache.

THe *spirit of the lord God is vpon me, for the lord hath annointed me, and set me, to preach good tidinges vnto the poore, that I myghte bynde vp the wounded hertes, *þ I might preach deliuerance to the captiue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I might declare the acceptable yere of the lorde, and the day of þ vengeance of our God: *that I might comforte all them that are in heauines, that I myght geue vnto them that mourne in Syon, that I myghte geue I saye beautye in stede of ashes, ioyfull oyntemente for syghyng, pleasaunt rayment for an heauy mynde. That they might be called trees of righ- B trousnesse, a plantyng of the Lorde for him to reioyce in.

They shall builde the long rough wildernes, and set vp the wilde desert: they shal repayre the wast places, & such as haue bene voyde thorowout manye generacyons. Theyr seede also and theyr generacion, shalbe knowen among the gentiles, and among the people. All they that see them, shal knowe that they are the hygh

The. lxii. Chapter.

A prophecy of the comming of Christ.

For Syons sake therefore will I not holde my tonge, and for Jerusalems sake I will not cease, but yl theyr righteousnes brake furthe as the shyning lyghte, and theyr saluacyon as a burnyng laumpe. Then shall the Gentiles see thy ryghteousnesse, and al kynges thy glory. Thou thy sonnes be maryed vnto thee. And as a bridegrome is gladde of hys bryde, so shal thy god reioyce ouer thee. I haue set watchemen vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) whiche shal neyther cease daye nor C nyght, to preache the Lorde. And ye also that remembre the Lord, ye shal not kepe him close, nor leaue to speake of hym vntil Jerusalem bee sette vp, and made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath swoorne by hys ryghte hande and by hys strong arme, that from hencefoorth he wil not geue thy corne to be meate for thyne enemies, nor thy wyne (wherein thou hast labored) to be drinke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne shall eate it, and geue thankes vnto the Lorde: and they that haue borne in the wyne, shall drynke it in the courte of my Sanctuary. Goe you, goe you thorowe D the gates, make cleane the waye for the people, make playne, make playne the forepath, and take awaye the stones out of it, and set oute a token for the people. Beholde, the Lorde proclaymeth vnto the endes of the worlde: * tel the daugh- Esai. 40

The. lxiii. Chapter.

What is he thys that cummeth from Edom, with redde colored clothes of Bosra (whiche is so costlye clothe) and cummeth in so mightely with al his strēgth? I am he that teacheth ryghteousnesse, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothyng redde, and thy rayment lyke hys that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue troden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me.

Thus wil I treade downe myne enemies in my wrathe, and sette my feete vpon them in mine indignatiō. And theyr
B bloud shal be sprong vpon my clothes, & Esai. 63 so wil I stayne al my rayment. * For the day of vengeance is assigned in my hert, and the yere when my people shal be deliuered, is come. I looked about me, and there was no manne to shewe me any helpe: I marueyled that no manne helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse sustayned me. And thus will I treade downe the people in my wrathe, and bathe them in my displeasure, & vpon the earth wil I laye their strẽgth. * I wil declare ỹ goodnes of the Lorde, yea, and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Israel: whiche he hath geuen them of hys owne fauour, and accordyng to the multitude of his louyng kyndenesses. For he sayde: These no doubte are my people, and no shrinking chyldren, and so he was their sauioure. In their troubles, * he was also troubled with them, and the C Angel that went foorthe from hys presence deliuered thẽ: Of very loue & kindenesse that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath borne them and caryed them vp, euer sence the worlde began. But after they prouoked hym to wrath, and vexed hys holy mynde, he was their enemye, and fought agaynst them himselfe. Yet remembred Israell the olde tyme of Moses and hys people saying: Where is he that brought them from the water of the sea, * with thẽ that fede his sheepe? where is he that hath geuen his holy spirit among them? He led them by the righte hande of Moses with hys glorious arme: deuyding the water before them (whereby he gate hymselfe an euerlasting name:) he led thẽ in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, that they shoulde not stumble: as a tame beaste goeth in the fielde: and the breath geuen of God geueth hym rest. Thus (O god) D hast thou ledde thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name withall. * Looke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellyng place of thy Sanctuarye, and thy glorye. Howe is it that thy gelousye, thy strengthe, the multytude of thy mercies, and thy louyng kyndnesse, wil not be intreated of vs? yet art thou * our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neyther is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou lorde arte oure father and redemer, and thy name is euerlastyng. O Lorde, * wherefore hast thou led vs out of thy waye? Wherefore hast thou hardened our hertes, that we feare thee not? Bee at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake, and for the generacion of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a litle of thy Sanctuarye in possession, for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holy place. And wee were thyne from the beginning, when thou wast not their Lorde: for they haue not called vpon thy name. ✠

The.lxiiii. Chapter.

The prophet (vnder the person of the Iewes) bewayleth their exile and banishment. Mans righteousnes is lyke a cloth defyled with the floures of a woman.

O That thou wouldeste cleaue the heauen in sunder, and come downe: I that the mountaynes might melte away at thy presence, like as at an whote fyer: and that the malicious might boyle as the water doth vpon the fyre.

Whereby thy name myghte bee knowen among thyne enemyes, and that the Gentiles myghte tremble beefore thee. When ỹ wroughtest wonderous strange workes, we looked not for them. Thou cammeste downe, and the hylles melted at thy presence. For sence the begynning * of the worlde, it hath not bene heard or perceyued, neyther hath any eye seene an other God beside thee, whiche dooest so muche for them that put their truste in thee. Thou helpest him that doeth right with chearefulnes, and them that thinke vpon thy wayes. But loe, thou hast bene angrye, for we offended, and haue bene euer in synne: though the worlde haue cleaued to them, * yet shall we bee saued. We are all as an vncleane thyng, and all oure ryghtousnesse are as the clothes stayned with ỹ floures of a woman: we fal euerychone as ỹ leafe, for our synnes C cary vs away lyke the wynde. There is no man that calleth vpõ thy name, ỹ standeth vp to take holde by thee. Therfore hidest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs because of our sinnes. But now O lord, thou father of ours * we are thy clay, & thou art our potter, & we al are ỹ worke of thy hãdes. Be not to sore displeased (O lord,) & kepe not our offences to long in thy remembrauce: but cõsidre that we all are thy people. The citie of D thy Sanctuary lyeth waste. * Syon is a wildernes, and Jerusalem a desert. Our holy house whiche is our beautie, where our fathers praysed thee, is brent vp: yea all our commodities and pleasures are wasted awaye. Wilt thou not be intreated (Lord) for all this? Wilt thou holde thy peace and scourge vs so sore?

The. lxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mans handes. He despiseth sacrifyces doone without mercye and fayethe. God comforteth them that are troubled for hys sake. Among the Christen, the Sabboth is continual.

so maketh me a memorial of incēse, prai-

Therefore will I also haue pleasure in C when they shal be confoūded. * Then shal lxvi.a.a be heard a great noyse from the citie and the temple: the voyce of the Lorde, that wil reward, & recompence his enemies:

birth, & anguish of the trauell. Who euer heard or sawe such thinges? dooeth the ground beare in one day, or are the peolxvi.a.a with childe byrth and bare her sonnes? For lxiii.a.a thus sayeth the Lorde. * Am I he that ye shal tast & haue delite in the plenteous-

Lorde: beholde, I will let peace into her lyke a water floude, and the myghte of the heathen lyke a flowing streme. Then shal ye sucke, ye shalbee borne vpon her sydes, and be ioyful vpon her knees. For lyke as a childe is comforted of his mother, so shal I comforte you: & ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, your heart shal reioyce, * and your lxvi.b bones shal florishe like an herbe. Thus lxvi.a shal the hand of þ lord be knowen amōg his seruantes, & his indignacyon among his enemies. For beholde, the lorde shal come with fyre, & hys charet shalbe lyke

The ende of the booke of the Prophete Esaye.

The

The booke of the Prophete Jeremy.

The first Chapter:

The stocke of Jeremy, and in what time he prophecied. He excuseth himselfe, and would refuse the office of a Prophet, because he is young and vnexpert. He is taught of the lorde, and becommeth bolde. God openeth vnto him, that the destruccō of the Jewes (by ye Babilonians) is at hande. Jeremye is commaunded to speake the worde of god vnto the Jewes without feare.

THese are the sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the preest, one of thē that dwelt at * Jnathoth in the lande of Beniamyn, when the Lorde had first spoken with him in the time of Josiah the sonne of Amō, king of Juda, in the thyrtiene yere of his reygne: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, *and vntyll the xi yere of zedekiah the sonne of Josyah, kyng of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken euen in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: * Before I fashyoned thee in thy mothers wombe, I dyd knowe thee. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctifyed thee, & ordeyned thee to bee a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayd I: * Oh Lorde God, I cannot speake, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lord answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge. * For thou shalt go to al that I shal sende thee vnto: and whatsoeuer I commaūde thee, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayd of their faces. For I am with thee, to deliuer thee, saith the lord. * And with that the Lord stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & the same lord sayde vnto me: Beholde, I putte my wordes in thy mouthe, and beholde, this day dooe I sette thee ouer the people & kingdomes, that thou maist roote out, breake of, destroye and make waste, and that thou mayst buylde vp & plante. After this the Lorde spake vnto me, saying: Jeremy, what seest thou? And I sayde: I see a rod of an Almonde tree. Then sayde the lorde vnto me: thou hast seene right, for I will make hast spedely vpon my worde to perfourme it. It happened afterward that the lord spake to me agayne, and said: what seest thou? And I sayde: I doe see a seething * pot, looking from out of the Northe.

Then sayd the lorde vnto me: Out of the Northe shal come a plague vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For loe, * I will call all the kynredes of the kyngdomes of the Northe (sayeth the Lord.) And they shal come, and euerye one shal sette his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all theyr walles roundē aboute, and in al the cities of Juda. And thorow them shal I declare my Judgement vpon all the wickednesse of those menne that haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incence vnto straunge goddes, and worshypped the woorkes of theyr owne handes.

* And therfore girde vp thy loynes, aryse and tell them all that I geue thee in commaundemente. Feare them not, lest I destroye thee before them. * For beholde, thys daye dooe I make thee a stroōg fenced towne, an yron pyller, and a brasen walle agaynste the whole lande, agaynste the kynges and myghty menne of Juda, agaynste the Priestes and people of the lande. They shall fyghte agaynste thee, but they shall not bee hable to ouercome thee: for I am with thee to deliuer thee, sayeth the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

God rehearseth his benefites done vnto the Jewes. Against the priestes and prophetes, or preachers that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are destroyed because they forsoke god, and because they ranne a whoorehunting after vdolles.

MOreouer the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Goe thy way, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre thee for the kyndenesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfaste loue, at the tyme of thy despousyng: in that thou folowedst me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Israell was an halowed thynge vnto the Lorde, and so was hys fyrste fruites. * All they that deuoure Israell shall offende: myshappe shall fall vpon them, sayeth the Lord. Heare therefore the woorde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacions of the house of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lorde: What vnfaythfulnesse found youre fathers in me, that they went so farre away fro me, fallyng to lightnesse, and beyng so vayne? They thoughte not in in theyr heartes: Where haue wee lefte the Lorde, that broughte vs oute of the lande of Egipte*: that ledde vs throughe the wylderneſſe, thorowe a deſert & rough lande, thorowe a drye and a deadlye land: yea a land that noman had gone thorow, & wherin noman had dwelte?* And when I had broughte you into a pleaſaunt well builded lande, that ye myghte enioye the fruites & all the commodities of the ſame: ye wente forthe and defyled my lande, and brought mine herytage to abhomination. The prieſtes them ſelues ſaied not: Where is the lorde? They that had the law in theyr handes, knewe me not: The ſhepeherdes offended againſt me. The Prophetes dyd ſeruyce vnto Baall, & folowed ſuch thinges as ſhal bryng them no profite. Wherfore, I am conſtrained (ſaieth the lorde) to make my complainte vpon you, and vpon your chyldres chyldren: Go into the yles of Cethim, and loke well: ſende vnto Cedar, take dyligent heed: and ſe whether ſuch thinges be done there, whether the Gentils them ſelues deale ſo falſely and vntruelye with theyr goddes (whiche yet are no goddes in deed.) But my people haue geuē ouer theyr hye honoure, for a thyng þ maye not helpe thē. Be aſtonyſhed, (O ye heauens) be afraid and abaſhed at ſuch a thyng, ſaieth þ lord. For my people hath done two euiles. They haue forſaken me the well of þ* water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes, yea dyle and broken pyttes, that can holde no water. Is Iſrael a bondſeruaunt, or one of the houſhoulde?

Why then is he ſo ſpoyled? Why doo they roar and crie thē vpon him as a lion? They haue made hys lande waſte, * hys cityes are ſo burnt vp, that there is no mā dwelling in thē. Yea, the chyldren of Noph and Taphnes haue defiled thy necke.* Cōmeth not this vnto thē, becauſe thou haſte forſaken the Lorde thy God, euer ſence he led the by the waye? And what haſte thou now to do in the ſtrete of Egipte? to drinke the water of Nilus? Either what makeſte thou in the way of Aſſiria? To drinke water of the floude?* Thine own wickednelle ſhall reproue the, and thy turnyng awaye ſhal condemne the: that thou mayeſt know and vnderſtande, how euil and hurtful a thynge it is, that thou haſt forſaken þ lord thy God, and not feared him, ſaith the lord God of Hooſtes.* I haue euer broken thy yocke of olde, and burſte thy bondes, yet ſayeſte thou: I will no more offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runneſt about vpon all hye hilles, and amonge all grene trees: where as I planted the as a noble vine, & a good roote, whoſe ſeede is all faithfull.

How art thou turned then into a bitter, vnfruitfull, and ſtraunge grape? Yea, and that ſo ſore, that thoughe thou waſhe thee with Nitrus; and make thy ſelfe to ſauor with that ſweete ſmelling herbe of Syrie yet in my ſighte thou art ſtayned with thy wickednelle, ſayeth the Lorde thy God. Saye not nowe, I am not vncleane: and I haue not folowed Baal. Looke vpon thine owne wayes in the woodes, valleyes, and dēues, ſo ſhalt thou know, what thou haſte done. Thou art lyke a ſwift Dromedary, that goeth eaſilye his waye: and thy wantonnes is lyke a wilde aſſe, that vſeth the wildernes, and that ſnoffeth & bloweth at hys will. Who can tame the? All they þ ſeke the ſhal not faile, but fynd the in thine own vnclennes. Kepe thou thy foote from nakednes, and thy throte from thirſte: and without ſhame thou anſwereſte. No, for I haue loued ſtraungers, and them will I folow. Like as a theefe that is take with the dede commeth to ſhame, euen ſo is the houſe of Iſrael come to confuſion: the commen people, theyr kinges and rulers, theyr prieſtes and prophetes.* For they ſaye to a ſtocke, thou art my father: and to a ſtone, thou haſt begotte me: yea, they haue turned their backe vpon me, and not their face. ‡ But in the time of theyr trouble whē they ſay, ſtand vp, and helpe vs: I ſhal anſwer them. Where are nowe thy gods, that thou haſt made the? let them ſtand vp and helpe the in the time of nede (if thei be able.)* For loke how many cities thou haſt (O Juda) ſo many gods haſt thou alſo. Wherefore then will ye go to lawe with me, ſeeyng ye all are ſynners againſt me, ſayth the lorde? It is but loſte labour, that I ſmyte your chyldren, for they receyue not my correction.

Am I then become a wylderneſſe vnto the people of Iſrael? or a lande that hathe no lyghte? Wherefore ſayeth my people then we are lordes, wee will come no more vnto the. Doth a maiden forget her rayment, or a bryde her ſtomacher? But as for my people, they haue forgotte me, dayes innumerable. Why boaſteſt þ thy waies ſo highlye (to obtayne fauoure there throughe)

The.xviii. Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the despysers of his worde: and to helpe them agayne when they amende. The conspyracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremye: His prayer agaynst hys aduersaryes.

I THis is another communycacyon that God had with Jeremye, saying: Arise, and go downe into the potters house, and there shal I tel the more of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house, I founde hym makyng his worcke vpon a whele. The vessell that the potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a new, and made another vessel accordyng to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: * Maye not I do with you as this potter doth, O ye house of Jsraell, sayeth the lorde? Behold ye house of Jsrael, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hand. * When I take in hande to roote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye any people or kyngedome: & yf that people (against whom I haue thus deuysed) cōuerte from their wyckednes: I repēt of the plage that I deuised to bryng vpon them. * Agayne, when I take in hande to buyld or to plāte a people or a kyngdom, yf ꝑ same people do euel before me, & heare not my voyce, I repēt of ꝑ good ꝑ I deuysed to do for thē. Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalē. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I am deuisyng a plage for you, and am takyng a thynge in hande agaynst you. * Therefore, let euery man turne from hys euyll waye, take vpon you the thynge that is good, and do right. But they said: Nomore of this: * We wyll folowe oure owne ymagynacyons, and do euery man accordyng to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therefore thus sayeth the lord: Aske among the Heathen yf any man hath heard such horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shall not ꝑ snowe (that melteth vpon ꝑ stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten the feldes? Or may the spynges of waters be so drauen away, that they runne nomore, geue moystnes, nor make fruytfulnesse? But my people hath so forgotten me, ꝑ they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne gods. And their prophetes make the fal in their wayes frō the auncient pathes, & to go into a foote waye not vsed to be troden of iuste men. Wherthorow they haue brought their lāde into an euerlastyng wildernes and scorne. * So that whosoeuer trauayleth thereby, shalbe abashed, and wagge their heades.

With an East wynde wyl I scattre them before their enemy: And when their destruccion commeth, I will turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they, * come let vs ymagyne some thynge agaynst this Jeremye: For the preastes shall not be destytute of ꝑ law, neyther shal ꝑ wyseme be destitute of counsell, nor the prophetes destitute of the worde of god. Come and let vs smite him with the tonge, and let vs marke all his wordes. Consyder me, O Lord, and heare the voyce of myne enemyes. * Shall they recōpence euel for good? for they haue dygged a pyt for my soule. & Remember that I stode before the, to speake good for them, and to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

* Therfore, let their childrē dye of hunger, and let them be oppressed with the swearde. Let their wyues be robbed of their chyldrē, and become wyddowes: let their husbādes be slayne, let their yong men be kylled with the swearde in ꝑ felde. Let ꝑ noise be heard out of their houses, when ꝑ murtherer commeth sodenly vpō thē. & For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, & layed snares for my feete. Yet lord thou knowest all their counsell, that they haue deuised to slaye me. Forgeue not their wickednes, and let not their synne be put out of thy syght, but let thē be iudged before the as ꝑ gylte. This shalt ꝑ do vnto thē in the tyme of thy indignacō.

Priestes into the valleye of the chyldren of Hennom, which lyeth before the dore that is made of brycke, and shewe them there the woordes that I shall tell thee, and say thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lord ye kynges of Juda, & ye citizens of Jerusalem. *Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell: ‡Beholde, I will bryng such a plage vpon thys place, that the eares of all that heare it, shall glowe. *Euen so will I destroye this people and citie, as a man breaketh an earthen vessell that cannot bee made whole agayne. ‡In Topheth shall they be buried, for they shal haue none other place: Thus will I do vnto thys place also, sayeth the Lorde, and to them that dwel therin: yea I wil do to thys citie as vnto Topheth: (For the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kynges of Juda shalbe defyled, lyke as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlours they did sacrifice vnto al the hoost of heauē, and powred drynkeofferinges vnto strāge Goddes. And so Jeremye came from Topheth, where ꝑ lord had sent him to prophesy, & stode in the court of ꝑ house of ꝑ lord, & spake to al the people: Thus sayeth the lord of hoostes, the God of Israell: Beholde, I will bryng vpon this citie and vpon euerye towne aboute it, all the plages that I haue deuysed agaynst them: *For they haue bene obstynate, and wouldе not obeye my wordes. *Jere.7.c and.13.b

The.xx.Chapter.

Jeremye is smytten and caste into prysō for preachyng of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captyuitie of Babilon. He complayneth that he is a mocking stocke for the worde of God: He is compelled by the spirite to preache the worde.

When Phashur the prieste, the sōne of Emer, chiefe in the house of the Lorde, heard Jeremye preache so stedfastely: * he smote Jeremye, and put hym in the stockes that are by the hye gate of Beniamyn, in the house of the Lorde. The nexte day folowyng, Phashur brought Jeremy out of the stockes agayn. Then sayde Jeremy vnto hym: The Lorde shal cal thee no more Phashur (ꝑ is excellent and increasyng) but Magor (ꝑ is fearefull & afrayed) euery where. For thus sayth ꝑ lorde: beholde, I will make thee afrayed, euen thy selfe, and all that fauoure thee, whiche shall perysshe with the sworde of theyr enemyes, euen before thy face. And I will geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kyng of Babilon, which shal carye some vnto Babilon prisoners, and slaye some with the sworde. *Moreouer, al the substance of thys lande, all theyr precyous and gorgeous woorkes, all costelynesse, and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda, wil I geue into ꝑ handes of theyr enemyes, which shall spoyle them, and carye them vnto Babilon. But as for thee (O Phashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thyne housholde, and to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou & all thy fauourers to whome thou hast preached lyes. O lorde: If I am deceaued, thē hast thou deceaued me: thou hast delt strongly, & hast preuailed, and makeste me strong agayne. * All the daye longe am I despysed and laughed to scorne of euerye man, because I haue newe preached long agaynste malicious tiranny, and shewed them of destruccyon. *For the which cause they cast the woorde of the lord in my teeth, and take me euer to the woorste. Wherfore I thought from henceforth not to speake of hym, nor to preache any more in thys name.

He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse: why Jerusalem is broughte into captiuitie. The deathe of Selum the sonne of Josias is prophecied.

THus sayde the lorde: Go downe into the house of the kynge of Juda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare ꝑ worde of the lorde, thou kynge of Juda, ꝑ sittest in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people, that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the lorde lorde commaundeth: *kepe equitie and righ-power of the violente: doe not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse, nor ꝑ widowe: and shed no innocente bloude in this place. And yf ye kepe these thynges faithfully, thé shal there come in at the doore of this house, kynges to sytte vpon Dauyds seate: they shalbe caried in chaarettes, and ryde vpō horses, both they & theyr seruaūtes, and theyr people. But yf ye wyll not be obedyente vnto these commaundementes:

*I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayeth the Lorde) this house shall bee waste. For thus hath the lorde spoken vpon ꝑ kynges house of Juda. Thou Gilead arte vnto me the head of Libanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and thy cytyes also) that noman shal dwell therin? I wyll prepare a destroyer in the fyre. And all the people that goe by this cite, shal speake one to another: *Wher fore hath the lord done thus vnto this noble cytye? Then shall it be aunswered: ℟because they haue broken the couenaunte of the lorde theyr God, and haue worshipped and serued and is caryed oute of thys place: he shall neuer come hither agayne, for he shal dye in teousnes, and his parlers wyth the good that he hath gotten by violence: whyche neuer recōpenceth hys neyghbours labour, nor payeth hym his hyre: he thinketh in hym

Dyd not thy father eate and drincke, and prosper well, as longe as he dealte wyth equytie and ryghteousnes? Yea, when he helped the oppressed & poore to theyr right, then prospered he well. From whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde? Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne hearte, they loo-ke vpon couetousnes, to shed innocent bloude, to do wrong, & violence. *And therfore thus sayth the lord agaynst Jehoakym, the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda. They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to doe:) alas brother, alas sister. Nether shall they saye vnto hym: Alas sir, Alas for ꝑ noble Prince.
But as an Asse shall he be buryed, corrupte, Clyme vp the hyll of Lybanus (O thou daughter Syon) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, crie from al partes: for al thy louers pleaseth noman for al hys apparel. Wherefore both he & hys seed shalbe sente awaye,

Therfore

Therfore, tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and lette his voyce bee heard from his holy habytacion. With a great noyse shall he crye from his courte regall: he shall geue a great voyce, (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sound therof shall bee heard vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and wyll holde his courte of iustice with all fleshe, and punyshe the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde.

G For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: * Behold, a miserable plage shal go from one people to another, and a greate stormye water shall aryse from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde hymselfe slay them, from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shall lye as dunge vpon the ground. Mourne (O ye shepeherdes) and crye, sprynkle youre selues with ashes, O ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfylled, that ye shall slay one another, and you shalbe scatred & ye shall fall like vessels newlye made. * The shepeherdes shall haue no waye to flye, & the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepeherdes crye horryblye, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed theyr pasture, and theyr best feldes lye dead, because of the horryble wrath of the Lorde. They haue forsaken theyr foldes like as a lyon. For theyr lande is waste, because of hys furyous cruelte, and of hys fearfull indignacion.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the prophetes and priestes, & brought to iudgement. Uriah the prophete is kylled of Iehoiakym contrarye to the wyll of God.

IN the beginning of the reigne of Iehoiakym ꝑ sone of Iosiah kyng of Juda, came this word from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde. * Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (out of the cyties of Juda) come to doo worshyppe in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde thee to saye. * Looke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they wyll herken, and turne euery man from his wicked way, * that I may also repent of the plage whiche I haue determyned to bryng vpon them, because of theyr wicked inuencions. And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto the. Thus sayeth the Lorde: yf ye wil not obey me, to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes whom I sente vnto you, rysyng vp tymely, and styll sendyng: yf ye wyll not folowe them (I say), then wil I doe to this house * as I dyd vnto Sy- * Jere.7.a loh, and wyll make this cytie to bee abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people hearde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde. Nowe when he had spoken out all the woordes that the Lord cõmaunded him to preache vnto the people: then the priestes, the Prophetes, and al the people tooke hold vpon hym, & sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of Lorde: it shall happen to thys house as it dyd vnto Siloh: and this cytie shall be so waste, that no manne shall dwell therin. And when all the people were gathered about Jeremy in ꝑ house of the Lorde, the prynces of Juda heard of this rumoure: and they came sone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde, and satte them downe before the * newe doore of the Lord. Then spake the priestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers and to al the people, these wordes: * Thys manne is worthye to dye, for he hath preached agaynste this cytye, as ye your selues haue heard with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers, and to all the people: The Lorde hathe sente me to preache agaynste this house, and agaynste this cytye all the woordes that ye haue hearde. Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre aduysementes, and bee obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, that he hath deuysed agaynste you. Nowe as for me, I am in your handes, do with me as ye thinke expediente and good. But thys shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, * ye shall make your selues, thys cytye, and all the inhabytours therof, guylty of innocente bloud. For thys is of a trueth, that the Lorde hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these woordes in youre eares. Then sayde the rulers and the people, vnto the priestes and Prophetes: This man may not bee condemned to deathe, for he hath preached vnto vs in ꝑ name of the Lord oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayde thus vnto al the people: Micheas, the Morasthite, * whiche was a Prophete vnder Ezekiah kyng of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes: * Syon shalbe plowed lyke a fielde: Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyl of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wood. Dyd Ezekiah the kyng of Juda and the people of Juda put hym to death for this? No verely: * but rather feared the Lorde, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuysed agaynst them. Should we then doe suche a shamefull dede agaynst oure soules? There was a Prophete also that preached lyklye in the name of the Lord, called Uriah the sonne of Semeiah, of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytye, and agaynst this land according to al as Jeremy sayeth. Now when * Jehoakym the kyng, with all the estates, and princes, had hearde hys woordes, the kyng wente aboute to slaye hym. * When Uriah perceyued that, he was afrayed and fled, and departed into Egypte. Then Jehoakym the kyng sent his seruauntes into the lande of Egypte: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, and certayn men with him into Egypte, which fetched Uriah out of Egypte, and brought hym vnto king Jehoakim, that slewe hym with the swearde, and cast his dead bodye into the commen peoples graue. But Ahicam the sonne of Saphã holped Jeremye, that he came not into the handes of the people to bee slayne.

Jeremy at the commaundement of the Lord, sendeth bondes to the kyng of Juda, and to the other kynges that were nye, whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonozor. He warneth the people and the kinges and rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

IN the begynning of the reigne of Jehoakym the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came thys woorde vnto Jeremy from the Lord, which spake thus vnto me: Make thee bondes and chaynes, and put them aboute thy necke, and sende them to the kyng of Edom, to the kyng of Moab, to the kyng of Ammon, to the kyng of Tirus, and to the kyng of Sydon: and that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Zedekiah the kyng of Juda: and bydde them say vnto theyr masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the menne, and the cattell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power, and outstretched arme: and haue geuen it vnto whom it pleased me. * And nowe wyll I delyuer all these landes into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon: my seruaunte. The beastes also of the fielde shall I geue hym, to doe hym seruice. * And al the people shall serue hym, and hys sonne, and his childers childzen, vntyll the tyme of theselfame lande be come also: yea, manye people and great kinges shall serue him. Moreouer, that people and kyngdome whiche wyll not serue Nabuchodonozor, and that will not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon: the same people wil I vysyte with ꝑ swearde, with hungre, with pestylence, vntyll I haue consumed them in his hãdes, sayth the Lorde. * And therfore folowe not your Prophetes, sothsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches, which say vnto you: ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon. For they preache you lyes, to bryng you farre from your land: and that I myght caste you out, and destroy you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, and serue hym, those will I let remayne styll in theyr owne lande (sayeth the Lorde) and they shall occupye it and dwell therein. All these thynges tolde I Zedekia the kyng of Juda, and sayde: * Put your neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, & serue hym and hys people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylte thou and thy people perysshe wyth the swearde, wyth hungre, wyth pestylence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuysed for all people, that wyll not serue the kyng of Babylon? * Therfore geue no eare vnto those Prophetes (that tell you ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes: neyther haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde: howbeit they are bolde falsely to prophecye in my name, ꝑ I might the sooner dryue you out, & that ye might perysshe with youre preachers.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

The false prophecye of Hananiah the prophet. Jeremy sheweth that the prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He reproueth inspyred of the Lorde, reproueth Hananiah, prophecyinge hys death.

IBut in the fourthe yere of ꝑ reigne of Zedekiah kynge of Juda, in the fyfth moneth, it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Assur the prophete of Gibeon, spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the prieſtes and of all the people, and sayde: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: I haue broken the yocke of the Jer.27.c kyng of Babylon, * and after two yere will I bringe agayne into thys place, al the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonozor kinge of Babylon caryed awaye from this place, vnto Babylon. yea, I will bringe agayne Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda hym selfe, with all the prysoners of Juda (that are caried vnto Babylon) euen into thys place, sayeth the Lorde. For I will breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon. Then the B Prophet Jeremy gaue answere vnto the prophet Hananiah before ꝑ prieſtes, & before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. * And the prophet Je- Mich.3.c remy sayde: Amen, the Lorde do that, and graunte the thyng whiche thou haste prophecyed: ꝑ he may bryng agayne al ꝑ ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore al the prysonners from Babylon into thys place. Neuertheleſſe, hearken thou also what I will saye, that thou and al the people may heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme paste, whiche prophecyed of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nacyons and greate kyngdomes, were proued by this (yf God had sēt them in very dede) whē * the thyng Deu.18.d came to passe whiche that Prophete tolde Num.16.a before. And Hananiah the Prophet toke C the chayne from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and brake it, & with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people myght heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake the yocke of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon from the necke of al nacyons: yea, and that within this two yeare. And so ꝑ prophet Jeremy went hys way. Nowe after that Hananyah the prophete had taken the chayne from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lord came vnto the Prophet Jeremy, saying: Go, and tell Hananiah thes D wordes. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Thou haste broken the cheyne of wood: but in steade of wood thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: I wil put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of all thys people, that they may serue Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon: yea, and so shall they do. And I will geue hym the beastes in the felde. Then saide the Prophet Jeremy vnto the Prophet Hananyah: * heare me Ha- Leui.19.b nanyah. The Lord hath not sent thee, but thou bryngest thys people into a false beleife. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I will sende thee out of the lande, and within a yeare thou shalte dye, because thou haste falsly spoken against the Lorde. So Hananiah the Prophet dyed the same yeare, in the .vii. moneth.

The epystle of Jeremy sent vnto them that were in captiuyte in Babylon. He prophecyeth they shuld returne from captiuyte after lxx. yeares. He prophecyeth the destruccyon of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threatneth two prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamite is prophecyed.

THese are the wordes of the boke that Jeremy the prophet sent from Jerusalē vnto ꝑ prisoners, ꝑ Senatoures, princes, prophetes, and al the people whō Nabuchodonozor had led from Jerusalē vnto Babylon: after the tyme that kynge Jechoniah and hys quene, hys chamberlaynes, the princes of Juda, and Jerusalem, the workemaysters of Jerusalem, were departed thither. Whiche booke Elasah the sonne of Saphan, and Gamaryah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whō Sedekyah the kynge of Juda sent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes booke. Thus hathe the Lord of Hostes, the God of Israell, spoken vnto all the prysoners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: * buyld you houses to dwell therin, plante you gardens: that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: * take you wyues to beare you sonnes & daughters: prouyde wyues for your sonnes, and husbandes for your daughters, that they may get sonnes and daughters, and that ye may multyplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace and prosperytie of the cytie wherein ye be prysoners, * and praye vnto the Lorde for it. For in the peace therof shall youre peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: * Let not these prophetes and sothsayers that bee amonge you, dyscreaue you: and beleue not youre owne dremes. For why * they preache you lyes in my name: And I haue not sent them, sayeth the Lorde But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfylled lxx. yeres at Babylon, I will bryng you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wil cary you hyther againe into this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you, sayeth the Lorde: My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble: (which I geue you alreadye) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall goe and call vpon me, and I wyll heare you. Ye shall seke me, and fynde me. Yea, if so be ꝑ ye seke me with youre whole hearte, I wyll be founde of you sayeth the Lorde, and will deliuer you oute of prison: and gather you together agayne oute of all places, wherin I haue scattered you, sayeth the Lorde: and wyll bryng you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to bee caryed awaye captyue. But where as ye saye, that God hath raysed you vp prophetes at Babylon: thus hathe the Lorde spoken to the kynge that sytteth in the throne of Dauid, and to al the people that dwell in thys cytie, youre brethrē * that are not gone with you into captyuytye: Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lord of hostes: beholde, * I wyl send a sweard, hunger, and pestilence vpon them, and wil make thē lyke vntymely fygges, that maye not be eaten for bitternes. And I will persecute them with ꝑ sweard, with hunger, & pestylence. I will deliuer them vp to bee vexed of all kyngdomes, to bee cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayeth the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the prophetes. * I rose vp earlie, and sent vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therefore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisoners, whom I sente from Jerusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel spoken of Ahab, the sonne of Colaiah, & of Sedekiah the sonne of Maasyah, whiche prophecye lyes vnto you in my name. Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all the prysoners of Juda, that are in Babylon, shall take vp this terme of cursyng, and saye: Nowe God do vnto thee, as he dyd vnto Sedekiah and Ahab, whom the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they sinned shamfully in Israel. For they haue not onely defyled theyr neyghbours wyues, but also preached lying wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them. Thys I testifye, and assure, sayeth the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamyte, thou shalte speake vnto hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the god of Israel: Because thou haste sealed letters vnder thy name vnto al the people that is at Jerusalem, & to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasyah the priest, yea, & vnto them to all the Priestes, wherin thou wryteste thus vnto hym: The Lord hathe ordeyned thee to bee priest in the steade of * Jehoiada the priest, that thou

shouldest bee the chefe in the house of the Lorde, aboue all prophetes and preachers: and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pyllery, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou haste not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, whiche neuer leaueth of hys prophecying? And beside all thys, he hath sente vs worde * vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shoulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plante vs gardens, that wee maye enioye the frutes therof. Whiche letter Sophonias the preiste read, and let Jeremie the prophete heare it. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy, saying: sende worde to all the that be in captiuitie, on thys maner: Thus hathe the Lorde spoken concernynge Semeiah the Nehelamite: * because that Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you without my commission, and broughte you into a false hope, therefore thus the Lorde dothe certifye you: Beholde, I will visite Semeiah the Nehelamyte, and hys seede: so that none of hys shal remayne among this people, and none of them shall see the good that I will do for this people, sayeth the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

The.xxx.Chapter.

The returne of the people from Babilon. God by hys chastenyng sheweth that the people is synneful, the destruction of the enemyes of Israell.

THese are the wordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: * wryte vp dylygently all the wordes that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For lo, the tyme cummeth, saith the Lorde, that I will bryngе agayne the prysoners of my people of Israel, and Juda, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll restore them vnto the lande that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shal haue it in possession. Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde, concernynge Israell and Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde: We haue heard a terrible crye, feare and dysquyetnes. For what els doth thys sygnifie that I see? Nameiye that all stronge men smyte, euery man hys hande vpon hys loynes * as a woman in the paine of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a manne trauayle with childe? Enquyre thereafter and se. Yea, all theyr faces are maruelous pale. Alas for this daye, which is so dredfull that none maye be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, frō the whiche he shall yet be delyuered. For in that daye sayeth the Lord of hostes, I will take hys yocke frō of thy necke, and breake thy bondes: And straungers shall nomore serue hym, but they shall do seruyce vnto GOD theyr Lorde, and * to Dauyd theyr kynge, whom I will rayse vp vnto them. And as for ther, O my seruaunt Jacob, feare not sayeth the Lord, and be not afrayed O Israel. For loe, I will helpe the also frō farre, and thy seede from the lande of theyr captiuitie. And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shalbe in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shall make hym afrayed. For I am with the to helpe the, saieth the Lord. * And though I shall destroye all the people among whom I haue scatered the, yet will I not destroye the, but correct the, * and that with discretyon: For I know we that thou art in no wyse * without faute. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. Thy brosinges are perillous: and thy woundes redy to cast the into sickenes. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon the, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there may no man helpe the. All thy louers haue forgotten ther, and care nothynge for the. For I haue geuē the a cruel stroke, and chastened the roughly, and that for the multytude of thy mysdeades: for thy synnes haue had the ourrhand. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? in dede, thou arte sore wounded and in ieopardye, * but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the. * And therefore all they that deuoure the, shal be deuoured, and al thine enemyes shalbe led into captiuitie. All they that make the waste, shal be wasted them selues: and al those that rob the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy healthy againe, and make thy woūdes whole, sayeth the Lorde: because they reuyled the, as one cast awaye and despised. Sīō (sayed they) is she whom no man regardeth. For thus sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, * I wyll bryngе agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tentes, and defende hys dwellinge place. The citie shalbe buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue theyr right foundacion. And oute of them shall go thankesgeuyng, and the voyce of ioye. I will multiplye them, and they shal not bee fewe: I shal endue them with honoure, and no man shall subdue them. Theyr chyldren shalbe as afore tyme, and theyr congregacion shal cōtinue in my sight. And all those that vexe the will I visit. * Captayne also shal come of them, and a prynce shal spring out from the middest of them: hym wyll I chalenge to John.6.c. my selfe, & he shal come vnto me. * For what is he that geuerth ouer hys hearte to come Jere.31.b vnto me, sayeth the Lorde? * Ye shalbe my 2.c.b & 32.f people also, & I will be youre God. ‡ Be-& Jere.31.g. holde, on the otherside shall the wrathe of and.15.d. the Lord breake out as a stormy water, as a myghtye whyrle wynde, and shall fal vp-on the heades of the vngodly. The terrible displeasure of the Lord shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, and performed the in-Jere.23.c. tent of hys heart, * which in ỹ latter dayes ye shal vnderstand: ‡ At the same time, saieth the Lord, shal I be the God of al the generacions of Israel, & they shalbe my people.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shalbe restored againe vnto theyr prosperitie. To be turned from synne is the gyft of God. The birth of Christe is prophecyed. All the wicked shall dye in theyr wickednes. The new Testament and couenaunte is prophecyed. The Christyan are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Ouer sinnes shal be remitted, that they not ones be thought on. God promyseth that he wil call of ỹ Jewes. The building againe of ỹ cytie.

Num.14.c THus saieth the Lorde: * the people of Israel, which escaped in the wildernes from the swearde, founde grace to come into theyr rest. Euē so shal ỹ Lord now also appeare vnto me from farre, and Jere.31.b saie: * I loue the with an euerlastyng loue, therfore by my mercy I haue drawen thee to me. I will repayre the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, ỹ thou mayst be faste & sure. Thou shalte take thy tabrettes againe, & go forth with them that leade the daūce.
Thou shalte plant vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plante, and comenly eate of it. For the dayes shall come when the watchemē vp-on the mounte of Ephraim shall crye: arise, Mich.4.a. * let vs go vp vnto Sion to our Lord God, B for thus saieth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake out, syng and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnaūt of Israel, and make thē whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north land, and gather them from ỹ endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame ỹ are amonge them, with the wemen that be great with childe, and suche as be also deli-uered: and the company of them that come againe, shal be greate. They shal come we-ping and with merciful pitye wil I bring them hyther agayne. I will leade them to the ryuers of water in a strayght waye, Dan.13.a. where they shall not stumble. * For I am Israels father, and Ephraim is my fierste Gen.48. borne. Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentyls, preache in the yles, that lye farre of, & saye: he ỹ hath scatered Israel, shal gather hym together agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shepherde doth hys flocke. For ỹ Lorde hath redemed Jacob, and ỹdō hym from the hande of the violent, and they shal come & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shal haue pleteousnesse of goodes, which the Lorde shall gyue thē: Namely, wheat, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe and calues. And theyr conscience shall be as a well watred garden, for they shall no more be hungrye.
C Then shal the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yea, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne theyr sorowe into gladnes, and wyll comforte them from theyr sorowes, and make them ioyful. I will powre plenteousnesse vpon the heartes of the priestes, and my people shall be satisfyed with my goodnes, saieth the Lorde. Thus saieth the Lord: * the voyce of heuynesse, weping Jere.
and lamentacion was hearde on hye, euen 31.a of Rachell mourning for her children, and would not be cōforted, because they were away. But nowe saieth the Lorde, leaue of from wepyng and crying, withholde thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, saieth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne out of the lande of theyr ene-myes: yea, euen thy posterite shal haue cōsolacyon in this, saieth the Lorde, that thy children shall come againe into theyr owne lande. Moreouer, I hearde Ephraim, that was led away captiue, complayne on thys maner. * O Lorde, thou hast correct me, & Jere. thy chastenyng haue I receaued, as an vn- 31.c tamed calfe. ‡ Conuert thou me, and I shal Jere. be conuerted: for thou art my Lorde God. 31.d Yea, as soone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: and whē I vnderstand,
I shall smyte vpon my thygh. For verely I haue commyted shameful thynges. For I haue borne the reproue and confusyon of my youthe. Upon thys complaynte, I D thoughte thus by my selfe: * is not Ephra- Gen.43. im my dere sonne? Is he not ỹ chyld, with whom I haue had all myrthe and pastyme? For sence the time that I fyrst come-ned with hym, I haue hym euer in remembraunce: therefore, my very heart dryueth me vnto hym, gladlye and louingly wyll
I haue mercye vpon hym, saieth the Lord.
Get the watchemen, prouyde teachers for the: set thine heart vpō the ryghte way, that thou shouldest walke, and turne againe, O

thou

thou daughter of Israell, turne agayne to these cyties of thyne. Howe long wylt thou go astraye, O thou shrynkyng daughter?
For the Lord will worke a new thing vp-on earthe. A woman shall compasse a man.
For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, ỳ God of Israel: It wyl come therto, that when I haue brought Juda out of captiuitie, these wordes shalbe heard in the land, and in hys cities. The Lord which is the fayre *dryde grome of ryghteousnesse, make the frutefull, O thou holy hyll. And there shall dwell Juda & all her cyties, the shepherdes, & husbandmen. For I * shal fede the hungry soule, and refre he all faynte hearres.
When I heard this, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had bē waked out of a swete slepe. Beholde sayth the Lord, ỳ dayes come that I will sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda, with men & with catell. *Yea, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone a boute in times paste to rote them oute, to scatter them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chasten them: Euen so wyl I also go dylygently a-boute, to buylde them vp agayne, and to plante them, sayeth the Lorde. * Then shal it nomore be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for hys owne mysdede: so ỳ whoso eateth a sower grape, hys teeth shalbe set on edge. *Behold, the dayes come, sayeth the Lord, that I will make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israel, and with the house of Juda not after the couenaunte that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande and led them out of the lande of Egypt, which couenaunt they brake: yea, euen whē I, as an husbande had rule ouer them, sayeth the Lord. * But thys shal be the couenaunte that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayeth ỳ Lord. * I wil plant my lawe in the inward partes of them, & wryte it in theyr hearres, and wyl be theyr God, and they shalbe my people. And from thence forth, shall no mā teache hys neyghboure or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lorde. But they shall all knowe me from the lowest vnto the hyeste, sayeth the Lord. For I will forgiue their mysdedes, and will neuer remembre theyr synnes any more. Thus sayeth the Lorde, which gaue the * sunne to be a lyght for ỳ daye, and the moone and starres to shine in the night: which moueth the sea, so that ỳ floudes therof waxe fearce: hys name is the Lorde of hostes. Like as thys ordinaunce shal neuer be take out of my sight, sayeth ỳ Lord: So shal ỳ sede of Israel neuer ceasse, but alwaye be a people before me. Moreo-uer, thus sayeth ỳ Lord: like as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, & as the foūda-cions of ỳ earth beneth may not be sought out: * So wil I also not cast out the whole sede of Israel, for ỳ they haue committed, sayeth ỳ Lord. Behold, ỳ dates come, saith the Lord: ỳ the citie of the Lord shalbe enlarged frō the * towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wal. Frō thence shall the right measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of * Gareb, & shall come aboute Gaath, & the whole valley of the dead car-kasses, & of the asshes, & all the feldes vnto the broke of Cedron, & vnto the corner of ỳ horsegate toward ỳ East, wher as ỳ Sāc-tuary of ỳ Lord also shal be set. And whē it is now builded, & set vp of this fashiō, it shal neuer be broken nor cast downe any more.

The .xxxii. Chapter.

Jeremy is cast into prison, because he prophecieth ỳ the citie should be take of the kynge of Babilō. By the felde ỳ Jeremy bought at the cōmaundement of the Lord, is signified, ỳ the people should come again to theyr owne possessiō. The people of God are hys seruauntes, and he is theyr Lorde. To trust God is goddes gift, to the entent ỳ sinnes maye be forgeuen.

THese wordes spake ỳ Lord vnto Jeremie, in the tenthe yeare of Zedekiah kinge of Juda: which was the eygheteneth yeare of Nabuchodonozor, what time as the king of Babilons hoost layde syege vnto Jerusalē. But Jeremy the Prophete lay bounde in the courte of the prisō, which was in the kynge of Judaes house: where Zedekia the king of Juda caused him to bee layde, because he had prophecyed of thys maner: Thus sayeth ỳ Lord: * Beholde, I will deliuer this citie into the handes of ỳ king of Babilon, which shal take it. As for Zedekiah ỳ king of Juda, he shal not be able to escape ỳ Chalders: but surely he shal come into the handes of the king of Babylon, which shal speake with him mouthe to mouthe, & one of thē shal loke another in ỳ face. And Zedekiah shalbe caryed vnto Babylon, & there shal he be, vntil the time ỳ I visit him sayth the Lord. But if thou take in hād to fight against ỳ Chalders, ỳ shalt not prosper. And Jeremie sayde, thus hath ỳ Lord spoke vnto me: Behold, Hananeel ỳ sōne of Selū thine vncles sōne, shal come vnto the, & require the to redeme ỳ lād ỳ li-eth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe * for by right of kinred it is thy right to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

And

And Hanamel, myne vncles sonne, came to me in the courte of the prison, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Bye my land, I praye the, that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Benjamin: for by herytage thou haste ryght to leuse it out for thy selfe, therefore redeme it. Then I perceyued that thys was the commaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hanamel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, & wayed hym there the money: euen seuen sycles, and ten syluer pence. C I caused hym also to make me a wrytyng, & to seale it: & called recorde therby, & weyed hym there the money vpon ꝑ weightes. So I toke ꝑ euydence with the copie whē it was orderly sealed and trad ouer, and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sōne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in ꝑ sight of Hanamel my cosyne and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in ꝑ euydence: & before all the Iewes that were there by in the courte of ꝑ prisō. I charged Baruch also before them, sayinge: The Lorde of hostes the God of Israell, commaundeth the to take thys sealed euydence with ꝑ copye: and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it may long cōtinue. For the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined ꝑ houses, feldes, & vineyardes, shalbe possessed agayne in thys lande. Nowe whē I had deliuered the euydence vnto Baruch ꝑ sōne of Neriah, I besought the Lord, saying: O Gene. 1. a. Lorde God, * it is thou that hast made hea- Jere. 10. b uen & earth with thy greate power and hie Ex. 14. a. arme, & there is nothing hid frō the. * Thou D shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompensest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the children that come after them. Thou art the greate & myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and excellente in worke. Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of Roma. 2. a mens children, * to reward euery one after his way: and according to the frutes of his Ezo. 7 vnto the fifteene chapter. inuencions. * Thou hast done great tokens and wonders in the land of Egipt, as we see this daye, vpon ꝑ people of Israel, & vpon thost men, to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou haste brought thy people of Israel out of ꝑ land of Egipt, with tokens, with wōders, with a mighty hand, with a stretched oute arme, & with greate terrybilnesse: and hast gyuen them thys lande, like as thou haddest promysed vnto theyr fathers. Namely, ꝑ thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with milke & hony. * Nowe when they came Deu. 6. 4. 6. 11. therin, & possessed it, they folowed not thy Exo. 3. voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, * but all ꝑ thou commaundedst them to do, that haue they not done, & therefore come al these plages vpō the. Beholde, there are bulwarkes made nowe agaynste the citie to take it: & it shalbe wonne of ꝑ Chaldees that besiege it, with swearde, with hunger, & death: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpon the. For lo, al thynges are present vnto thee. Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall leuse a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: & yet in ꝑ meane season the citie is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saying: Beholde, I am the Lord God of all flesche, is there any thynge then to hard for me. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: * Beholde, I shall deliuer thys Jere. 21. a citie into the power of the Caldees, & into 32. b the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For ꝑ Chaldees shal come and winne this citie, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgeous houses, in whose pariets they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and powred drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seing the childre of Israel, and the childre of Juda, haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youthe vp, what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of theyr owne handes, sayeth the Lorde? Or what hath this citie bene els but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the day that they builded it, vnto thys houre, wherin I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemyes of the childre of Israel and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, theyr princes, theyr prestes, their prophetes, the men of Jere. 1. b Juda, & the citezyns of Jerusalem. * Whē I stode vp early, and taught the & instructed them, they turned their backes to me & not theyr faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correct, but set they theyr Jere. 7. a dols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal, in the valley of the childre of Hennom, to bow theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Juda synne ab such abhominacio. And nowe therfore, thus hath ꝑ Lord god of Israel spoken, cōcerning this citie, cytie, whiche (as ye youre selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hand of the king of Babilon, whē it is wūne w the sweard, with hunger, & with pestilence. *Beholde, I will gather thē togecher from al landes, wherin I haue scatred them in my wrath, in my fearful and greate displeasure: & will bryng them agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shal be my people, and I will be their God *And I wyll geue them one hearte and one waye, that they may feare me al the dayes of their lyfe, that they and their children after them may prospere. * And I wyl set vp an euerlastynge couenaunte with them: Namely, that I wyll neuer ceasse to do them good: & þ I wil put my feare in their hearttes, so þ they shal not runne awaye from me. *Yea, I will haue a luste, and pleasure to do them good, and faythfully to plant them in thys lande with my whole hearte, and with all my soule. For thus sayeth the Lord: like as I haue brought all thys greate plage vpō thys people, euen so will I also bryng vpon thē all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in thys lande: wherof ye saye now, that it shall neither bee inhabyted of people, nor of catell, but be delyuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yea, lande shalbe bought for money, and euidences made therof, and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and round about Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpō the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth: yea, and in the cities that are in the southe. For I will bryng their prysoners hyther agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is monished of the Lorde to praye for the delyuerraunce of the people, whiche the Lord promyseth: God forgeueth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for hys owne renowme. Of the bryche of Christe. The kyngdome of Christe in the churche shall neuer be ended.

MOreouer, the word of the Lord came vnto Jeremie on this maner, * whē he was yet bouūd in þ Courte of the prison. Thus sayeth the Lorde, whiche fulfylleth the thinge that he speaketh: the Lorde whiche performeth the thing that he taketh in hand, euen he whose name is the Lord: *crye vnto me and I will answere, and shewe the great & hie thinges, which were vnknowen vnto thee. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israell, concernynge the houses of thys cytie, and the houses of the kynges of Juda, that they are broken thorow the ordinaunce & the sweard: Because the inhabyters of thys cytie haue come to fyght agaynst the Chaldees, & they are filled with the deade karkaies of men, whom I haue slayne in my wrathe & displeasure: when I turned my face from thys citie, because of al her wickednesse. Behold, sayeth þ Lord, I will repayre and heale their woundes, & make them whole: I wil open thē the large treasure of peace & truthe. And I wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israel: & will set them vp agayne as they were afore. * frō all misdedes, wherin they haue offended agaynste me, I will clense them: And all their blasphemyes whiche they haue done agaynste me, when they regarded me not, I wyll forgeue them. And this shal get me a name, a prayse, and honour amonge all the people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good that I will shewe vnto them: yea, they shalbee afeard, & astonied at all the good dedes & benefytes that I will do for them. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lord: * In thys place whereof ye saye that it shalbe a wildernesse, wherin neither people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the cyties of Juda, and without Jerusalem (whiche also shall be so voyde, that neyther people nor catell shall dwel there) shal the voice of gladnesse be heard agayne: the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall synge: * prayse the Lorde of hostes, for he is louyng: and hys mercye endureth for euer: & the voyce of them that shall offer vp gifres in the house of the Lord. For I will restore the captiuitie of thys land, as it was afore, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: It shall come yet therto, that in thys lande, whiche is voyde from men and catel, and in all the cities of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepheardes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountaynes, and in the cities that lye vpon the plaine, and in the cities of the south. In the land of Ben Jamin, in the fyldes of Jerusalem, and in the Cityes of Juda, shall the shepe be numbred agayne, vnder the hande of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, þ I wyll performe þ good thing, which I haue promysed vnto þ house of Israel & to þ house of Juda. In those daies & at the same time, I wil bring forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnesse, and he shal do equitie and righteousnesse in the lande.

In

Esa.11.a. In those dayes shal Juda be helped * and Jerusalem shall dwell safe: and he that shal call her, is euen God oure rygteousnes.

Gene.8.d sayth the Lord: Haue ỳ couenaunt * which I haue made with day and nyght be broken that there should not be day and night in due season? Then maye my couenaunte also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, & so he not to haue a sonne

Gene.15.d. and.22.c me * for like as the starres of heauen may not be numbred, neyther the sand of the sea measured: so will I multyplye the seede of Dauid my seruaunte, and the Leuites, my mynysters. Moreouer, the word of ỳ Lord came to Jeremie, saying: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kinredes (say they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue dispysed my people, and they reputed thẽ as though they were no people. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: yf I haue made no couenaunt with daye and night, and geuẽ no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also caste awaye the seede of Jacob and Dauid my seruaunt, so that I wil take no prynce out of hys seede, to rule the posterytie of Abraham Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne againe theyr captiuytie, and bee mercyfull vnto them.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

He threatneth that the cytie, and the kyng sedechiah also shalbe geuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that brought suche of theyr brethren into captiuitie, as were pardoned to go at theyr lyberte.

THese are the wordes whiche the Jerr.19.a. Lord spake vnto Jeremie * what time as Nabuchodonozor ỳ king of Babylon and all his hostes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder his power) & all hys people, fought againste Jerusalẽ, and all the cities therof. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell: Go, & speake to zedekyah the king of Juda, and tell him: The 4.Re.25.a. Lord sendeth the this worde. Beholde * I

Jerr.32.a. and.39.a will deliuer this citie into the hande of the kynge of Babylon: he shall burne it, & thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalte be led awaye prysoner, and deliuered into hys power. Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babylon in the face, and he shall speake with the mouthe to mouthe: & then shalt thou go to Babylon. Yet hearr the worde of the Lord, O zedekiah, thou kinge of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swearde, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytours, were brent: so shalt thou be brent also, & in thy mourning they shall say: Oh Lorde. For thus haue I determyned, sayeth the Lorde. Then spake Jeremye the prophet all these wordes vnto zedekiah kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babilons host besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cities: Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remayned of the * strong fensed cyties of Juda. These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, whẽ zedekiah was agreed with al the people at Jerusalẽ, that there shoulde be proclaymed * a liberte, so ỳ euery man should let hys seruaunt & handmayde go free, Hebrue, and hebruesse: & no Jew to holde hys brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agrement, that euery man shoulde set at liberte hys bonde seruaunt, & bond womã, & no longer to holde them bond, euen so they were obedyent, & let thẽ go free. But afterward they repented and toke agayne the seruaunte & handmaydens, whõ they had let go free, & so made them bond agayne. For the which

C cause the word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy frõ the Lord him selfe, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel. * I made a Deu.15.a

Exo.21.a couenaunte with youre fathers, when I brought thẽ out of Egipt, (ỳ they shoulde no more bee bondmen) saying: When seuen yeres are out, euery mã shal let his bought seruaũt an Hebrue go free, if he haue serued hym syxe yeres. But youre fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned & did right before me, in ỳ ye proclaimed, euery mã to let his neyghbour go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the temple ỳ beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne, & blasphemed my name: In this, ỳ euery man hath required his seruaũt & handmayden agayne, whõ ye haue let go quite & free: and compelled thẽ to serue you againe, & to be your bondmẽ, & bondwomẽ.

And

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euerye man to proclayme freedome vnto hys brother and neyghbour: wherfore I will call you vnto a freedome, sayeth the Lord: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestylence, and to hunger, and will make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earth. yea, those mé that haue broken my couenaũt, and not kept the wordes of the appoyntment whiche they made before me, when they hewed the calfe in two, and when there wente thorow ꝑ two halues therof, the prynces of Juda, the prynces of Jerusalem, the gelded mé, the priestes, and all the people of the lande, whiche wente thorowe the two sydes of the calfe.

Those men will I geue into the power of theyr enemyes, and into the handes of them that folow vpon theyr lyues. And theyr dead bodyes shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of ꝑ fielde. As for Zedekiah the kyng of Juda and hys prynces, I will delyuer them into the power of theyr enemyes, and of them that desyre to slay them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babylons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my commaundemente (sayeth the Lord) they shall come agayne before this cytie, they shall fyght agaynst it, wynne it, and burne it: Moreouer, I will laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

He prouoketh the obedyence of the Rechabytes, and thereby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabytes. He threatneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperyte vnto ꝑ Rechabytes, for their obedyẽce vnto their father.

THe wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Jeremye, in the reigne of Jehoakym the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, are these: Go vnto the house of the Rechabytes, and call them out, and bryng them to the house of the Lorde into some commodyous place, & geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniah, the sonne of Jeremy, the sonne of Habazziniah, and his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabytes: and brought them to the house of the Lorde, into the closette of the chyldren of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedaliah the manne of God: whiche was by the closette of the prynces, that is aboue the closette of Maasiah the sonne of Selũ, which is ꝑ treasurer. And before the sõnes of the kynred of the Rechabytes, I sette pottes ful of wyne, & cuppes, & sayd vnto thé: Drynke wyne. But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father, commaunded vs, saying: Ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, * buyld no houses, sowe no sede, plant no vynes: yea, ye shall haue no vyneyardes, but for al your time, ye shall dwel in tentes, ꝑ ye may lyue long in the land wherin ye be straũgers. Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all ꝑ he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne al our lyfe long: we nor our wyues, our sonnes, and our daughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin: we haue also amõg vs neither vyneyardes, nor corne lande to sowe, but we dwell in tentes: we obey, and doe accordyng vnto al that Jonadab our father commaũded vs. But now that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon came vp into the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the hoste of the Caldees, and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Goe and tell the men of Juda, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem: Wyll ye not bee reformed to obey my wordes, sayeth the Lorde? The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded hys sonnes, that they should drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey theyr fathers commaundemente. But as for me, * I haue stand vp early, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not been obedyent vnto me. yea, I haue sente my seruauntes all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sente you word, saying: O turne you nowe euery manne from his wycked way: amende your lyues, and goe not after straunge goddes to worshyppe them, that ye may contynue in the land which I haue gené vnto you and your fathers: but ye would neyther heare me, nor folowe me. The childre of Jonadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastly kept theyr fathers cõmaundemẽt, ꝑ he gaue thé: but this people is not obediẽt vnto me. And therfore thus sayth

The .xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wryteth, (as Jeremy endyteth) the booke of the curſes agaynſt Juda and Iſrael. He is ſente with the booke, vnto the people, & readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, & readeth it before them alſo. The rulers ſhewe vnto the kyng the wordes of the booke. Jehudi taketh the booke & readeth a lyttle of it, & caſteth it in the fyre. There is another wrytte at the cõmaundement of the Lorde.

IN the fourth yeare of Jehoakym the ſonne of Joſiah ꝑ kyng of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, ſayinge:
a Je. 30. a * Take a booke, and wryte therin all the wordes that I haue ſpoken to thee agaynſt Iſrael, agaynſt Juda, & agaynſt all the people, from the tyme that I began for to ſpeake vnto the in the reygne of Joſyah vnto this daye. That when the houſe of Juda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuiſed for them, they may a Jer. 18. a paraduenture * turne euerye man from hys wycked waye: that I maye forgeue theyr offences and ſinnes. Then dyd Je-Jer. 45. a remye call Baruch the ſonne of Neryah, *and Baruch wrote in the booke, at the mouth of Jeremy, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had ſpoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, ſayng: I am in pryſon, ſo ꝑ I may not come into the houſe of the Lorde: therfore go ꝑ thyther, and reade the booke that thou
B haſte wrytten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde: & reade them in the Lordes houſe vpon the faſtyng day, that the people, whole Juda and all they that come out of the cyties may heare. Peraduenture, they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euerye one from his wycked waye. For greate is the wrath and diſpleaſure, that the Lord hath taken againſt this people. So Baruch the ſonne of Neryah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete commaunded hym, readyng the wordes of the Lord out of the booke, in the Lordes houſe. And this was done in the fyfte yeare of Jehoakym the ſonne of Joſiah kyng of Juda, in the .ix. moneth, when * it
* Jo. 36. was commaunded, that all the people of Jeruſalem ſhoulde faſt before the Lorde, and they alſo that were come from the cytyes of Juda vnto Jeruſalem. Then C read Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the booke, within ꝑ houſe of the Lord: oute of the treaſurye of Gamariah the ſonne of Saphan the Scrybe, whiche is beſyde the hyer lofte of the * newe dooze Jer.
of the Lordes houſe: that all the people myght heare. Nowe when Micheah the the ſonne of Gamariah, the ſõne of Saphan, had hearde all the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke, he wente downe to the kynges palace into the Scrybes chambers, for there al ꝑ prynces were ſet: Elizama the Scrybe, Dalatah ꝑ ſonne of Semei, Elnathan ꝑ ſõne of Achbor, Gamariah the ſonne of Saphan, Zedekyah ꝑ ſonne of Hananiah, with all ꝑ prynces. And Micheah told them al the wordes ꝑ he heard Baruch reade out of the booke before ꝑ people. Then al the prynces ſent
D Jehudi the ſonne of Nathaniah, ꝑ ſonne of Selamiah, the ſonne of Chuſi, vnto Baruch, ſaying: Take in thyne hand the booke, where out thou haſt read before al the people, & come. So Baruch the ſonne of Neriah, tooke the booke in his hande, and came vnto them. And they ſayde vnto him: Syt downe and reade the booke, that we may heare alſo. So Baruch read that they myght heare. Nowe when they had heard al the wordes, they were abaſhed one vpon another, & ſayde vnto Baruch: We wil certifye the king of al theſe wordes. And they examined Baruch ſaying: tell vs, howe dydeſt ꝑ wryte all theſe E wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch anſwered them: He ſpake al theſe wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wrote them in the booke. Then ſayde the prynces vnto Baruch: Goe thy way, & hyde the with Jeremy, ſo that no manne knowe where ye be: And they went in to the king to the courte. But they kepte the booke in the chambre

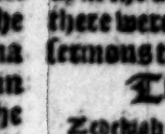
thãbre of Elisama the Scrybe, & told the king al the wordes, that he myght heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the booke, which he brought out of Elisama the Scrybes chãbre. And Jehudi read in it, that the kyng & all the prynces whiche were about him, myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, & there was a fyre before him. And whē Jehudi had read three or foure leaues therof, he cut the booke in peces with a penknyfe, & *caste it into the fyre vpō the harth, vntyll the booke was all brent in the fyre vpon ỹ harth. yet no man was abashed therof, or rent his clothes, neither ỹ king himselfe, nor his seruauntes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuertheles, Elnathā, Dalaiah & Gamariah besought the kyng that he would not burne the booke: not withstãding the king would not heare them, but cõmaunded Jerahmael the sõne of Amelech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriell, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scrybe, and vpō Jeremy the Prophete: but the Lord kept them out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had brente the booke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy, saying: Take an other booke & wrype in it all the foresayde sermons, that were wrytten in the fyrste booke, which Jehoakim the king of Juda hath brente. And tell Jehoakym the kyng of Juda, thus sayeth the Lorde: thou haste brent the booke, & thoughtest within thy selfe: Why haste thou wrytten therin, that the kyng of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so that he shall make both people and cattell to dee out of it? Therefore thus the Lorde sayeth of Jehoakym the kyng of Juda. *There shall none of his generacion syt vpō the throne of Dauid. his dead corse shalbe cast out, that the heate of the daye, and the frost of the nyght may come vpō hym. And I will vysyte the wyckednesse of hym, of hys sede, & of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euyll that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyll I bryng vpon them: vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, & vpon all Juda. Then tooke Jeremy another booke, & gaue it Baruch the Scrybe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremy, all the sermons that were in the fyrste booke, whiche Jehoakym the kyng of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye moe sermons then before.

The .xxxvii. Chapter.

Zedekiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremye goyng into the lande of Beniamyn is taken. He is beaten and put in prysō. He is delyuered by kyng Zedekiah.



Zedekiah the sonne of Josias *whiche was made kyng thorowe Nabugodonosor kyng of Babylon, raigned in the lande of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakym. But neyther he nor his seruauntes, nor the people in ỹ land, would obey the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophete Jeremy. *Neuertheles, Zedekiah the kyng sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah, & Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah ỹ priest, to the Prophete Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto ỹ Lord our God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked free among the people at that tyme, and was not put in prysō as yet. *Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte: which when the Caldees that besyeged Jerusalem perceiued, they departed from thence. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto ỹ Prophete Jeremy, saying: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, this answere shall ye geue to the kyng of Juda that sent you vnto me for counsayle. *Beholde, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into his owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne and fyght against this citie, wyn it, & set fyre vpō it. For thus sayth the Lord: deceyue not youre owne myndes, thynking on this maner: Tushe, the Caldees go now they way from vs. No, they shal not go they way. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees that besyege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente, yet shoulde they stande vp and set fyre vpon this cytye. Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp frō Jerusalem, for feare of the Egyptyans armye: Jeremy went out of Jerusalē, toward the lande of Beniamin, to get hym frō among the people. And whē he came vnder Beniamins port, there was a porter called Jerias, the sōne of Selempah, the sonne of *Hananiah, which fell vpon him, & toke hym, saying: thy mynde is to rūne to the Caldees. Then sayd Jeremy:

It is

It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Nethertheles, Iesiah would not beleue him: but brought Jeremye bounde before the prynces. Wherfore the prynces were angry with Jeremy, & smote him, and layde him in prysō in the house of Jonathas ꝑ Scrybe. For he was ꝑ ruler of the prysō. Thus was Jeremy put into the dongeō & prylon, & so lay there a long time. ¶ Thā Zedekyah the kyng sent for him, & called hym, and asked hym quyetly in his owne house, saying: thinkest thou this busynes (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy aunswered: yea, that it doeth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be delyuered into the kinge of Babylons power.

* Jer. 38. c.

D Moreouer Jeremy sayde vnto kyng Zedekyah: What haue I offended against thee, agaynst thy seruauntes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue put me in prylon? * Where are your Prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayde that the kyng of Babylon shoulde not come against you and this lande? And therfore heare now, O my Lorde the kinge: let my prayer be accepte before thee, and sende me nomore into the house of Jonathas the Scrybe, that I dye not there. Then Zedekyah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremye in the fore entrye of the prylon, and daily to be geue hym a lake of bread out of the bakers streate, vntyll all the breade in the cytye were eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entrye in the prylon.

* Jer. 28. c.

The .xxxviii. Chapter.

By the motion of the rulers, Jeremye is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abdemelech the chāberlayne, the kyng commaundeth Jeremye to bee brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kyng howe he myght escape death.

A Saphatyah the sōne of Mathā, Godoliah the sōne of Phashur, Jucal the sonne of Semelyah, and Pashur the sonne of Melchyah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner.

* Jere. 21. b and. 27. a

Thus sayth the Lorde: * Whoso remayneth in this cytie, shall perish, either with ꝑ sweard, or hunger or with ꝑ pestilence. But whoso falleth vnto ꝑ Caldees, shall escape, wynning his soule for a pray, and shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: This citie (no doubte) must be delyuered into the power of the kyng of Babilon, and he also shall wyn it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kyng: Syr, we beleeue you let this manne bee put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the soudyers that bee in this citie, and the handes of al the people, whē he speaketh suche wordes vnto them. This man seeketh laboureth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. Zedekyah the kyng answered, & sayde: loe, he is in your handes: for the kyng maye denye you nothyng.

* Jere. 22. a

Then tooke they Jeremye, and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamelech, ꝑ dwelt in the fore entrye of the prylon: And they let downe Jeremye wyth coardes into a dongeon, where there was no water but myre. So Jeremy stacke fast in the myre. Now when Abedmelech, the Moryan, beyng a chāberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode that they had cast Jeremye into the dongeon, he wente out of the kynges house, and spake to the king, (which then sat vnder the porte of Beniamyn) these wordes: my Lorde the kyng, whereas these menne medle with Jeremye the Prophete, they do him wrong. Namely in that they haue put hym in prylon, there to dye of hūger, for there is nomore breade in the citie.

Then the kinge commaunded Abdemelech the Moryan, and sayde. Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wylt, & drawe vp Jeremy the Prophete out of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with hym, and went to the house of the kyng: and there vnder the treasury he gatte olde ragges and worne cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde into the dongeō to Jeremy. And Abedmelech the Moryan sayde vnto the Prophete Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thy arme holes, betwyxte them and the coardes: and Jeremye dyd so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, and tooke hym out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the prylon.

Then * Zedekyah the kyng sent, & caused Jeremy the Prophete to bee called vnto hym, into the thyrd entry that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kyng sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the somewhat, but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremy answered Zedekiah: yf I be playne vnto thee, ꝑ wylt cause me to suffre death: yf I geue the counsayle, thou wylt not folowe me. So the kyng sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremy, saying: As truelye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyll not slay thee, nor geue thee into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe. Then sayde Jeremy vnto zedekiah: Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes, the god of Israell. * Yf case be, that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Babilons princes, thou shalte saue thy life, and this citye shall not be brent: yea, bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape with your lyues. But if thou wilt not go forth to the kinge of Babilons princes, thē shall this citie bee deliuered into the handes of the Caldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, & thou shalte not be able to escape them. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their handes, and so thei to haue me in derisiō. But Jeremy answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseche the,) which I speake vnto the, so shalt thou bee wel, and saue thy life. But if thou wilt not go forth, the lorde hath told me this plainly: Beholde, all the women that are lefte in the king of Judaes house, shalbe led forth out to the kyng of Babilons princes. And they shal say, that thou art disceyued: and ỹ ỹ mē in whom ỹ dideſt put thy truſt, haue gotten the vnder, and ſes thy feete faſte in ỹ mire, and gone their waye from the. Therfore al thy wiues with theyr children shall they lede forth vnto the Caldees: and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be ỹ king of Babilons prieſoner, & this cytye shalt thou cauſe to be brēt. Then ſaid zedekiah vnto Jeremy: Ieke ỹ no bodye knowe of theſe wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But if ỹ princes perceiue ỹ I haue talked with the, & come vnto the, saying: O ſpeake, what ſaide the king to the? hide it not from vs, & we wil not putte the to death: Tell vs (we praye the) what ſaide the king to thee? See thou geue them this anſwere: I haue hūbly beſought the king that he will let me lie no more in Jehonathans house, ỹ I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and aſked him. And he told them, after ỹ maner as the kinge bad him. Then they helde theyr peace, and let him alone: for they perceyued nothing. * So Jeremy abode ſtil in the fore entry of the prieſon, vntill the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

Nabuchodonozor beſegeth Jerusalem, zedekiah flieth. He is taken of the Caldees. His ſonnes are ſlaine. His eyes are thruſt out. Jeremy is prouided for. Abdemelech is deliuered frō captiuitie, because of ỹ confidence that he hath in God.

NOw * when the citie of Jeruſalē was taken (for in the .ix. yere of zedekiah kinge of Juda, in the .x. moneth, came Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon & all his hooſt, and beſeged Jeruſalem, and foughte againſte it. And in the .xi. yere of zedekiah, in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daie of the moneth, he brake into the citie.) Then al the princes of ỹ king of Babilon came in, and ſatte them downe vnder the porte: Nergel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarſachim, Rabſaris, Nergel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with al other princes of the king of Babilon. * And when zedekiah ỹ king of Juda with his ſouldyers ſawe them, they fled, and departed out of the citie by night, through the kinges garden, and through the port that is betwene the two walles, and ſo thei went towarde the wildernes. But the Caldees hoſte followed faſte after them, and tooke zedekiah in the fielde of Jericho, and brought hym prieſoner to Nabuchedonozor the king of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lieth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kinge of Babilon cauſed the childrē of zedekiah and al the nobles of Juda, to bee ſlaine before his face at Reblath. And made zedekias eyes to bee putte out, and bound him with two chaines, and ſent him to Babylon. * Moreouer the Caldees brent vp the kinges palace, with the other houſes of the people, & brake downe the walles of Jeruſalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the cytye, and ſuch as were come to helpe the (whatſoeuer was left of the commen ſorte) Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradan the chyefe captaine let ỹ raſcal people (and thoſe that had nothyng) dwell ſtil in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne fieldes at the ſame time. Nabuchodonozor alſo the kynge of Babilon, gaue Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine a charge concernyng Jeremy, ſayinge: take, and cherythe him, and make muche of him, ſee thou dooe him no harme, but entreate him after hys owne deſyre. So Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, Nabuſazban Rabſares, Nergal, Sarezar, Rabmag, and al the kynge of Babilons Lordes, ſent for Jeremy, * & cauſed him to be fet out of the fore entry of the prieſon, and committed hym vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam ỹ ſonne of Saphan, that he ſhould carie him home: * ſo he dwelt among the people. Nowe whyle

Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entry of the prieson, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto hym saying: Goe and tel Abedmelech ꝑ Mozian. Thus saieth the lord of hostes, the God of Israell: Beholde, the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for thys citye, wyll I bryngе vpon them, that thou shalt see it: but I will deliuer the (sayth the lorde) and thou shalt not come in the hãdes of those menne whome thou feareste. For doubtles, I wil saue the, so that thou shalt not perish with ꝑ swoord: but thy life shalbe saued, and that because thou hast putte thy trust in me, sayeth the Lorde.

Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder ꝑ Ammonites, in Idumea and in al the cõtreyes, when they hearde that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were lefte in Juda: All the Jewes (I say) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into ꝑ lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wine and other fruites, and that verye muche.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaines of the hoost that were scatered on euerye syde in the lande, came to Godolyah in Mizpa, & sayed vnto him: knowestethou not that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sente Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah to sleye the? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam beleued them not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa, these woordes secretelye: Lette me goe I praye thee, and I wyl sleye Ismaell the sonne of Nathanyah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kil the, that al the Jewes whiche resorte vnto the, myghte be scattered, and the remnaunte in Juda perishe. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. Thou shalte not doo it, for they are but lyes that thou sayest of Ismaell.

The.xli. Chapter.

Ismaell killeth Godoliah grieuslye, and many other with hym. Johanan folowyth after Ismaell.

But

BUt in the seuenth moneth it happened, that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elysama (one of the kinges bloude) came with them that were greatest about the king, and ten mē that were swoorne with him, vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicā to Mizpa, & they dyd eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those .x. men that were swoorne to hym, start vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the sweorde, and slew him, whom the king of Babilon had made gouernoure of the land. Ismael also slew al the Iewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and al the Caldees that he founde there waityng vpon him, and those that were able to fight he slewe with him. The next daye after that he had slaine Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) & there came certaine men from Sychem, frō Siloh and Samarya, to the noumber of lxxx. whiche had shauen theyr beardes, rēt theyr clothes, and were all beauye, bryngyng meat offerynges and incence in theyr handes, to offer it in the house of the Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa wepyng, to meete them. Now when he met them, he said: Go your way to Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam. And when they came into the middeste of the cirye, Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah (with them that were swoorne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the middeste of the pit. Among these foure score men there were .x. that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh, slaye vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in ỳ field, of wheate, barley, oyle, and honye. So he spared them, and slew them not with their brethren. Nowe the * pyt wherein Ismael dyd caste the deade bodyes of the menne (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had Kynge Aza caused to bee made for feare of Baaza the kynge of Israell, and the same pit dyd Ismael fill with slayne men. As for the rēnaunt of the people, ỳ kinges doughters and al the people that were yet left at Mizpa, vpon whom* Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine had made Godoliah ỳ sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Iohanan the sonne of Careah, and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer ỳ kinges host with him, hearde of all ỳ wickednes ỳ Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah had done, *they toke their companions, and wēt out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde him by the great waters that are in Gybeon. Nowe when all the people whom Ismael led captiue, saw Iohanan the sonne of Careah and all the other captaynes of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had caried awaye from Mizpa, were brought again. And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael ỳ sonne of Nathaniah, fled frō Iohanan with viii. of his swoorne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Iohanan the sonne of Careah & al the captaines of the hoste, that were with him, toke al ỳ remnaunt of the people, whoune Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had ledde awaye: (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam) whome they also had rescued from hym: fyghtyng men, women & chyldren, and Geldedmē, whom they brought againe from Gybeon, and went frō thence and sat them downe at Geruth Camaam, whiche lyeth beside Bethleem, *that they might go into Egypte for feare of the Caldees: of whome they were afrayed, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah had slayne Godoliah Ahycams sonne, * whom the king of Babylon hath made gouernor in the lande.

The.xlii. Chapter.

The captaines aske counsaile of Jeremy what they ought to do. Jeremy admonisheth the remnaunt of the people not to goe into Egypt.

SO al the captaines, & Iohanā ỳ sonne of Careah, Iezaniah ỳ sonne of Osaiah, came with al ỳ people from the leaste vnto the moste, and said vnto Jeremy the prophete. *O heare our peticion ỳ thou mayest pray for vs vnto the lord thy god: namelye, for al the remnaunt wherof ther be very fewe of vs left of many, as ỳ seest vs, ỳ the lord thy god maye shew vs a way to go in, and tel vs what we should do. Then Jeremye ỳ prophet said vnto thē: I haue heard you. Behold, I wil pray vnto god your lord as ye haue required me: & loke what aunswer ỳ lord geueth you, I shall certify you therof, & kepe nothing backe frō you. And they said vnto Jeremy. * The lord of truth and faithfulnes be our recorde, that we wil doe al that the lord thy god commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We will hearke vnto ỳ voice of our lorde god, to whom we send the, that we may prosper, when we haue folowed the voice of the lord our god.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, & al the captaines of the people that were with hym: yea, and al the people from the least vnto the moste, and sayde vnto them. Thus sayth the lord God of Israel, vnto whome ye sente me to laye forth youre prayers before hym: * yf ye wyll dwell in this lande, I shall buylde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shal plante you, and not roote you oute. For I repente, as concernyng the trouble that I haue done vnto you: feare not the kyng of Babilon, of whome ye stande in awe: O, be not afrayed of him, sayth the Lord. For I wil be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you from his hand. I wil pardon you, I wil haue mercy vpon you, and cause him to pitye you, and bryng you agayne into your owne lande. Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwel in this land, nor to folow the voyce of the Lorde your God, but will saye thus: we will not dwell here, but goe into Egipt, wher we shal neither se warre, heare the noyse of the trompette, nor suffer hungre, there will wee dwel. Wherefore, heare now the worde of the lord O ye remnaunt of Juda. * Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: yf ye be wholy purposed to go into Egipt, & ye enter ther to dwel as straungers: * the sweord ye feared, shall ouertake you in Egipte: & the hunger wherof ye be here afraid, shal hang vpon you, & folow you into Egipt, & ther shal ye dye. And al they ye of set purpose vndertake to go into Egipt to soiourne there, shal perishe with the sweord, with hunger and pestilence, not one of them shal remain: ther shal none escape the plage that I wil bryng vpon them. For thus saith the lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel: like as my wrath and indignacion is moued against the inhabitours of Jerusalem: so shall my displeasure be kindled against you also, if ye go into Egipt: and there ye shalbe reuiled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place ye shall neuer see it more. The Lorde forbiddeth you O ye remnaunte of Juda) that ye shall not go into Egypt. And forgette not that I haue warned you earnestlye this daye, for ye haue dissembled with me: * for ye sent me vnto the lorde your God, and said: O pray thou the Lord oure God for vs, and looke what aunswere the lorde our God geueth the, that bring vs again, and wee shal doe therafter. Now haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but ye haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde your God, for ye which cause he hath sent me vnto you.

Now therfore, * yf ye wil not folow it, be sure that ye shall perishe with the sweord, with hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place where your lust is to goe and dwell.

The.xlui. Chapter.

Johanan carieth the remnaunt of the people into Egipt contrary to the minde of Jeremy. Jeremy propheciеth the destruction of Egipt.

NOw when Jeremye had ended al the wordes of the Lorde hys God vnto the people, whiche to declare the lorde they God had sent him to them (euen all these wordes, I say:) Jzariah the sonne of Oziah, and Johanan the sone of Careah with al the stubburne persons, said vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest. The Lorde our God hath not sente the to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not goe into Egypt, and dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh thee agaynste vs, that he might bryng vs into the captiuitye of the Caldees, ye they might slay vs, and cary vs away prisoners vnto Babilon. So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaines of the hoost, and al the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwell in ye lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Careah and al the captaines of the hoost, caried awaye al the remnaunte in Juda, * that were come together agayne from all the Heathen (among whom they had bene scatered) to dwel in the land of Juda: men, wemen, children, the kinges daughters, al those that Nabuzaradan the chiefe captain had left with Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam, the sonne of Saphan. They caried away also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obediente vnto the commaundemente of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. And in Taphnis. the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy, saying: Take great stones in thine hande, and hide the in the bricke wal, vnder ye doze of Pharaos house in Taphnis, ye al ye men of Juda may se, & saye vnto them: Thus saieth the lord of hostes, ye god of Israel. * Behold, I wil send and call for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, & wil set his seat vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shal spreade his tent ouer them. And when he commeth, he shall smyte the land of Egipt: some with slaughter, some with prieſonmente, and ſome with the ſweorde. He ſhall ſet fyre vpon the temples of the Egipcians Goddes, & burne them vp, & take themſelues prieſoners.

Moreouer, he ſhall arraye hymſelfe with the lande of Egipt, lyke as a ſhepeherde ſo of the temple of the ſunne, that is in Egipt, ſhal he breake in pieces, and burne the temples of the Egipcians goddes.

The.xliii. Chapter.

He reproueth the people for theyr vnkindnesse. They that fet lyght by the threatnyng of the Lorde are chaſtened. The deſtruction of Egipte, and the Jewes therin, is prophecied.

¶ This is the worde that was ſhewed to Jeremy concerning al ye Jewes which dwelt in Egipt: at Migdol, at Taphnys, at Noph, and in the lande of Pathures. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael: Ye haue ſene al the miſery that I haue brought vpon Jeruſalem, & vpon the cities of Juda:
ſo that this day they are deſolate, and no manne dwellyng therein: and that bee-cauſe of the great blaſphemyes whiche they cõmitted, to prouoke me to angre.
In that they went backe to doe ſacrifice and worſhip vnto ſtraunge gods, whome neyther ye nor youre fathers haue knowen. Howbeit, I ſent vnto them my ſeruauntes all the Prophetes. * I roſe vp early, I ſente vnto them and gaue them warning. O dooe no ſuche abhominable thinges, and thynges that I hate. But they wouldе not folowe nor hearken, to turne from theyr wickednes, and to doe no more ſacrifices vnto ſtraunge Gods.
¶ Wherfore myne indignacion and wrath was kyndled, and it brente vp the cityes of Juda, the fieldes with the ſtreetes of Jeruſalem, ſo that they were made waſt and deſolate, as it is come to paſſe thys daye. Now therfore, thus ſayth the lord of hoſtes, the God of Iſrael: How happeneth it, that ye dooe ſo greate euil vnto youre owne ſoules: thus to deſtroye the menne and weomen, childzen and babes of Juda: ſo that none of you is left, becauſe ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the worke of your own handes: When ye offre vnto ſtraunge Goddes in the lande of Egipt, where as ye bee gone to dwell. That ye myghte vtterly peryſhe, and that ye might be cruyled and ſhamefully entrated of all nations. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednesse of youre forefathers, the wickednesse of the kynges of Juda, and theyr wyues, the wickednesse that ye your ſelues and your wyues haue doone in the lande of Juda, in the citye, and in the ſtreetes of Jeruſalem? yet are ye not ſory vnto this day: ye feare not, neyther walke ye in my law and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you, and your fore-fathers.

Therefore thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes, the God of Iſrael: I am ſted-faſtly aduyſed and determined to punith you, and to roote out all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purpoſely wente into Egipte, there to dwel, I will take them, * and they ſhal all bee deſtroyed. In the lande of Egipte ſhall they pe-ryſhe, beyng conſumed with the ſweorde and with hunger. For from the leaſte vnto the moſte, they ſhall peryſhe with the ſweorde and with hunger. Moreouer, they ſhalbee reuyled, abhorred, ſhamed, and confounded: For I will viſyte them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue viſi-ted Hieruſalem, with the ſweorde, with hunger, and with peſtilence. So that none of the remnaunte of Juda whiche are gone to dwel in Egypte, ſhalbe lefte to come agayne into the lande of Juda, although they thynke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none ſhall come agayne, but ſuche as are fled awaye.

Then al the men whiche knewe that theyr wyues had offered vnto ſtraunge Gods, and a great ſorte of wyues that ſtoode there, yea and all the people that dwelte there in Egypte, in the citye of Pathures, anſwered Jeremy, and ſayde:
As for the woordes that thou haſt ſpoken vnto vs in the name of the Lord, we will in no wiſe heare them: but whatſoeuer goeth out of our owne mouthe, that we will do. We will doe ſacrifice and offer oblacions vnto the queme of heauen,
* like as we and oure forefathers, oure kinges and our heades haue doone in the cities of Juda, and in the ſtreetes and fieldes of Jeruſalem. For then had we plentyouſnes of vitayles, then were we in proſperitie, and no miſfortune came vp-on vs. * But ſence we lefte to burne incenſe, and to doe ſacrifice vnto the queme of heauen, we haue had ſcarcenes of all thynges, and peryſhe with the ſweorde & hunger. Laſte of all, when we weomen dyd sacrifyce and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dydde we make her cakes and powre vnto her drinkofferinges, euen to that ymage, dyd we sacrifice and serue, without our husbandes willes.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto all the people, to the menne, to the weomenne, and to all the folke whiche had geuen hym that answere: dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre forefathers, your kynges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the cities of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem, and hath he not considered thys in hys mynde? Insomuche that the Lorde myghte no longer suffre the wickednesse of your inuencions, and the abhominable thynges whiche ye dyd.

*Esai.1.a *Is not your lande desolate and voyde, yea, abhorred & accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe thys daye.

3.reg.18.b *Dyd not all thys happen vnto you, Jere.2.c because ye made such sacrifices to idols 3.c.3.c.6. and synned agaynste the Lorde? ye haue Baru.3.a not folowed hys voyce, to walke in hys lawe, in hys ordenaunces and statutes. yea, thys is the cause that al misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe thys daye. Moreouer, Jeremy spake vnto all the people and to all the weomen. Heare the woorde of the Lorde al Juda, ye that bee in the lande of Egypt. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israell. Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, the thyng *Jer.44.c that ye haue fulfilled in dede. *yea, thus haue ye sayd: We will not fayle, but perfourme the vowes that we haue vowed. We will doo sacrifice, and powre oute drinkofferynges to the Quene of heauen. Purposely will ye serue vp youre owne meanynges, and perfourme youre vowes. And therfore, heare the woordes of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte. Beholde, *I haue *gen.22.a G sworne by my great name, sayeth the Lorde: that my name shall not be reherced thorow any mannes mouthe of Juda, in all the lande of Egypt, to say: The Lord God liueth. For I will watche to plage them, and not for theyr welthe.

*Jer.42.c *And all the menne of Juda that bee in the lande of Egipte, shal perishe with the sworde and with hunger, vntyll they be vtterlye destroyed. Neuertheles, those that fledde awaye for the sworde shall come agayne into the lande of Juda, but there shalbe verye fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egipte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose woordes shal be foūd true: theirs or myne. Take thys for a token, that I will visite you in thys place, sayeth the lord, and that ye may know that I (without doubt) wil perfourme my purpose vpon you, to punishe you: Beholde, saith the Lorde, I will delyuer Pharao Hophra king of Egipt, into the handes of hys enemyes that seeke after hys lyfe: *euen as I gaue Zedekiah the kyng of 44.d. Juda into the handes of Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon his enemy, which sought after his lyfe. Jer.39.

The.xlv. Chapter.

Baruch is reproued of Jeremy.

These are the woordes that Jeremy the Prophete spake vnto Baruche I the sonne of Neriah *after that he Jer.36. hadde written these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremy, in ỳ.iiii. yeare of Jehoakimỳ sōne of Josias king of Juda, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel vnto the, o Baruch: Insomuch as thou thoughteste thus, when thou wast wryting: Woe is me, the lord hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe, I haue wery ed my selfe with syghing, and haue B founde no rest. Therfore tel hym, O Jeremy, that the Lord saith thus: Behold, the thynge that I haue builded, will I breake downe agayne, and roote out the thynge that I haue planted, yea, thys whole land. And seekest thou yet promocion? Looke not for it, and desyre it not. For I will bryng a miserable plage vpon all flesshe, sayth the Lord. *But thy Jer.21. lyfe will I geue thee for a praye in all places, whersoeuer thou goest.

The.xlvi. Chapter.

Ye prophecieth the destruction of Egipt: Deliuerance is promised to Israel.

Here folow the woordes of the I Lord to the prophet Jeremy, which he spake agaynste al the Gentiles. These woordes folowyng, preached he *to the Egipcians Ezek.29. concerning the hoost of Pharao Necho, and. king of Egipt, whē he was in Charcamis beside ỳ water of Euphrates, what Ezec.30. tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon slewe hym, in the fourthe yeare of Jehoakim the sōne of Josias king of Juda. *Make ready buckler and shilde: Jer.46.

and goe foorth to fighte: harneſſe youre horſes, and ſet your ſelues vpon them, ſet your ſallettes faſt on, bryng foorth ſpeares, ſcoure your ſweordes, and put on your breſtplates.

But alas how happeneth it, that I ſee you ſo afrayd? why ſhrinke ye backe? Theyr worthyes are ſlayne: yea, they runne ſo faſt away, that none of them looketh behynde hym. Fearefulnes is fallen vpon euery one of them, ſayeth the lord. The lyghteſt of foote ſhal not flye away, and the woorthies ſhall not eſcape. Towarde the northe by the water of Euphrates, they dyd ſtumble and fall. But B what is he thys that ſwelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaryng and ragyng lyke the ſtreames of waters? It is Egipt that ryſeth vp lyke the floud, and caſteth out the waters with ſo greate noyſe. And he ſayde: I will goe vp, and will couer the earth, I will deſtroy the citie with them that are therin. Get ye vp ye horſes, rore furth ye charettes, come furth ye woorthyes, ye Mozyans, ye Libeans with your buckelers, ye Lidians with your bowes. This day of the Lorde God of hooſtes, is a day of vengeaunce, that he C maye auenge hym of hys enemyes. The ſweorde ſhal deuour: it ſhalbe ſatyſfyed, and bathed in theyr bloud. For the lord God of hooſtes ſhall haue a ſlayne offrering towarde the northe, by the water of Euphrates. Goe vp, O Gilead, & bryng tryacle vnto the daughter of Egipt. But in bayne ſhalte thou goe to ſurgerye, for thy wounde ſhall not be ſtopped. The heathen haue heard of thy ſhame, and ꝑ lande is full of thy confuſion: for one ſtronge man dyd ſtomble vpon another, D & they are fallen both together. * Theſe Jer.46. are the wordes that the lorde ſpake to ꝑ prophete Jeremy, concernyng the commyng of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon, whyche was ſent to deſtroy ꝑ lande of Egypt. Preache out thorow we ꝑ lãd of Egipt, & cauſe it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Noph, and Taphnis, & ſay: Stand ſtil, make the redy, for ꝑ ſwearde ſhal conſume the rounde aboute. Howe happeneth it, that thy mighty worthies are fallen? Why ſtoode they not faſte? Euẽ becauſe the lord thruſt thẽ downe. The ſlaughter was greate, for one fell euer ſtyll vpon another. One cryed vpon another: Up let vs go again to our own people, and to our own natural countrey from the cruel ſweorde. They dyd crye euen there: O Pharao, kinge of Egipt, E thou troublous kynge: the tyme wyll bring ſedicion. As truly as I lyue ſayeth the kynge, * whoſe name is the lorde of Eſa.47.8 and.51.c hooſtes, it ſhall come as the mount of Tabor, and as Lybanus, if it ſtode in ꝑ ſea. O thou daughter of Egypte, make readye thy geare to flytte. For Noph ſhalbe voide & deſolate, ſo that no man ſhall dwell therein. The land of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe: but deſtruccyon ſhal come oute of the northe, I ſay it cũmeth. Her waged ſouldiers that be with her, are lyke fatte calues: They alſo ſhal fle away together, and not abide: for the daye of theyr ſlaughter, and the tyme of theyr viſytacion, ſhal come vpõ thẽ. The crye of them ſhall make a noyſe, as the blaſte of a trompet. For they ſhal F enter in wyth theyr hooſtes, and come wyth axes, as it were hewers down of wood. And they ſhal cut doun her wood, ſayeth the Lorde: They ſhall be innumerable: for they ſhalbe moe in numbre thẽ the greſhoppers, ſo that no man ſhalbe able to tel thẽ. The daughter of Egipte is confounded, and delyuered into the hãdes of the people of ꝑ North. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes, the God of Iſrael. Beholde, I wyl viſet that reſtles people of Alexandria, Pharao, & Egipt, yea, both their gods & their kinges: euen Pharao, and al them that put their truſt in him. Yea, I wil deliuer them into the handes of thoſe that ſeeke after theyr liues: Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonoſor the kyng of Babilon, & into the power of hys ſeruauntes. And after al theſe thynges, it ſhalbe inhabited as afore time, ſaith the lorde. But be not thou afrayed (o my ſeruãt Jacob,) feare G not thou O Iſrael. For loe, I wil helpe thee from farre, and thy ſeede from the lande of theyr captiuitye. Jacob alſo ſhall come agayne, and be in reſte: he ſhall proſpere, and no manne ſhall doe hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my ſeruaunt) ſayeth the Lorde, for I am with thee: and wil deſtroye al nacions, among whom I haue ſcattered thee. Neuertheleſſe, I wil not conſume thee: but chaſten thee and correct thee, yea, and that with diſcreeyon: neyther will I ſpare thee as one that were faulteles.

The.xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynſt the Philiſtines.

A These are the wordes, that the lord spake vnto Jeremy the Prophete, agaynste the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the citye of Azah. Thus sayth the lord: Beholde, there shall waters ryse out of the North: and shall grow to a great floud, rumming ouer and couerynge the lande, the cities and them
B that dwel therein.

And the men shal crye, and al they that dwel in the lande shal mourne at ỳ noyse and stampyng of their strõg barbed horses, at the shaking of their charets, and at the rũblyng of the wheles. The fathers shal not loke to theyr chyldren, so feeble and wery shal their handes be at ỳ same time when he shalbe there, to destroy the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make wast both Tirus, Sidon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

C For the Lorde will destroy the Philistines, the remnaunte of the yle of Caphtor. Baldenes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other valleyes shal kepe her peace. Howe long wilte thou slaye, O thou sworde of the Lorde? Whan wilt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lord himselfe hath geuen him a charge agaynste Ascalon, and raysed it vp agaynste the cities of the sea coastes?

The.xlviii. Chapter.

The worde of the lord agaynst the Moabites.

THus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell, agaynste *Moab: woe be to the citie of Nebo: for it is layde waste, brought to confusyon, and Karithiarim taken. Misgab is broughte to shame and afrayde: Moab can boaste no more of Heschon, for they haue deuysed agaynst it. Come shall they say, let vs roote them out, that they maye bee no more amonge the noumbre of the Gentiles, and that thou Madmen mayst no more be thought vpon: and the sworde shall persecute thee. A voyce shall crye from Horonaim: with greate wastyng and destruccyon, is Moab made desolate.

Children could tell of the crye thereof. For at the goyng vp vnto Luith, he arose with lamentacyon and mourayng, and downe towarde Horonaim they heard a cruel & a dradly crye. Get you away, saue your lyues, and be lyke vnto the heath in the wildernes. For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne woorkes and treasure, thou shalt be take. Chamos with hys prestes and prynces shall goe
B away into captiuitie. The destroyer shal come vpõ al cities, none shal escape. The valleyes shalbe destroyed, & the fieldes shalbe layed wast, lyke as the Lord hath spoken. Geue winges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cities shal be made so desolate, that no manne shall dwel therein

Cursed be he that doth the woorke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed bee he that kepeth backe his *sworde from shedyng of blonde. Moab hath euer beene riche and careles from her youth vp, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another, (that is) she neuer went away into captiuitie: therfore her taste remayneth, & her sauour is not
C yet chaunged. But loe, the tyme cũmeth sayth the lord, that I shal sende her trussers, to trusse her vp, which shal remoue her from her dwelling: and to emptie her vessels, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shalbe ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israell was ashamed of * Bethell, wherin she put her trust. Wherfore doe ye thinke thus? we are mightye & strong men of warre. Moab is destroyed, & her cities brent vp: her chosen young men be slayne, sayth the king, whose name is the lord of hoostes. The destruccion of Moab cummeth on apace, and her fall is at hãd. Al her neighbours shal mourne for her, & al they that knowe her name, shall say: O how happeneth it, that the strõg staffe, & the goodly rod is thus broken? And thou doughter Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thyrste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to thee also, and breake downe thy strong holdes. And thou that dwellest in Aroer D get thee to the streete, and looke aboute thee, aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thyng is happened? Oh Moab is confounded and ouercome.

1.Reg.

Mourne and crye, tel it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shal come vpon the playne lande: Hamelye, vpon Holon, & Jahazah, vpon Mephaath and Dibon: vpon Nabo, and the house of Deblathaim vpon Cariathiarim, and vpõ the house Gamul, vpon the house Maon, and Carioth, vpon Bozrah, and al the cities in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The

The horne of Moab is smitten down, and her arme broken, sayeth the Lorde. Make her dronken, for she magnyfyed herselfe aboue the lorde, that menne may clap theyr handes at her vomyte, & that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israel, thou shalt not laugh him to scorne, when he is take among theues. *Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoke against him, thou shalt be driue away. ye Moabites shal leaue ỹ cities & dwell in rockes of stone, and become like doues, that make theyr nestes in holes. *Is for Moabs pryde we haue heard of it: she is very hye minded. I know her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arrogancy, & the pryde of her stomacke, sayth the lord: I know (sayeth the Lorde) her indygnacyon, she doeth not right, her wordes are lyes, & they haue not delt truely. Therfore shal there mourning be made for Moab, & euery man shal crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So wil I mourne for thee also, O Jazer, and for thee, O thou vineyarde of Sabamah. Thy vyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, & the braunches of Jazer, but vnto the sea, the destroyer shall breake into thy harueste and grapegathering: myrthe and cheare shalbe taken away from the timbre field, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in ỹ presse, ỹ treder shal haue no stomack to cry: yea, there shal be none to cry vnto him: which afore time were hearde from Hezebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whiche lifted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, ỹ bullocke of three yere olde shall goe mourning. The waters also of Nemrim shall bee dryed vp. Moreouer, I will make Moab cease, sayth the lord, from the offringes and censyng, that she hath made vnto her Gods in high places. Wherfore my hearte mourneth for Moab lyke a croude, playing an heauy song: and for ỹ mens sake of the brickewall my hearte mourneth also, euen as a pype ỹ pypeth a doleful song: for they shalbe very few, and destroyed. *All heades shalbe shaue, & al beardes clypped of, al handes boũd, and loines girded about with sackecloth. Upon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab there shalbe lamentable mourning. For I wil breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessel, saith the Lord: O how is she destroyed? O how mourneth she? O howe doeth Moab hang downe her head, and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughyng stocke, and had in derision of al thẽ that be roumde about her. *For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, the enemy shall come flying as an Eagle: and spread hys wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and win the strong holdes. Then the myghtye mens hearttes in Moab shalbe lyke the hearte of a woman trauelyng with chylde. And Moab shalbe made so desolate, that she shall no more bee a people: because she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. *Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon thee, O Moab, sayeth the lorde. Whoso escapeth the feare shal fall in the pyt, and whoso getteth out of the pit, shalbe take in the snare. For I wil bring a yere of visitacion vpon Moab, sayeth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shal stand vnder the shadowe of Hezebon: for there shal goe a fyre out of Hezebon, & a flame from Sion, and shal burne vp ỹ proude people of Moab, and the top of those seditious children.

Woe be vnto thee, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe: yea, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe led awaye captiue. yet at the last, will I bring Moab out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the lord. Thus farre is of ỹ plage of Moab.

The.xlix.Chapter.

The worde of the lord agaynst the Ammonites, & agaynste Idumea, Damascus, Cedar, and Elam.

AS concerning the *Ammonites, Thus the Lorde sayeth: Hathe Israel no children, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kyng then taken Gad in? Wherfore doth his people dwell in hys cities? Beholde therefore, the tyme cummeth, sayeth the Lorde, that I will bringe a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shalbe layed on a desolate heape, and her cities brente vp: and the Israelites shalbe Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayeth the lord. Heseb̃ shal mourne: for Ay shalbe rooted oute of the grounde, sayeth the lord. The cities of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrd themselues with sackeclothe, they shal mourne, & rũne about the walles, for theyr king shall bee ledde away prisoner: yea his priestes and prynces with hym.

Wherfore

B Wherefore trustest thou in the valley thy valley hath flowed awaye, O thou fearce doughter, and thinkest thou that thou art so safe, by reasō of thy treasure, that no man shal come to thee? Beholde, I will bryng a feare vpon thee, sayth the Lord god of hooستes, from al those that be about thee: so that ye shalbe scattered euery man from an other, and no manne shal gather them together agayn that be fled. But after that I wil bring the Ammonites also oute of captiuitie agayne.

For I wil bryng destruction vpon Esau: yea, & the day of his visitacion. If ỳ grape gatherers came vpō the, should they not leaue some grapes? yf the night robbers came vpon the, should they not take so much as they thoughte were ynough? But I wil make Esau bare, and Heare therfore: her yong mē shall fall in ỳ stretes, & al her men of war shalbe taken away in ỳ tyme, saith ỳ lord of hostes. Flee, Flee, get you soone awaye, crepe into caues, that ye may dwell there, O ye inhabiters of Hasor, sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon hath holden a counsell concernyng you, and concluded hys deuyce agaynst you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynste yonder ryche & carelesse people (sayeth the lorde) whiche hathe neyther gates nor dooze barres, but dwel alone. Theyr Camels shalbee stollen, and the droues of theyr cattel driuen awaye. Moreouer, those will I scatter towarde all the wyndes, and bryng them to destruccyon: yea, and that thorow theyr owne families, saith the Lorde. Hasor also shalbe a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlastynge wyldernesse: so that no bodye shall dwell there: and no manne shall haue there hys habytacyon.

These are the wordes that the lorde spake to the Prophete Jeremye, concernyng * Elam, in the beegynnyng of the reygne of zedekiah kyng of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength: & vpon Elam I wil bryng the foure wyndes, from the foure quarters of heauē, and wil scatter them agaynste the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.

For I wil cause Elam to be afrayde of theyr enemyes, and of them that seeke theyr liues: and will bring vpon them ꝑ indignacion of my wrath, saith the lord: And I will persecute them, with the sworde, so long, tyll I haue broughte them to nought. I will set my throne in Elam, I wil destroy both ꝑ king and the princes from thence, sayeth the lord. But in processe of tyme I will bryngе Elam out of captiuitye again, sayth the Lord.

The.l. Chapter.

The prophecyeth the destruccion of Babilon, and the deliuerance of Israel, whiche was in captiuitye.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremye, concernynge Babilon, and the lande of the Caldees: * Preache among the Gentiles, let your voyce be hearde, make a token, crye out, kepe no silence, but saye: Babilon is wonne. Bell is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome.

* yea, theyr gods be broughte to shame, and theyr ymages burste in pieces. For out of the north there doeth come a people agaynst her, which make her lande so waste, that no bodye dwell therein, neyther man, nor beaste: for they flye and departe from thence. * In those dayes and at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israell shall come, they and the chyldren of Juda, weping and makyng haste, and shall seeke the Lorde theyr God. They shal aske the waye to Syon, thither shall they turne theyr faces, saying: Come and we wil cleaue to the lord, in a couenaunt that neuer shalbe broken. My people hath bene a loste * flocke, my shepeheardes haue disceaued them, and haue made them goe astraye vpon the hylles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the litle hil, and forgotten theyr folde. All they that came vpon thē, haue deuoured them: & theyr enemies said: we haue made no faute agaynste them, for they haue displeased the lorde: yea, euen the Lord, whiche is the beauty of theyr ryghteousnes, and that defended theyr fathers. yet shall ye flye from Babilon, and depart out of the land of ꝑ Caldees, and be ye as the rammes that go before ꝑ flocke. * For lo, I wil wake vp an host of people from the northē land, & bring them vpon Babilō: these shal lay sege to it and winne it. Theyr arrowes shal not mysse, lyke as a cunnyng archer shooteth not wrōg. And ꝑ Caldees shalbe spoiled, & al they that spoyle thē, shalbe satisfied saith ꝑ lord, * although ye were so cheerful and glad, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as ꝑ calues in ꝑ grasse, & triumphed ouer thē like ꝑ bulles, when ye had gotten ꝑ victory. Your mothers shalbe sore confoūded, & they that bare you shall come to shame. She shalbe the least set by amōg the nacions: voyde, wasted, and dryed vp. No man shalbe able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but thee shalbe whole desolate. * All they that goe by Babilon, shall stande stil and be abashed, and shall wonder at al her plages. Goe foorth in youre aray agaynste Babilon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes, shoote at her, spare no arowes: for she hath sinned against the Lord. Cry out: vpon her, vpon her, against her roūd about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacyons shall fall, and her walles shall come down: for it shalbe thē vēgeance of the Lord, * yea vengeaunce shalbe taken of

of her, and as she hath doone, so deale ye with her. Roote out ꝑ sowier from Babilon, & him that handleth the sicle in her nest. For feare of the sweorde of the enemy, euery man shall get him to his owne people: & euery man shall flee to his own lande. Israel is a scattered flocke, ꝑ Lyons haue dispersed them. * First the king

Beholde, I speake vnto thee, O thou proude, saith ꝑ lord God of hoostes: for thy day shal come, euen ꝑ time of thy visitacion. And ꝑ proude shal stomble & fal, & no man shal helpe hym vp. I wil burne vp his cities with fyre, & it shal consume al that is round about hym. Thus sayth
F the lord of hoostes: The children of Israell & Iuda, suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuitye, kepe them fast, & wil not let the goe: but theyr auenger and redemer is myghty, whose name is ꝑ lorde of hoostes: he shall mayntain their cause, he shal make ꝑ lād shake, & iudge them ꝑ dwel therin, one with an other. The sweorde shall come vpon the Calders saith the lord, vpō them ꝑ dwel in Babilon, vpon theyr princes, & vpon theyr wisemen. The sweorde vpon their sothsayers: as for those, they shal becom fooles. The sword vpō their worthies, so ꝑ they shal stand in feare. The sweord vpon their horsemen & charrets, & vpon al the cōmen people that dwell vnder the: so that they shal all become like weomen. The sweord vpon their treasure, so ꝑ it shalbe stollen awaye. A droughte vpon their waters, so ꝑ they shalbe dryed vp. For the land worshippeth ymages, & delyteth in strange woonderfull thynges. Therefore shal wilde beastes, Lamia, & Catte of mountaynes, & Estriches, dwel therin, for there shal neuer manne dwell there, neither shal any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Like as God

Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath geuē vpon Babilon, & the deuise that he hath taken vpon the lande of ỹ Caldees. The least among the people shall teare thē in pieces: & loke what pleasaunt thing they haue, they shal laye it waste. The noyse at ỹ winning of Babilon sh all moue the earth, & therye shalbe heard among ỹ Gentils.

The .li. Chapter.

How Babylon should be ouerthrowen. Jeremy geueth his boke to Saraias.

THus hath the lorde saide: *Behold, I wyl rayse vp a perilous winde against Babilon, and her citizens that beare euyl wyll against me. I wyl also send into Babilon fāners to fan her out, & to destroye her land, for i ỹ day of her trouble thei shalbe about her on euery side. Moreouer, ỹ lorde hath said vnto the bowmen, & to them ỹ clime ouer the walles in brest plates. Ye shall not spare her yonge mē: kyl down al her hoste. Thus ỹ slayne shal fal down in ỹ land of ỹ Caldees, & the wounded in the stretes. *As for Israel & Juda, thei shal not be forsakē of their god, of the lord of hostes, for ỹ holy one of Israels sake: no, though they haue filled al their lād ful of sin. *Flye away frō Babilon, euery man saue his life, ỹ ye be not roted out with her wickednes: for the time of the Lordes vengeaunce is come: yea, he will rewarde her agayne. Babylon hathe bene in the Lordes hand, *a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken: therefore, are they out of theyr wittes: *But sodenlye is Babilon fallen, and destroyed.

Mourne for her, bringe playsters for her woundes, yf she maye paraduenture be healed agayne. We would haue made Babilon whole, say they: but she is not recouered. Therefore wyll wee lette her alone, and goe euerye manne to hys owne countrey. For her iudgement is come into heauē, & is gone vp to ỹ cloudes. The lord hath brought foorth our righteousenes: And therfore come on, we wil shew Sion ỹ worke of the lord our god. Make sharpe the arrowes, and multiply your shildes: *for the lord shall raise vp the spirite of the kyng of the Medes, which hath already a desyre to destroy Babilon. This shalbe the vengeaūce of his temple. Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babilon, make youre watch strong, set your men in araye, yea, hold priuy watches: & yet for all that shall the lord go forth with the deuice which he hath taken vpon them ỹ dwel in Babylon. O thou that dwellest by ỹ greate waters, O thou that hast so great treasure and riches, thine end is come, and ỹ rekenynge of thy winnynges. * The lord of hostes hath swoorne by himself, that he will ouerwhelme the with mē, like grashoppers in number: which with a cōrage shal crye, alarum, alarum against the. *Yea euen the Lorde of Hooستes, that wyth hys powēr made the yearth, with hys wysedome prepared the rounde worlde, and wyth hys discretion spreade oute the heauens. Assone as he letteth hys voyce bee heard, the waters in the ayre waxe fearce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the yearth. He turneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bringeth the windes out of theyr secrete places: yf they be estemed by theyr wysedome, all mē are become fooles. *Cōfounded be al the casters of images, for the thynge that they make is but diseite, & hath no breath. Vayne is it, and an erronyous woorke: and in the tyme of visitacion it shal perishe.

Neuertheles, the portion of Jacob is C none suche: but he that made all thynges, whose name is the Lorde of Hooستes, he is the rodde of hys enherytaunce. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapons for warre: for with the haue I broke the people in pieces, and with the haue I destroyed kingdomes. Throughe the I haue beaten to poulder horse and horseman: yea, the charrettes and suche as sat vpon them. Thorow the haue I broken man and woman, old and yonge, bacheler and mayden. Thorough the haue I destroied the shepeheard and his flocke, the housebandman & his cattel the princes and his rulers. Therfore wil I rewarde the citye of Babilon, and all her citizens the Caldees, wyth all the euil which they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye your selues shal se it, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyl, sayeth the Lorde, thou ỹ destroyeste al landes: I wyll stretche out my hand ouer the, & cast the down from ỹ stony rockes: & wil make the a brent hyl, so that nether corner stones, nor pinacles, nor fou-dacions of stones shalbe take̅ any moze out of the: but waste & desolate shalt þ̄ lye foz euermoze, sayeth the Lozde. Sette vp a token in the lande, blow the trompettes amonge the Heathen, prouoke the nacyons againste her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Mynni, and Ascanes against her: Set the prince against her, bringe as greate a sorte of terrible hozses againste her, as yf they were grashoppers. Prepare against them the people of the Medes with their kinges, princes, and all theyr chiefe rulers: yea, and the whole land that is vnder him. The lande also shall shake and bee afrayde when the deuice of the Lozde shall come forth against Babilon: to make the lande of Babilon so wast that noman shal dwel anye moze therein. The worthies of Babilon shal leaue the battaile, and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled them, they shalbe like wemen. Theyr dwellyng places shalbe brente vp, theyr barres shalbee broken. One purseuaunt shal mete an other: yea, one post shal come by another to bryng the king of Ba-D bylon tidynges: that his citie is taken in on euerye syde, the foordes occupyed, the fennes brente vp, and the souldyers sore afrayde. For thus sayeth the lord of hostes, the God of Israell: the daughter of Babilon hath bene in her tyme, lyke as a threshyng floore, but shortly shall her harueste come. Nabuchodonozor þ̄ king of Babilō hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessell. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and filled his bellye with my delicates: he hath caste me out, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thynge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babilon, saith the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea, and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lozde: Beholde, I wyll

O, howe was Selach wonne & O, howe was the glory of the whole lād take? how happeneth it, þ̄ Babilon is so wondred at amōg þ̄ heathē? The sea is risen ouer Babylon, & hathe couered her with his greate waues. Her cities are layed wast, þ̄ land lieth vnbuilded & voide: it is a lād wher no man dwelleth, & where no man trauaileth thorough. Wherfore, * I wil visit Bel at Babilon: & the thing þ̄ he hath swalowed vp, þ̄ same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The gentiles also shall runne no moze vnto him: yea, & the walles of Babilon shall fall. O my people, * come out of Babilon, that euery man may saue his life from the fearful wrath of the lord. Ber not faint herted, and feare not at euerye rumoure þ̄ shalbee heard in the lande: for euery yeare bringeth newe tydinges, and in the yere folowinge newe tidinges, and robbyng in the land, & lorde vpon lorde. And lo, the time commeth that I will visit the images of Babilon, & the whole lande shall be confounded: yea, & her slaine shal lye in the middest of her. Heauen & earth with al that is therein, shal reioyce ouer Babilō, when þ̄ destroyers shal come vpon her from þ̄ north, saith þ̄ lorde.
* Like as Babilon hath beaten down and F slaine many out of Israell, so shall there fal Jere. 51. manye, and bee slayne in all her kingdome. Ye that haue escaped the sweord, hast you, stand not stil, remember the lord afarre of, and thinke vpon Jerusalem: for we wer ashamed to heare þ̄ blasphemies, our faces were couered w̄ shame, because the straūge aleauntes came into þ̄ sanctuary of þ̄ lord. Wherfore behold, (saith the lord) þ̄ time cōmeth þ̄ I wil visit the images of Babilon, & through þ̄ whole land they shal mourne & fall. * Though Babilon climed vp into Jere. 51. heauen and kept her power on hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lozde. A piteous crye shalbe heard from Babilō, and a greate miserye from the lande of the Caldees, when the lord destroyeth them, & when he driueth oute the hye stomake and proud boasting, wher with they haue bene as furious as the waues of great waterfloudes, & made great crakes wyth theyr wordes. For þ̄ destroiers shall come vpon her (euē vpō Babilō) which shal take their worthies, & breake their bowes: for god is disposed to auenge himself vpon thē, & sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (saith the lord) I will make theyr princes, their wise men, their chiefe rulers, and all their worthies dronkē: so that thei shal slepe an euerlasting slepe, & neuer wake. Thus sayth þ̄

kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.
O Moreouer, thus saith the lord of hostes.
The thicke wal of Babilon shalbe broken, and her hie gates shalbe brent vp. And the thing that the Gentils and the people haue wrought w̄ great trauaile & labour, shal come to nought, and be consumed in ꝑ fire.

This is the charge that Jeremye gaue vnto Saraiah the sone of Neriah, ꝑ sonne of Maaliah, when he went to warde Babilon with zedekiah the kynge of Juda, in the fourth yere of his reygne. Now thys Saraiah was a peaceable prynce. Jeremy wrote in a booke, all the miserye that shoulde come vpon Babilon: yea, and all these sermons that bee written agaynste Babilon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou cummeste vnto Babilon, see ꝑ thou reade all these woordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to roote oute this place, so that neyther people noꝛ cattel shall dwell there any moꝛe, but to lye waste foꝛ euer: and when thou haste read oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and caste it in the myddeste of Euphrates, and say: Euen thus shall Babilon synke and be thrust down with the burthen of trouble, that I wyll bryng vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are ꝑ Prophecinges of Jeremye.

The.lii. Chapter.

De repeateth the taking of zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Caldees, zedekias sonnes are killed before his face, and his eyes put out. The citie is burned. The temple is spoiled & robbed. They that were left in Jerusalē, are caried to Babilon: king Jehoahaz is brought foꝛth of prison, & led lyke a kynge.

Edekyah was * one and twenty yeare olde, when he was made kynge, and he reygned a leuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Libna. He liued wyckedly before ꝑ lord euen as Jehoakym dydde. Foꝛ the Lorde was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe, tyll he hadde caste them out of hys presence. And zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babylon. * But in the nynth yeare of his reigne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth: it happened that Nabuchodonoꝛ the king of Babilō with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besegyng of the citie endured vnto the eleuenth yere of king zedekiah. * And in the fourth moneth, the ninth daye of the moneth, there was so greate hunger in the citye, that there wer no moꝛe vitailes foꝛ the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake away, and fled out of the citie by nyghte throughe the waye of the poꝛte, betwene the two walles by the kinges garden. Nowe the Caldees hadde coumpassed the citie round about, yet wēt these men theyꝛ waye toward the wildernesse. And so the Caldees folowed vpon them and toke zedekiah the king in the fielde of Jericho, when his hoost was runne frō hym. So they caried the kyng away prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babilō in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. The king of Babilon also caused zedekiahs sōnes to be slaine before his face: yea, and put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde with two cheines, to be caryed vnto Babilon: and lette hym lye in prysone, tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfte moneth, in the ninth yere of Nabuchodonoꝛ kynge of Babilon, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, and the king of Babilons seruaūtes, came vnto Jerusalem, and brente vp the house of the Lorde. He brente vp also the kinges palace, all the houses, & al the goꝛgeous buildinges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoste of the Caldees that wer with the chiefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem roundeabout.

As foꝛ the poore people and suche folke as yet was left in the cytie: which also were fallen to the kyng of Babilon, yea, and what people as yet remayned, Nabuzaradan the chyefe captayne caryed them awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey, dydde Nabuzaradan the chyefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and fieldes. The Caldees also brake the brasen pillers that were in the house of the Lorde: yea, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caried all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They tooke away also the caldrons, shouels, sleshookes, sprynkelers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupyed in the seruyce: w̄ the bases, colepannes, sprinckelers, pottes, cādelsticks, spones, & cuppes, wherof some were of golde, & some of syluer. The chiefe captayne toke also the two pillers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnderꝑ seat, * which king Salomō made in the house of ꝑ lord: and all the vessell con-

fyned so much metal ꝑ it might not be welded. For euery piller was .xviii. cubites hie: and the rope that wente aboute it, was twelue cubites, and foure fingers thicke & rounde. Nowe vpon the rope wer brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was fiue cubites hie: & vpon ꝑ knoppes wer whopes, and pomgranates round about of cleane brasse. After this maner were bothe the pillers fashioned with the pomgranates, whereof there were an hundred and .xcvi. whiche hanged vpon the whopes roundeabout. The chiefe captaine also tooke Sariah the hie priest, and Sophoniah that was chiefe nexte him, and the .iii. kepers of the treasury. He toke out of the city a chamberlaine whiche was a captaine of ꝑ souldyers, and seuen men that wer the kynges seruauntes which wer found in the city: & Scypher, a captaine ꝑ vsed to muster ꝑ mē of warre, with three score mē of the countrey that were taken in the citye. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine toke and caried them to the king of Babilō vnto Reblath, and the kyng of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the land of Hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of his own lād. This is ꝑ summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonozor led awaye captiue. In the seuenth yere of hys reygne, he caried away of the Jewes, three thousande and three & twenty. In the .xviii. yere, Nabuchodonozor caried away from Jerusalem .viii. hundred, thyrtie and two persones. In the .xviii. yere of Nabuchodonozor, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, toke awaye seuen hundred foure tye and fiue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousande and and .vi. hundred. In the .xxiii. yere after ꝑ Jeoakim the king of Juda was caried awaye, in the .xxv. daye of the .xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babilon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jeoakim the king of Juda hys pardon, and let him out of prison, and spake louingly to him. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kinges that wer with him in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prisō, yea, and he did eat with him all his life lōg. And he had a continual liuing geuen him of the king of Babilon, euery day a certain thing allowed him, all the dayes of his life vntill he died.

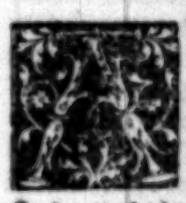
It happened after Israell was brought into captiuitey, & Jerusalē destroied, that Jeremy the prophet sat weping, & sorowfully bewailed Jerusalē, & sighing and houlyng with an heuy & wofull heart, sayde.



Las, howe sitteth the citye so desolate, that sometyme was full of people? Howe is she becōme lyke a wyddowe* whiche was the lady of all nations? Howe is she brought vnder tribute, that ruled all landes? She weepeth sore in the night, so ꝑ the teares runne downe her cheekes: for among all her louers, there is none ꝑ geueth her any cōfort: * yea, her nexte frendes trāsgresse against her, and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, because she was defiled: & for seruing so many straūge goddes, she dwelleth now among the heathen. She findeth no rest, all they ꝑ persecuted her, toke her in straite places, wher she could not escape. The stretes of Sion mourne, because no mā cōmeth no more to ꝑ solēne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her priestes make lamētacio, her maydens are carefull: & she her selfe is in great heauines. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, & her enemies haue prospered, because the lord hath chastened her for her great wyckednes: * her childrē are led awaye captiue before their enemy. All ꝑ beuty of ꝑ daughter of Sio, is away: her princes are become like hartes that finde no pasture. They are driuen away before their enemy, so ꝑ they haue no more power. Nowe dothe Jerusalem remember the tyme of her misery and disobedience: yea, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in times paste, seyng her people is brought downe through the power of theyr enemy, and there is noma for to helpe her, her enemies sād loking at her, and laugh her Sabboth dayes to scorne. Jerusalem hathe sumed euer more & more, therefore is she come in decaye. All they ꝑ had her in honor, despise her: for they haue sene her filthinesse. yea, she sigheth, & is ashamed of her selfe. Her skirtes are defiled, she remembred not what woulde folowe: therefore is her fal so wonderful, and ther is noman to comfort her. O Lorde, consyder my trouble, for mine enemie hathe the vpper hand: The enemy hath put his hand to teal the precious thynges that she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the heathen in to out of the Sanctuary: *whom thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion. *All her people seke their bread wyth heuynes, & loke what precious thyng euery man hath, that gyueth he for meate to saue hys lyfe. Consydre O Lorde, and se howe vyle I am become. Haue ye no regard, O al ye that go forebye: beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwyth the lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearefull wrath. From aboue hath he sente downe a fyre into my bones, & it burneth them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet, and throwen me wyde open: he hathe made me desolate, so that I must euer be mourning. The yoke of my transgressiõ is come at the last, wyth hys hande hath he taken it vp, and put it about my necke. My strengthe is gone: the lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, whereout I can not quyte my selfe. The lord hath destroyed all the myghty men, that were in me: He hath proclamed a feast, to slaughter all my best men. The lord hath troden downe ỹ daughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse. *Therfore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water: for the comforte that shoulde quycken me, is farre from me. My chyldren are dryuen awaye: for why? the enemy hath gotten the vpperhande. Syon casteth oute her handes, and there is no man to comfort her. The lorde hath laied the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominaciõ in the myddest of them. *The Lorde is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked his countenaunce vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and consydre my heuynes. My maidens & my younge mẽ are led away into captiuite, I called for my louers (but they beguled me), for my prestes & coũselers, but they perysshed: euen whyle they soughte for meate to saue their liues. *Consydre (O lord) howe I am troubled, my woumbe is disquieted, my herte turneth aboute in me, (and I am full of bitternesse) because I rebelled stubburnely. The sweard hurteth me yͤ out, and within I am lyke vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none ỹ wyl comfort me. Al mine enemies haue hearde of my trouble and are glad therof, because thou hast done it: and ỹ hast broughte forth the tyme whyche thou calleddest, when they also shall be lyke vnto me. From the shal come all their aduersitye, thou shalt plucke the away euẽ as thou hast plucked me, because of al my wickednes. For my sorowe is very greate, and my herte is heuy.

The .ii. Chapter.

ALas, *howe hath the lorde darkened the doughter of Syon so sore in hys wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he hath caste it downe from heauen, vnto the earth. Howe happeneth it, ỹ he remembred not his owne *foote stoole when he was angry? The Lorde hath caste downe all the habytacyons of Jacob wout any fauoure: all the strong places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in hys wrath, and throwen them downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her prynces hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indygnacyon he hathe broken all the horne of Israell: he hath withdrawẽ his ryght hand from the enemy, yea, a flame of fire is kyndled in Jacob, & hath cõsumed vp al roũde about. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy: he hath fastened hys ryghte hande as an aduersary: & euery thyng that was pleasaũt to se, he hath smytẽ it downe. He hath poured oute hys wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syõ. The lorde is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israell and all hys palaces: yea all hys stronge holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda wyth muche sorowe and heuynesse. *Her tabernacle (whyche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroied: her hye solemne feastes hath he put downe. The lord hathe brought it so to passe, that the hye solemne feastes and Sabbothes in Syõ are cleane forgotten. In hys heuye displeasure hath he made the kynge & prestes to be despised. The lorde hath forsaken hys owne aulter, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarye: and hath gyuen the walles of their towres into the hãdes of the enemy.

Their enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solemne feast daye. The lorde thoughte to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Syõ, he spread out hys lyne, and drewe not in hys hande, tyl he had destroyed them. Therfore moume the turrets and the broken walles together. Her gates are sonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken, and smitten in sondre, *her kynges & pryuces are caried awaye to the gentyles. They haue neyther lawe nor prophetes, nor yet any vysion frõ the lorde. The senatours of the doughter of Syon sit vpon the grounde in sylence: they haue strawed asshes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues wyth sackcloth.

Sanctuarye of the lorde? Yonge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde: my maydens & yonge men are slayne ꝓ the swerde: whom thou in the day of thy wrath-full indignation hast put to death: yea, euen thou hast put them to death, and not spared the. My neighbours that are rounde about me, haste thou called as it were to a feaste daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye lefte behynde. Those that I haue broughte vp and nourysshed, hath my enemye destroyed.

The.iii. Chapter.

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, & led me, yea into darknesse, but not into lyghte. Agaynste me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.
My flesshe and my skynne hath he made olde and my bones hath he bruised. He hath buylded rounde about me, and closed me in wyth gall and trauayle. He hath set me in darknesse, as they that be deade for euer.
He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out: and hath layed heuye lynkes vpon me.
Though I crye & cal pitcously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my B wayes wyth foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and broken me in pieces, he hath layed me waste altogether.
He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot euen into my reynes.
*I am laughed to scorne of all my people, Jere.20.
they make songes vpon me al the daye long.
He hath fylled me wyth bytternesse, & giuen me wormewood to drinke. He hath smiten my teeth in pieces wyth stones, and rolled me in the duste. He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. O remembre yet my mysery and my trouble, the wormewood & the gall. Yea thou shalt remembre them, for C my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consyder these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercyes that we are not vtterly consumed.
For truly his pytifull compassion hath not ceassed. Newe mercyes shall the Lord shewe vpon the earlye, yea in the day spryng, (O Lord) great is thy faythfulnes. *The lord ꝓ Psal.141

I hope in hym. O howe good is the Lorde vnto the that put their trust in hym, and to the soule that seketh after hym. The good man wyth stylnes and patience, tarieth for the health of the Lorde.
O howe good is it for a man to take the D yoke vpon hym from hys youthe vp? He sytteth alone, he holdeth hym styl, & dwelleth quyetly by hym selfe. He layeth hys face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to Myne eye breaketh my herte because of all the daughters of my cyte. Myne enemyes hunted me out sharpely, lyke a bryde: yea & that without a cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue cast stones vpõ me. They poured water vpõ my heade, then thoughte I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O lozd, out of ꝑ depe pit. Thou hast heard my voice, and hast not turned awaye thyne eares fro my syghyng and cryinge. Thou haste enclined thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayd: feare not. Thou (o lozd) hast maintened the cause of my soule, and hast redemed my G life. O lozd thou hast sene my blasphemers, take ꝑ my cause vpon the. Thou haste well consydered howe they goe about to doe me harme, and that all theyr counselles are agaynste me. Thou haste heardc theyr despytefull wozdes (O Lozd) yea, and al theyr ymaginacions agaynste me.

The lyppes of myne enemyes, and theyr deuises that they take agaynst me, al the day longe. Thou seest also theyr sittyng downe, and theyr ryfing vp: they make theyr songes of nothyng but of me. Rewarde them (O lozd) accozding to ꝑ wozkes of theyr hãdes. Geue them an obstinate hert, euen thy curse. Persecut thẽ (O lozd) with thine indignaciõ, and roote them out from vnder the heauen.

The prayer of Jeremy.

REmembraunce (O Lord)

ritaunce is turned to þ straũgers, come carefull and fatherlesse, & our mothers wiues are rauished in Syon, & the maidens

The booke of the prophete Ezechiel,

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed, and in what place. His offsprynge and offyce. The vysyon of the foure beastes. The vysyon of the wheles: The vision of the throne and of the ymage above the throne.

IT chaunced in the thirty yere, the fyfth daye of the I fourth moneth, that I was among þ prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar:
wher þ heauens opened,
& I sawe a visiõ of God.
Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth, made out the fifth yere of kinge Joachins captiuitie. At the same tyme came the worde of þ lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preast, in the lande of the Chaldeers, by the water of Cobar, *where þ hand Ezech.1.c of the lord came vpõ hym. And I loked, and beholde, a stormye wynde came out of the North wyth a great cloud ful of fyre, which wyth hys glystre lyghtened al round about.
And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an angell, and as

as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, and this was their lykenesse. They were fashyoned lyke a man: sauyng that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges. Their legges were streyght but their feete were lyke bullockes feete, and they glystred as it had ben fayre scoured metall. Under their winges, vpon all the foure corners, they had mẽnes handes. Their faces & their wynges were towarde the foure corners: yet were ꝑ wynges so that one euer touched an other. Whē they went, they turned thē not aboute: but eche one went streyght forward. Furthermore this was the similitude of their faces. * Upon the right syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon ꝑ left syde they had the face of an ore, and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one whē it went, it wēt streyght forward. Where as the spirite led them, thyther they wente, and * turned not about in their going. The fashyon and countenaūce of the beastes, was lyke hote coles of fyre, euē as though burnynge cressettes had ben amonge the beastes: (this was the vision) and ꝑ fyre gaue a glyster, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge. When the beastes went forwarde and backward, one woulde haue thought it had lyghtened. Now whē I had well considred the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, with foure faces also nye vnto the beastes. The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles were formed & made (to loke vpon) as it had ben one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they went all foure and turned them not aboute in their goynges. They were large greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their backes were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. Whē the beastes wente, the wheles went also wt them. And when the beastes lyfte thē selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whyther soeuer the spirite wēt, thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them: for the spirit of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes wēt forth, stode styll or lyft them selues frō the earth, then the wheles also went, stode still, & were lyft vp for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles. Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes, there was a firmament, whiche was fashyoned as it had ben of the mooste pure Chrystall, and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmamente wer their wynges layed abrode, one toward an other, and two wynges couered the body of euery beaste. And when they went forthe, I heard the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great God, and a russhyng together, as it were of an hooste of men. And when they stode still, they lette downe their wynges. Nowe when they stode styll, & had letten down their wynges it thundred in the firmament that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmamēt that was ouer their heades, there was ꝑ fashion of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Upon the seate there sat one lyke a man. * I beheelde hym and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene al of fyre within from his loynes vpwarde. And beneth, when I loked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynyng fyre, that gyueth lyght on euery syde: Yea ꝑ shyne and glyster that lyghtened roūde about, was lyke a raynbow, which in a rayny day appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glory of the lorde appeared. Whē I sawe it, I fel vpō my face, & herkened vnto ꝑ voice of him that spake.

The.ii. Chapter.

The prophet is sent to call the people from their errour.

AND then sayd he vnto me: Stand vp vpon thy feete (O thou son of man) & I wil talke with the. * And as he was communyng with me, the spirite came into me, and set me vp vpon my feete: so that I marked ꝑ thyng that he sayd vnto me. And he sayd: Beholde, thou sonne of man: I will sende thee to the children of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue takē part against me, and are runne away fro me, * both they & their forefathers vnto this daye. Yea, I will sende the vnto a people that haue tough vysages, and stiffe stomackes: vnto whom thou shalte saye on this maner: This the Lorde God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them. * Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neyther be afrayed of their wordes: for prouokers and thornes are with the. Yea, thou dost dwell amonge scorpyons: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lookes, for it is a froward housholde. Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them whether they be obedient or no: for they are obstinate. Therfore, thou D sonne of man, obey thou all thynges that I saye vnto the: and be not thou stykenecked, lyke as they are a stykenecked housholde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I gyue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sente vnto me a hand, wherin was closed Apo.5.a a* boke, and the hande opened it before me, & it was written within and without ful of carefull mournynges: alas, and woe.

The.iii. Chapter.

The prophet beyng fed with the worde of God and with the constaunt boldnesse of the spirite, is sent vnto the people that were in captiuitie. The punyshment of a curate that teacheth not the people their synnes.

Jona.3.a people, they would folow thee. But þ house of Israel will not folowe the for they will not folowe me: yea all the house of Israell haue stykie foreheades and harde heartes.
Ezech.3.b * Beholde, therfore I will make thy face preuayle agaynst their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynste their foreheades: so that thy forehead shall be harder then an Eſay.50.b * Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse and be lesse afrayed of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.
C He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and say on this maner. Thus þ lorde God hath spoke, whether ye heare or heare not. With that þ spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a great russhynge and remouyng of the moost blessed glorie of the Lorde out of his place. I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that russhed one agaynst an other: yea, and the rattyng of the wheles þ were by them, whiche russhynge and noyse was very great.* Nowe when the spirite Ezec.3.a and.c. toke me vp, and catyed me awaye, I wente with an heuy & a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the lorde cõforted me tyght soone. And soun þ begynnyng of þ moneth Ibib, D I came to the prysoners* that dwelt by the Ezec.1.a water of Cobar, and remayned in the place where they were: And so cõtinued I amõg thẽ seuen dayes, beyng very sory. And when the seuen dayes were erspyred, the lord sayd vnto me:* Thou sõne of man, I haue made Ezec.33.a the a watchman vnto the house of Israell, therfore take good heede to the wordes of my mouth, and gyue them warnynge at my commaundement. Yf I saye vnto the con- E cernynge the vngodly man, that (without doubt) he must dy, and thou gyuest him not warning, nor speakest vnto him þ he maye turne from his euill waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodlye man dye in his owne vnrighteousnesse: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne hand. Neuertheles, yf thou gyue warning vnto the wicked and yet he forsake not his vngodlynesse: the shal he dye in his own wickednes but thou hast discharged thy soule. Nowe yf a ryghteous man go from* his righteousnesse, and do Ezec.33.a F the thynge that is euyll: I will laye a stumblynge blocke before hym, and he shall dye, bycause thou hast not gyuen him warnyng: yea, dye shall he in his owne synne, so that the vertue whiche he dydde before shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne hand. Neuertheleſſe yf thou exhortest the ryghteous that he synne not, & so the ryghteous doe not synne: then shal he lyue, bycause he hath receiued thy warnyng, and thou haste discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lord vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: stande vp and go into the felde, that I maye there talke wt thee. So when I had ryſen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Behold the glorie of the lord stode there,* lyke as I sawe it afore by the Ezech.1.a water of Cobar. & Then fell I downe vp- & Ezec.1.a pon my face and the spirite came into me, G whiche set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye and shut thy selfe in thyne house. Behold, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought forth to bynd the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of thẽ. And I will make thy tonge cleaue so to the roote of thy mouth, þ thou shalt be domme, & not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstinate housholde. But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and say: Thus sayeth the lord God: whoso heareth, let him heare: whoso wil not, let him leaue, for it is an obstinat household.

The.iiii. Chapter.

The besyege of the cytie of Jerusalem is sygnyfied. The longe continuaunce of the captiuitie of Israel. An hungre is propheried to come in the captiuitie.

I Thou sonne of man, take a tyle stone and laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cytie of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, how bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, & an hooste of men roũde about it with engins of warre. Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt the & the cytie, in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besiege it, and laye ordinaũce agaynst it to wynne it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appointed, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes. * Neuertheles, I will appointe the a tyme (to put of their synnes) and the noumbre of the dayes: Three hundred and .xc. dayes muste thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel: whe thou hast fulfylled these dayes lye down agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde fourtye dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Juda. * I day for a yere, a day (I saye) for a yere wil I euer lay vpon the. Therfore set nowe thy face against that besieged Jerusalẽ, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophecy agaynst it. Behold, I wil lay chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne thee frõ one side to another, tyl þ hast ended the days of this besiegyng. Wherfore take vnto the wheate, barly, beanes, gromell seed, Millium and fiches, and put these togyther in a vessel, and make the loues of bread thereof, accordynge to the numbre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that þ maist haue bread to eat for three hundred and .xc. dayes. And þ meat that þ eatest shall haue a certayne wayght appointed: namely, twenty sicles euery day. This appointed meate shalt þ eate dayly, from the begynnynge to the ende. Thou shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, þ fyrst parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke dayly, frõ the begynnyng vnto þ end. Barly cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou furst tooste them at a fyre made wyth mans donge, that they may se it. And with that sayd the lorde: Euen thus shal the children of Israel eate their defiled bread in þ myddest of the Gentiles, amonge whom I wil scatter the. Then sayd I: Oh lord God: Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned, for frõ my youth vp vnto this houre, I did neuer eate of a dead carcasse, or of þ whiche was slayne of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth. Wher vnto he answered me, and sayd: well then, I wil graunt the to take cowes donge for the donge of man, and to tooste the bread withall before them. And he sayd vnto me: Beholde, thou sonne of man, * I will mynysshe all the prouision of bread in Jerusalẽ, so that they shal weygh their bread, and eate it with scarcenesse: But as for water, they shal haue a very litle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue nomore bread, nor water, one shalbe destroied wt an other, and vanysh awaye for their wickednesse.

The.v. Chapter.

The ryddle of the heeres, by which is signified the destruccion of the people. The causes of the angre of God towarde the people.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe: namelye a rasoure. I Take that and shaue the heere of thy head and bearde. Then take þ scales and þ weyght, and deuide the heere asondre. And after thou hast accomplysshed the dayes of the siege: burne the thyrd parte thereof in the fyre in the myddest of the cite, and cut þ other thyrd part in peces with a knyfe. * Is for the thyrde parte that remayneth, * Jere.7.f cast it in the wynde, and I will drawe out þ swerde after them. Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesye of it and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre: Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame vpon the whole house of Jsracil. Moreouer thus sayth the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. I set her in the myddest of the heathen, and nacions that are rounde about her: but she hath despised my iudgementes more then the Gentiles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions that lye rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordinaunces, & not walked in my lawes: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: * For so moche as ye haue bene more augmented in numbre of people, then the Heathen that dwel rounde about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynaũces, and ye haue not liued so righteously as the heathen that are rounde about you.

C Therfore thus sayeth the lorde God. I will also come vpon the, I my selfe, I saye: for in the myddest of the will I syt in iudgemẽt in the syght of the heathen, and will handle the of suche a fashyon as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will do from that time forth, and that because of all thyne abhominaciõs. For in thee, fathers * shalbe layne to eate their own sonnes, and ẏ sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a courte will I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte of the will I scattre into all the wyndes. Wherfore as truly as I lyue, (sayth the Lord God) seinge thou haste defiled my Sanctuary, with all maner of abhominacions and with all thy shamefull offences: for this cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neither will I spare the. * One thyrde parte within the shall dye of the pestilence and of hungre: An other thyrde parte shall be slayne downe, rounde aboute the, with the swearde: The other thyrd parte that remayneth, will I scattre abrode towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wil perfourme my indignacion, and set my wrath agaynste them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynste them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruent gelousie haue spoken it. Moreouer, I will make the waste and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwel about the, and in the sight of all them that go by the: so that when I punysshe the in my wrath, in myne angre, and with the plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacio, shame, a gasynge and wondryng stocke, amonge the Heathen that lye about the. Euẽ I the Lorde haue spokẽ it, and it shal come to passe, when I shote among them the perilous dartes of hungre, whiche shalbe but death. Yea, therfore shall I shote them, because I will destroy you: I will * encrease hungre, & minish all the prouision of bread amonge you. Plages & misery will I sende you: yea, and wilde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudeshed dryue shall come vpon you, & the swearde will I bryng ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The. vi. Chapter.

He shewth that the people shall be plaged for the synne of ydolatrye. He prophesieth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, & their deliueraunce. The destruction of the frowarde is prophesied.

AND the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes of Israell, & thou mayest prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the lord God spoken to the mountaines, hylles, valleyes & dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, will bynge a swerd ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I will cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Youre slayne men will I laye before your goddes, and the dead carcalles of the children of Israell will I cast before their ydolles: your bones will I destroye rounde aboute your aulters & dwellyng places. The cytes shalbe desolate, the hyll chapels layed waste: your aulters destroyed and broken, your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane rooted out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, how that I am the Lord. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swearde, will I leaue amonge the Gemyles, for I will scattre you amonge the nacions. And they ẏ escape of you shal thynke vpon me among the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaythfull hearte of theyrs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me, I will breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theyrs, that commyt fornicacion with their ydols. Then shall they be ashamed and displeased with theyr selues, for the wickednesses and abhominacions whiche they haue done: and shall learne to knowe that I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the lord spake, to bryng suche misery vpon them.

The Lord said more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe with thy feet, and say: Woe worth all the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them they shall perysshe with the swerde, with hungre and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shall dye of the pestilence, he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde: and the other that remayne and that are besieged, shall dye of hungre. Thus will I satysfy my wrathfull displeasure vpon the. And so shall ye learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, when youre slayne men lye amonge your ydolles, and about your aulters, vpon al hye hylles and toppes of mountaines, among al grene trees, amonge all thycke okes, euen in the places where they dyd sacrifice to all their ydols. I will stretch myne hande out vpon them, and will make the lande waste. So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernes of Deblothah forth, thorow al their habitacions, to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The.vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israell shall sodaynly come. The cause of the destruccion therof. The prophet is cõmaunded to shewe the summe of the euils that are at hand.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: The I cal, O thou sonne of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende commeth vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verely the ende cõmeth vpon all the foure corners of ỹ lande. But nowe shall the ende come vpon the, for I wil sẽde my wrath vpon the, and wil punish the according to thy wayes, and reward the after al thyne abhominacions. *Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther will I spare the, but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shal ye knowe that I am the lord. Thus sayeth the lord God: Behold, one mischief & plage shall come after an other, ỹ end is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for the: beholde, it is come alreadi, thy destruccion is earlye come agaynst the, that dwellest in the land. The tyme is at hande, the daye of seditcyon is harde by, and ỹ crye shal not be as ỹ soũdynge agayn of the mountaynes. Therfore I will shortely poure out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfill my wrath vpõ the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recõpence the all thy abhominacions. *Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther will I spare the, but rewarde the after thy wayes: & thine abhominacions shalbe punished in ỹ myddes of the, to lerne you for to know how ỹ I am the Lord that smyteth. Behold, the daye is here, the daye is come, ỹ houre is run out, the rod flourysheth, pryde wareth grene, malicious violẽce is growen vp, & the vngodly waxen to a staffe. None of them shall remayne ouer, none of their ryches, not one of their lead, & no lamẽtacion shalbe made for the. The tyme cõmeth, the day draweth nye. *Whoso byeth, let him not reioyse: he ỹ selleth, let hym not be sory: for why? Trouble shall come in the myddest of them al: so that the seller shal not come agayne to the thing that he solde, although their lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophecye was preached vnto al the people, none returned from their synne, and noman toke strength to hym agaynst his wyckednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe, & make you all ready, but noman shall go to the batail, for I am wroth with al the whole multitude. The swearde shalbe without, pestilence and hũgre within: so that whoso is in the felde shalbe slayne with the swerde: & he that is in the citie *shall perysh with hũgre and pestilence. And suche as escape, and flee frõ among them, shall be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in ỹ feld: euery one shalbe afrayed, because of his owne wyckednesse. All handes shall be let downe, and al knees shalbe weake as the water: they shall gird them selues with sackecloth, feare shall fall vpon them, their faces shal be confounded, *and their heades balde: their siluer shall they cast forth in the stretes, and their golde shalbe despised: *Yea, their siluer & golde maye not deliuer them, in the daye of the fearfull wrath of the lorde. They shall not satisfie their hungrye soules, neither fyl their emptye bellyes therwith. For it is become their owne decaye thorow their wyckednes. *And their bewtyfull costly ornament that God had ordeyned to be their greate glory, in it they haue set vp abhominacions vnto their ydols. For this cause will I make the & it to be abhorred. Moreouer I wyll gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoiled: and to the wycked for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face wil I turne from them, my treasury shalbe defiled: for ỹ theues shal go in to it, & vnspẽde it. Make a chayne, for the lande is whole defiled with vnryghteous iudgemẽt of innocent bloud, and the cyte is full of violent oppression. Wherfore I will bryng the mooste cruell tyraunte frõ amonge the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and their sanctuarye shalbe defiled. When this trouble commeth, they shall seke peace, but they shal haue none. One myschefe and sorowe shall folow another, and one rumoure shal come after an other. * Thẽ shal they seke visiõs in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the preistes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the princes shalbe clothed with heuynesse, and ỹ handes of the people in the lande shall trẽble for feare. I wil do vnto them after their owne wayes, accordyng to their owne iudgementes will I iudge them, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The Prophecie

The. viii. Chapter.

An appearance of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought to Jerusalem in the spirite. The Lord sheweth the prophet the idolatries of ỹ house of Israel, and chiefly of the preastes.

A IT happened, that in the syxt yere, the fyfth daye of the syxt moneth, I sat in my house, and the lordes of the counsayl of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lord God fell euen there vpon me. And as Ezech. 1. c I loked vp, * I sawe as it were a lykenesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde: and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon.

B * This similitude stretched out an hande & Ezech. 3. b and. 11. d. toke me by the heery lockes of my head, and the spirite lyft me vp betwixt heauen and earth: and brought me in a vision to Jerusalem into the entry of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the North: there stode an ymage with whom he that hath all thynges in his power, was very wroth. And beholde, the glorie of the God of Israell was in the same place: euen * as I hadde sene it afore Ezech. 1. a in the fielde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lift vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North. Then lyft I vp myne C eyes towarde the North: & beholde, beside the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacio in the entrynge in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seest ỹ what these do? Seest thou the greate abhominacions that the house of Israell committeth in this place to dryue me frō my sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominacios. And with ỹ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall. The D sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, dygge thorow ỹ wall. And whē I dygged thorow the wal: behold there was a doore. And he sayd vnto me: go thy way in and loke what wycked abhominacions they do here.

So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beastes, all ydols and abhominacions of ỹ house of Israell, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before the Exo. 11. d Nu. 11. d ymages * lxx. lordes of the counsel of ỹ house of Israell, and in the myddl of them stode Jaazanith the sōne of Saphan. And euery one of them had a censour in his hand, and out of the incense there went a smoke, as it E had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Job. 22. b Esa. 29. c thou sonne of man, haste thou sene what the Jere. 23. d Ezech. 9. c senatours of ỹ house of Israel do secretely, euery one in his chambre? * For they saye: Tushe, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lord regardeth not the world. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mourning for Thamus. Than sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this thou sonne of man? Turne the about, & thou shalte se yet grea- F ter abhominacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: And behold, at the porte of ỹ Lordes house, betwyxte the fore entrye and the aultar, there were xxv. men that turned their backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towarde the East, and these worshypped the Sunne. And he sayd vnto G me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? thynketh the house of Juda that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacions here? Should they fyll the lande full of wickednesse, & vndertake to prouoke me to angre? Yea and purposely to caste vp their noses vpon me? Therefore will I also do some thynge in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, neyther will I spare them. * Yea and though they crye * Prou. 1. c Jere. 11. d and. 14. d Ezech. 8. d in myne eares with a loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The. ix. Chapter.

The destruccion of idolaters, & the conuersacion of ỹ righteous. They that shall saued are marked. They that are vnmarked are slayne. A cōplaynt of the Prophet for the destruccion of the people.

HE cryed also with a loude voyce I in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the cytie, euery man with his weponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there syx men out of the strete of the vpper port towarde ỹ north, and euery man a weapon in his hāde to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on hym a lynnen rayment, and a writers ynkhorne by his syde. These went in, and stode beside the brasen aulter: B for the glorie of the Lorde was gone awaye from the * Cherub whiche was vpon hym, Exo. 25. d and was come down to the threshold of the Num. 9. d house: and he called the man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers ynkhorne by his side, and the Lorde sayde vnto hym: go thy waye thorowe the cite of Jerusalem, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of the that mourne and are sory for all the abhominacions that be done therin. And to the other he sayde, ỹ I might heare.

Iud.1.a. *Go ye after hym thorowe the cytie, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: kyll, and destroye both olde men and ponge, maydens, childre and wyues. But as for those, that haue the 1.Pet.4.c beganne at the elders, which were in the tẽple for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defiled the temple, & killed the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth.

So they went out, and slue downe thorowe the cytie. Nowe when they had done the slaughter and I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed sayinge: O Lorde God wilt thou then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy sore displeasure that ꝑ hast Ezec.7.a. vpon thẽ, myne eye shall not ouerse them: neuther wil I spare thẽ, but wil recompence their wickednesse vpõ their heades. And behold, ꝑ man that had the lynen raymẽt vpõ him, & the writers vnkhorne by his side, told all the matter how it happened, & sayd: lord, as ꝑ hast cõmaunded me, so I haue done.

The.x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke hote burnyng coles out of the myddle of ꝑ wheles & of ꝑ Cherubins, in tokẽ of ꝑ burning of Ierusalem. A rehearsal of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubins.

I AND as I loked, behold, in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins, there appered the similitude of a stoole Exo.24.a. of Saphir vpon them: *Then sayd he that sat therin, to him that had the lynen raymẽt vpõ him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thyne hande full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubins, and cast them ouer the cytie. And he crept in, that I myght se. Nowe the Cherubins stode vpon the tyght syde of the house when the man went in, and the cloude Esa.7.a. filled the inner courte. *But the glorie of ꝑ Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshoulde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glorie: Yea, and the sounde of the cherubins wynges was hearde into the forecourte, like as it had bene the voyce of the almyghtye God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the mã that was clothed in lynnen, to go and take the hote coles from ꝑ myddest of the wheles whiche were vnder the Cherubins: he went & stode besyde the wheles.
Then the one Cherub reached forthe his 13 hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that had on the linen rayment in his hande: whyche toke it, and went out. And vnder ꝑ wynges of the Cherubins there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubymmes, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles wer (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Tharsis: yet, (vnto the syght) they were al foure of one fashion, as yf one whele had bene in an other.
C When they went forth, they went all foure togyther, not turnyng about in their going. But where the firste went, thither went they after also, so that they turned not about in their goinge. Their whole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr handes and winges yea, and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. *Euery one of them had Ezech.1.b foure faces, so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the second of a man, the thirde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe when the Cherubins went, the wheles went with them: and when the Cherubins shoke their winges to lyft them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behinde, but were with them also. Shortely when they stode, these stode also. And when they were lyfted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.
D *Then the glorie of the Lorde was lyfte Ezec.11.b and.14.a vp from the threshould of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flackered with their wynges, and lyfte them selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the eastesyde of the porte that is in the house of the Lord. So the glorie of the Lord was vpon them. This is the beast ꝑ I saw vnder ꝑ God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one foure winges, and vnder their wynges, as it were mens hãdes. Now the figure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of thẽ. Euery one in his goinge went strayght forwarde.

The

The.xi. Chapter.

Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agaynst these he prophecieth, shewynge them how they shalbe disparied abrode. The reuynge of the herte commonly of God, otherwyse can we not walke in his commaundementes. He threatenyth them that leane vnto their owne counsels, MOreouer, the spirite of the Lorde lift me vp, and brought me vnto the east porte of ꝑ Lordes house. And beholde, there were .xxv. men vnder ꝑ dore, among whom I sawe Iaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sone of Banaiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayd the lorde vnto me: Thou son of man, these men ymagine mischefe, and a wycked counsayle take they in this cytie, sayynge: Tushe, there is no destruccion at hande, let vs builde houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesshe.

Therfore shalte thou prophecie vnto them: yea, prophecye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the lord: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israell) and I knowe the ymaginacions of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered i thys cytie, and filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on ꝑ grounde in this cytie, are the flesshe, and this cytie is the cauldron: * But I wil bringe you out of it: Ezec.24.a & 28.a.26.c & ye haue feared the swearde, & I wyl bring a swearde ouer you, sayth the lorde God. I will driue you out of this cytie, and delyuer you into youre enemyes hand, and will condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all ꝑ coastes of Israel. I wil be auenged of you: to lerne you to knowe that I am the lord. This cytie shall not be youre cauldron, neyther shal ye be ꝑ flesh therin: but in the coastes of Israel will I punysshe you, ꝑ ye maye knowe that I am the Lord: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte hys Leui.18.a. lawes: * but haue done after the customes Deut.12.d of the heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

C Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Banaiah dyed. Then fel I downe vpō my face & cried with a loude voyce, sayynge: O Lord God, wilt thou the vtterly destroy all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: thou sonne of man, thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the whole house of Iuda whiche dwell at Ierusalem, saye: Withdrawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gyue vs in possession. Therfore tell them: Thus sayth the Lord God: I wil sende you far of among the Gentiles, and scattre you amōg the nacions, and I will halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tel them also, thus sayth the lorde God: I wil gather you agayne out of the nacions, and bryng you from the countryes where ye be scatred, and will gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal come thyther: And they shall take away all their ydoles, & D all their abhominacions from thence. * And Iere.24.c Eze.36.f I wil gyue you one hearte, and I wil plant a newe spirite within your bowels. That stonye hearte wil I take out of youre body, and gyue you a fleshy hearte, that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordynaunces & do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But looke whose hertes are disposed to folowe their abhominacyons & wycked liuynges, those mens dedes will I bring vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Lord God. After this did the Cherubins lyft vp their wynges, and ꝑ wheles went with them, and ꝑ glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of ꝑ Ezech.10.a and.43.a Lord went vp from the middest of the cytie, and stode vpon the mount of the cytie, towarde the East. * But the wynde toke me Ezech.11.a and.43.a vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirit of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea among the prysoners. Then the vision that I had sene, vanysshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prysoners all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had shewed me.

The.xii. Chapter.

The parable of the vessels of the captiuitie. The exposicion of the parable, by whiche the taking of kyng Zedekiah is signified. An other parable wherby the dearthe of hunger and thyrst is signified.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayynge: Thou sonne of man, ꝑ dwellest in the mydst of a froward housI hold: * whiche haue eyes to se, & yet se not: Esay.6.b Mat.13.b Mar.8.b Luk.8.b eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy Gen.12.b Act.7.b Rom.4.b geare readye to flyt, and go forth by fayre daye lyght, that they maye se. Yea, euen in theyr sight shalt thou go from thy place, to an other place: yf peraduenture they wyll consydre, that they be a disobedient housholde. Thy geare that thou hast made redy to flyt withall, shalt thou beare out by fayre daye lyght, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euē in their syght, as a man doth when he flytteth. Digge thorowe the wall, that they may se, & beare

thorowe it the same thynge, that thou tokest vp in theyr sight. In theyr sight ꝯ shalt thou
B beare vpon thy shoulders, and carye it forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israell. Nowe as the lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the geare that I had made readye, broughte I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall wyth my hande: & when it was darke, I toke the geare vpon my shoulders, & bare them out in theyr syght. And in the morning
C came the worde of the lord vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, ꝯ Israel that frowarde household aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell them: Thus sayth the lorde God: This punishmente toucheth the chefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israell that dwell amonge them. Tel them: I am your shewtoken: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you. Ye shall you also, & go into captiuity. *The chefest
*Ier.52.b that is among you, shall lade his shoulders
*Ezech.12.a in the darke, and get hym awaye.
D He shall breake downe the wal, to cary stuffe there thorowe: He shal couer his face ꝯ he se not the grounde wyth hys eyes: *Myne lyne the 17. & 32.3 wyl I spreade out vpon hym and catche him in my net, and cary hym to Babylon in the land of the Chaldees, whyche he shal not se, and yet shall he dye there. As for all hys helpers & all his hostes that be aboute him, I wyll scatter them towarde all the windes, and drawe out a swerde after them. *So

And vnto the people of ꝯ lande speake ꝯ on thys maner: thus sayeth ꝯ lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalē, and to ꝯ lande of Israel: Ye shal eate youre bread with sorowe, & drinke your water with heynesse. Yea the land wyth the fulnesse therof shalbe layed waste, for ꝯ wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

And the cytyes that nowe be well occupyed, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate: that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the lorde.

Yet came the worde of the lorde vnto me againe, saying: Thou sonne of mā, what ma-

But saye thus vnto thē: the dayes are at hande that euery thyng whych hath bene prophecyed, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vyson be in vaine, neyther any prophecy fayle among ꝯ childre of Israell: For it is I the lorde that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the lorde speake, it shal

And the word of the lorde came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man. The house of Israell sayeth on thys maner. Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it wyl be many a daye or it come to passe. It is farre of yet, the thynge that he prophecyeth. Therefore say vnto them: Thus sayeth the lord God. All my wordes shal nomore be slacke. Loke what I speake, ꝯ same shall come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

The.xiii. Chapter.

The worde of ꝯ Lord against false prophetes, which teache ꝯ people the cōtrary to their owne hertes.

THe worde of the lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: Speake prophecye against those I prophetes that preache in Israel: and say thou vnto them that prophecye out of theyr owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Woe *Esa.34.1

O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dry felde: For they stande not in ꝯ gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israell, that men myghte abyde the battayll in the daye of the Lorde.

Wyne handes shal come vpō the prophets that loke out vayne thynges & preache lies: they shal not be in the counsel of my people, nor written in the boke of ꝑ house of Israel, neither shal they come in the land of Israel: that ye may knowe how that I am the lord God. And ꝑ for because they haue discerned

Shall it not then be sayd vnto you: where is nowe the morter ꝑ ye dawbed it wyth all? Therfore thus sayth ꝑ lord God: I wyl breake out in my wrathful displeasure wyth a stormy wynd so that in myne anger there shall come a myghty shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my
C wrath, to destroye wythall. As for the wall ꝑ ye haue dawbed vō vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the ground: so that the foundacyon therof shal remoue, and it shall fall: yea, and ye youre selues shall perysshe in the myddest thereof: to learne you for to knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and thē wil I say vnto you: the wal is gone, and the dawbers are away. These are the prophetes of Israell whyche prophecye vnto the cytye of Jerusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, wher as no peace is, saieth the lord God. Wherfore, (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynst ꝑ daughters of thy people, whyche prophecy out of theyr owne hertes: and speake thou, prophecy agaynste thē, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Woe be vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades

The.xiiii.Chapter.

The Lord denieth hys worde to the people for theyr synnes sake. The despysers of the worde doth the Lorde sometyme deceaue by false prophetes. A comforte of them that fled vnto Babylon.

Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israell, that beareth hys vncleane Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to stomble in hys owne wyckednes, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lord my selfe giue answere, accordyng to the multitude of hys Idolles: that the house of Israell maye be snared in theyr owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for theyr abhommacions sakes. prophete be deceyued, when he telleth hym a worde, then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceiued that prophete: and wyl stretche out myne hande vpon hym, to roote hym oute of my people of Israel: and they bothe shalbe punyshed for theyr wyckednesse. Accordinge to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophet be: that the house of Israell be led nomore from me thorowe errour, and be nomore defyled in theyr wyckednesse: but þ they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, whē the lande synneth against me, and goeth forth in wyckednes: I wyll stretche out myne hande vpon it, ✝ & destroy al the prouision of theyr bread, and send derth vpon them, to destroy man and beast in the lande. ✝ And thoughe Noe, Daniell, and Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in theyr ryghteousnesse delyuer but theyr owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God. Yf I bryng noysome beastes into the lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man maye go therin for beastes: yf these thre men were also in the land, as truly as I lyue (sayth the lord God) they shall saue neyther sonnes nor daughters, but be onely delyuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe waste. Or yf I bringe a swerde into the lande, and charge it to goe thorowe the lande, so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therein: As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but onely be saued themselues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my sore indignacyon vpon it in bloud, so that I rote out of it both man and beast: And yf Noe, Danuel & Job were therin, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) they shall delyuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr ryghteousnes. Wherefore thus sayth the lorde God: Muche more when I sende my ✝ foure troublous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde, hunger, perilous beastes & pestylence, to destroye manne and beaste out of it. Behold there shalbe a remnaunt saued therin, which shall bryng forth theyr sonnes & daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you and ye shall se theyr waye, & what they take in hande, and ye shalbe comforted as touchyng al þ plages þ I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se theyr way & workes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not wythout a cause that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xv. Chapter.

To the vnprofytable wood of ✝ vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so sayeth he ✝ Jerusalem shalbe brent.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me, I sayng: thou sonne of man, what commeth of þ vyne among all other trees: and of the wylde vyne stocke amonge all other timber of the grouе? Do mē take wood of it, to make any worke with all? Or maye there a naple bee made of it, to hange any thynge vpon? beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be brente, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Seinge then that it B was mete for no worke, beyng whole: much lesse may ther any thynge be made of it, whē the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Lyke as I cast the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyll I do wyth them that dwel in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. ✝ Then shall ye knowe, þ I am þ lord, when I set my face againste them, and make the lande waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xvi. Chapter.

The prophet entendyng to speake of ✝ abominacyō of Jerusalem, doth fyrst shewe the benefytes of God toward it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkindnesse, for her fornicacion & idolles. He setteth the wickednes of other people, in comparyson of the synnes of Jerusalē. The cause of the abominacyō, into which the Sodomytes fell. Mercys is promysed to the repentaunt.

AGayne, the worde of the Lord spake I vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, shew the cite of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and say: thus sayeth the lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was þ maner of thy birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, the strynge of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water to make the clean: Thou waste nether rubbed wyth salte nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded thee so muche, as to doe any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the suche fauour, but þ wast vtterly cast out vpon þ fielde: yea, despised wast þ in the day of thy birth. Then came I by the, & saw the trode downe in thine owne bloud, & said vnto the: liue, although þ be defyled in thyne owne bloud, euen I (I tel the) sayd vnto the, lyue, although thou be defyled

Thus waste thou decte wt syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne whyte sylke of nedle worke, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydeste eate nothyng but simnels, honye & oyle: maruelous goodly waste thou and beutyfull, yea euen a betyequene wast thou. In so much that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the Hethen, for thou wast excellente in my beuty, whyche I put vpō the, sayth the Lord God. But thou hast put confydence in thyne owne beuty, and playde the harlot, when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast cōmytted whordome wyth al that went by the, and hast fulfylled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of diuerse colours, and decte thyne altares therewyth, whereupon thou mightest

Is this but a small whordome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, & geuest them ouer to be brente vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominacions and whordome, thou haste not remembred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked and bare thou waste at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloud. Thou haste made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou haste layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thyne whordome. * Thou hast committed fornication wyth ꝓ Egyptians thy neyghbours, which had much flesshe: & thus hast thou encreased thine whordome, to anger me. Thus hast thou furthermore cōmitted thy fornication trō the land of Canaan, vnto the Chaldees, & yet thy luste not satysfyed. Howe obstinate is thyne herte (sayeth the lorde God) seinge ꝓ doest al these workes of an errante whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy bordell houses in all places? Thou haste not bene as another whore that holdeth scorne of a smal rewarde, but a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in steade of her husbande. Gyftes are gyuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto al thy louers, and offerest them gyftes, to come vnto thee oute of all places, and to committe fornicacion with thee. It is come to passe wt the in thy whordoms, contrary to the vse of other wemen: yea, there hath no suche fornicacion bene commytted after the, seynge ꝓ thou prokerest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: thys is a contrary thyng. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lord, O thou harlot: thus sayeth the lord God: For so much as thou hast set forth thy youth to whordome, and dyscouered thy shame, thorow thy whordom with al thy louers, & wyth al the ydols of thy abhommacions in the bloude of thy chyldren, * whom thou hast geuen them: Beholde, therfore I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy selfe comē: yea, gather them together round about thee:

that they may ſee all thy fylthynelle.
*Moreouer, I wyll iudge thee as a breaker of wedlocke, and a murtherer, & recompence thee thyne owne bloud in wrathe and gelouſye. I wyll geue thee ouer into theyr power, that ſhall breake downe thy ſtues, and deſtroye thy bodell houſes: they ſhall ſtrypp the oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beuty-full iewels ſhall they take from the, and ſo lette the ſyt naked and bare: *yea, they ſhall bryng the common people vp-on the, whiche ſhall ſtone the, and ſlay the make thy whoredome to ceaſſe, ſo ẏ thou ſhalt geue out no mo rewardes. Should I make my wrath to bee ſtyll, take my not the dayes of thy youth, but haſte prouoked me to wrath in all theſe thynges.

Beholde therfore, I wyll brynge thyne

Lorde God: howbeit I neuer dyd vnto the accordyng to thy wyckednelle, and al uerbe alſo againſte the: ſuche a mother, ſuche a doughter. Thou art euẽ thy mothers owne doughter, that hath caſte of her huſbande and her childzen: yea, thou art the ſyſter of thy ſyſters, which forſoke theyr huſbandes & theyr chyldzen. Youre *mother is a Cethyte, & youre father an Amorite. Thyne eldeſt ſyſter is Samaria, ſhe and her doughters that dwel vp-on thy left hande. But thy yongeſt ſyſter that dwelleth on thy ryght hand, is So-doma and her doughters. Yet haſte thou not walked after theyr wayes, nor done after their abhompnacions, but thou ſtodeſt a lytle and very ſmall tyme, and in all thy wayes thou haſte been more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, ſayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy ſyſter with her doughters, hath not done ſo euyll, as thou and thy doughters. Beholde, * the ſynnes of thy ſyſter Sodoma were theſe: Pryde, fulneſſe of meate, aboundaunce, and ydelneſſe: theſe thynges had ſhe and her doughters. Beſydes that they reāched not theyr hand to the poore & nedye, but were proude, and dyd abhompnable thinges before me: therfore I tooke them away, as pleaſed me. Neither hath Samaria done half of thy ſinnes, *yea thou haſte exceaded them in wyckednelle: In ſo muche that in compariſon of all the abhompnacions which thou haſte done, thou haſte made thy ſyſters good wemẽ.

Therfore thou (which dideſt condemne thy ſyſter) beare thyne owne ſhame, for thyne owne offences, that thou haſt com-mytted, more abhompnable then they dyd, whiche in dede are more ryghteous then thou art: be thou (I ſay) aſhamed, & beare thy ſhamefull rebuke: ſeeyng that thou haſt proued thy ſyſters in compary-ſon of the, ryghtwiſe. As for their captiui-tie, namely ẏ captiuitie of Sodoma & her doughters, the captiuitie of Samaria & her doughters, I wil bryng them agayn: ſo wil I alſo bryng agayn thy captyuitie among them: that thou mayſt take thine owne confuſion vpon the, and be aſha-med of all that thou haſte done, and to comforte them. Thus thy ſyſters (name-lye) Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters, with thy ſelfe & thy doughters, ſhalbe brought agayne to your old eſtate. Whẽ thou waſte in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to lyght, thou wouldeſt not heare ſpeake of thy ſyſter Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Syrians with all theyr townes, and the Philiſtynes with all that lye rounde aboute them, brought the to ſhame and confuſiõ: that thou myghteſt beare thyne owne fylthynelle & abhompnacion, ſayth the Lorde. For thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I ſhould (by ryght) deale with the,
as thou haſte done. Thou haſte deſpyſed the oth, and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheleſſe, I will remembre the coue-naũt that I made with the in thy youth, in ſo muche that it ſhalbe an euerlaſtyng couenaunte: ſo that thou alſo remembre thy wayes, and be aſhamed of them: then ſhalt thou receyue of me thy elder and yonger ſyſters, whome I wyll make thy doughters, and that beſyde thy coue-naunte. * And ſo wyll I renue my coueuaunte with the, that thou mayſt knowe that I am the Lorde, that thou mayſt thynke vpon it, be aſhamed, and excuſe thyne owne confuſyon nomore: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou haſte done, ſayeth the Lorde God.

The.xvii. Chapter.

The parable of the two Egles.

A THe woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, put forth * a darke Ezec. 24.a speakyng and a parable, vnto the house of Israel and say: Thus sayth the Lorde God. There came a great * Egle wyth greate wynges: yea, wyth a mighty longe body, and full of fethers of dyuers colours, vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the hyest braunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, and sette it in a citie of marchauntes. He tooke also of the sede of the lande and planted it in a fruitful ground, he brought it vnto great waters, and set it as a wyllowe tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a great vyne stocke, but lowe by the grounde, whose braunches turned vnto it selfe, and the rootes of it were fastened vnder it: thus there came of it a vyne, & it brought forth blossoms, B and spred out braunches. But there was another Egle, a greate one, whiche had greate wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the rootes of this vyne had an honger after hym, and spred oute hys braunches towarde hym, that he myght water her with the orchyarde that he had plãted. Neuertheles, it was planted vpõ a good grounde besyde great waters: so that (by reason it shoulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue been a goodly vyne. Speake thou therefore, C thus sayeth the Lorde God: Shall this vyne prosper? shall not hys rootes bee plucked out, his frute be broken of, hys grene braunches wyther & fade awaye? yea, without eyther stronge arme or manye people, shall it be plucked vp by the rootes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prospere therfore? Shall it not bee dryed vp and wythered? yea, euen in the shutyng of his blossoms, allone as the east D wynde bloweth. Moreouer, the woorde of ỹ Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to the froward housholde: knowe ye not, what these thynges doe syguifye? Tell them: Beholde, * the kyng of Babylon 4.Reg.24.a came to Ierusalem, and tooke the kyng and his prynces, and led them to Babylon. He tooke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt with hym, and tooke an oth of hym: The pryuces of the lande tooke he with hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, and sent his ambassadours into Egypte, that he myght haue horses and muche people.

Should that prospere? Should he be E kept safe, that doeth suche thinges? Or should he escape, that breaketh his couenaunte? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him king: whose oth he hath despysed and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shal Pharao with his great hoste & multytude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they cast vp dytches, and sette vp bulwarkes to destroye muche people. For seyng he hath despysed the oth, and broken the couenaunte (whereas he yet gaue his hand therby on) and done all these thinges, he shal not escape. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: as truely as I lyue, I will bryng F myne oth that he hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his owne head. * I will cast my nette aboute Ezec. him, and catch him in my yatne. To Ba- 12.a bylon will I carye him, there will I punish him because of the great offence that he made me. As for those that flee from hym out of the hoste, they shall be slayne with the swearde. The residue shall be scattred towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I G wyll also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyll sette it, and take the vppermoste twygge, that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hyl: Namelye, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plãt it, that it may bryng forth twygges, and geue frute, and bee a greate Cedre tree: so that all mãner of foules maye buylde in it, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches. And all the trees of the fielde shall know that I the Lord haue brought downe the hye tree, and set the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, & made the drye tree to florysshe. Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The.xviii Chapter.

The shewyth that euery man shall beare his owne synne. To him that amendeth, is saluation promysed. Death is prophesyed to the ryghteous, whiche turneth backe from the ryght waye.

The

The woꝛde of the Lozd came vnto me on this maner: what meane ye by this common pꝛouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saying: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the childrens teth are set on edge. As truely as I lyue, sayeth the Lozde God, ye shall vse thys bywoꝛde nomoꝛe in Israel. Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shall die. * Yf a manne bee godly, and do the thynge that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylles: he lyfteth not hys eies vp to the foule ydols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wife: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no bo-dye: he geueth hys detter hys pledge a-gayne: he taketh none other mans good by vyolence: * he parteth hys meate with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: * he lendeth nothynge vpon vsury: he taketh nothyng ouer: he withdraweth hys hande from de-yuge wꝛonge: he dealeth faythfully beetweene man and man: and walketh in my commaundementes, & keepeth my lawes, & pꝛfourmeth them faythfully: * Thys is a ryghteous man, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lozd God. Yf he now get a sonne, that is a murtherer, a sheder of bloude: yf he do one of these thinges * (though he do not al) he eateth vpon the hylles: he defyleth hys neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the pooze & nedye: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter hys pledge agayne: he lyfteth vp hys eyes vnto ydols: and medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vp-on vsury, and taketh moze ouer: Shal thys man lyue? He shal not liue. Seyng he hath done all these abhomynacions, he shall die, hys bloude shal bee vpon hym. Nowe yf thys man get a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes, whiche he hathe done, and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idoles of Israel: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe:
he vexeth no mã: he keepeth no mãs pledge: he neither spoyleth noꝛ robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat vnto the hongry: he clotheth the naked: he oppꝛesseth not the pooze: he receaueth no vsury, noꝛ any thynge ouer: he keepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes: Thys man shal not dye in hys fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As foꝛ his father, because he oppꝛessed and spoyled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge hys people: loe, he is dead in hys owne syn. And yet say ye: Wherfoꝛe then shoulde not thys sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therefoꝛe, because the sonne hath doue equitie and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therefoꝛe shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth shal dye. * The sonne shal not beare the fathers offence, neither shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The righteousnesse of the righteous, shal be vppon hym, and the wickednesse of the wyc-ked shalbe vpon hym selfe also. * But if the vngodly will turne awaye from all hys synnes that he hathe done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thing that is equall and ryght: doutles he shall lyue, and not dye. As foꝛ all hys synnes that he dyd befoꝛe, they shal not be thought vpon, but in hys ryghteousnesse that he hathe done, he shall lyue. * Foꝛ haue I any pleasure in the deathe of a synner, sayeth the Lozde God, but rather that he conuerte & lyue? Agayne, yf the righteous turne away from hys ryghteousnes, and do iniquitie, accoꝛdyng to all the abhomynacions that the wicked man doth, shall he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hathe done shall not bee thought vpon: but in the faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hathe done, he shall dye. And yet ye saye: Tushe * the waye of the Lozd is not indifferent. Heare therefoꝛe ye house of Israel: is not my waye ryghte? Oꝛ are not youre wayes rather wicked? * Whē a ryghteous man turneth awaye from hys ryghteous-nesse, & medleth with vngodlynesse: he must die therin yea foꝛ the vnryghteousnes that he hathe done, muste he dye. Agayne, * whē the wycked man turneth awaye from hys wyckednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thynge whiche is equall and ryght: he shall saue hys soule alyue. Foꝛ in somuche as he remembꝛeth hym selfe, and turneth him from all the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shall liue and not dye. And yet sayeth the house of Israel. Tush, the waye of the Lozd is not equal. Are my wayes vnright, O ye house of Israel? Are not youre wayes rather vnequall? As foꝛ me I will iudge euery man accoꝛdyng to hys wayes, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lozde GOD.
* Wherefoꝛe, bee conuerted and turne you cleane from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste away from you all youre vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: * make you newe heartes and a newe spꝛite. Wherefoꝛe will ye dye, O ye house of Israel, seyyng I haue no pleasure in the deathe of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lord God. Turne you then, & ye shall lyue.

The. xix. Chapter.

The captyuite of Jechoahas and of Jehoachim is sygnifyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperite of the cite of Jerusalem that is past, and the myserey therof that is present.

A BUt thou sonne of mann, mourne thou for the pryuces of Israel, & saye. Wherfore lay thy mother ꝑ lyonesse amonge the lyons, & norysshed her yongrones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nettes, and brought hym in chaynes vnto the lande of Egipt. Nowe when the damme sawe that all her hope and counforte was away, she

B toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: whiche wente amonge the lyons, and became a fearse lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, & made theyr Cyties waste. In so muche that the whole land and euery thynge therin, were vtterlye desolate, thorowe the very voyce of hys roaryng. Then came the heathen togethet on euerye syde out of all countreyes against him, laied their nettes for him, and toke hym in theyr pitte.

4. Reg. 17. a. Jere. 19. a. and 52. a. So ✱they bounde him with cheynes, and broughte hym to the kynge of Babylon: whiche put hym in prison, that hys voyce

C sholde nomore be hearde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vine in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her frutes & braunches are growē oute of many watrrs, her stalkes were so stronge that men myght haue made staues therof for offycers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes. So when men sawe that she exceaded the heigth and multitude of her braunches, she was rooted oute in dyspleasure, & caste downe to the grounde. The Easte winde dried vp her frute, her strōg stalkes were broken of, wythered and brent in the fyre. But nowe she is planted in the wildernesse, in a drye and thyrsty grounde. And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, whiche hath brente vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hathe no mo stronge stalkes, to bee staues for offycers. This is a pyteous and myserable thynge.

The. xx. Chapter.

The Lord denyeth that he will answere the wise they praye for the offence of vnkyndnesse whiche he bere obiected. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captiuite. By the wood that shoulde bee brent, is sygnyfyed the burnyng of Jerusalem.

IN the seuenth yeare the tenth day of ꝑ fyfth moneth, ✱it happened that certayne of the elders of Israell came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sōne of man, speake vnto the elders of Israell, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Are ye come hither to aske any thing at me? As truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll geue you no answere. Wilte thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wylte thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominations of theyr forefathers, and tell them. Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: ✱In the daye when I chose Israel and lyft vp myne hande vpon the seede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: yea, when I lift vp myne hande ouer them, and sayed: I am the Lorde youre God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, to bryngе thē oute of the lande of Egypte, into a land that I had prouyded for thē, whiche flowe-eth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasaūt lande amonge all other: Then sayed I vn-to them. ✱Caste awaye euerye man the abhomynacions that he hathe before him, and defyle not youre selues with the ydolles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde youre God.

B But they rebelled agayust me, and wouldē not folowe me: to caste awaye euery man the abhomynacions of hys eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypt. Then I made me to poure myne indignacion ouer thē, and to satisfye my wrathe vpon them: yea, euen in the middest of the lande of Egypt. But I would not do it, for my names sake: that it should not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, and a-mong whome I shewed my selfe vnto thē, that I would bringe them out of the land of Egypt. Nowe when I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and broughte them into the wildernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes, ✱whiche who so keepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes, to bee a token betwixte me and them, and therby to knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynste me in the wyldernesse, they wold not walke in my commaū-dementes, dementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which whoso kepeth shall lyue in them) & my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed. * Then I made me to powre out myne indignacion vpon them: and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I would not doe it, for my names sake, lest it should be dishonoured before the heathen, from the whiche I had caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I would not bryng them into the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and honye, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes: for their herte was gone after their idols. Neuertheless, myne eye spared them, so that I would not vtterly slay them, and consume the in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordynaunces, and defyle not your selues with their idols, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes kepe my lawes and doe them, halowe my Sabbothes, * for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lord your God. Notwithstanding, their sonnes * rebelled agaynst me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kept not my lawes to fulfyll them (whiche he that doeth shall lyue in them:) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me againe to powre out my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them in the wildernesse. Neuertheless, I withdrewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shoulde be vnhalowed among the heathen, before whom I had brought them forth. I lift vp mine hande ouer them also in the wildernesse, that I woulde scatter them amonge the heathen, and strawe them among the nations, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundemētes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers idols. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, and lawes, thorowe the whiche they shoulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes * (whē I appoynted for my selfe all their fyrst borne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man,) tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lord God. Beside all this, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended against me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hye hyll, and all the thycke trees: they made there their offrynges, and prouoked me with their oblacions, makyng swete sauoures there, & powred out their drynke offerynges. Then I asked them, what is the hyll altare, that ye goe to? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto this daye. Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Ye are euen as vncleane as your forefathers, and commyt whoredome also with their abhominacyons. In all your idols, whereunto ye bryng your oblacions, * and to whose honour ye burne your chyldren, ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe dare ye then come, and aske any question at me, O ye household of Israel? As truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) ye get no answer of me: and as for the thing that ye goe about, it shall not come to passe, whereas ye say we wyl be as the heathen, and doe as other people in the lande, wood and stone wyll we worshyppe: As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I my selfe wil rule you with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme, and with indignacio powred out ouer you: and wil bryng you out of the nacions and landes, wherein ye are scattred, and gather you together with a myghtie hande, with a stretched out arme, and with indignacion powred out vpon you: and wyll bryng you into the wyldernesse of the people, and there I will reason with you face to face. Lyke as I punished youre forefathers in the wyldernesse of Egypte, so will I punishe you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll bryng you vnder my iurisdiccion, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The forsakers also & the transgressours wyll I take from among you, and bryng the out of the lande of your habytacion: as for the land of Israel, they shall not come in it, that you may knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Goe to nowe then (sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel. * Euery one of you folowe your idols, and serue them, seyng ye refuse to obey me. And my holy name shall ye nomore vn-halowe with your offrynges and ydols.

For vpon my holy hyl, euen vpon the hye hyll of Israel sayeth the Lord God, shall all the house of Israel, and all that is in Deu. 12.a the lande, worshyp me: * and in the same and. 14.d. place will I fauoure them, & there will I requyre your heue offrynges, and ỹ firſtlynges of your oblacions, with all your G holy thinges. I wyll accepte your swete sauoure, when I bryng you from the na-cions, and gather you together oute of the landes, wherin ye be scattered, that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye may knowe, that I am the Lorde which haue brought you into the land of Israel: yea, into the same land that I swore to geue vnto your fore fathers. There shall ye cal to remembraūce your owne wayes and all your ymagynacions, wherein ye haue been defyled:
Jere. 2. a. and * ye shall iudge your selues worthye 12. b. 11. c to be destroyed for all your wyckednesse, that ye haue done. And ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I entreate you after my name, not after your wyc-ked wayes, nor accordyng to your corrupt workes, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde. Moreouer, the woorde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: set thy face toward the south, and speake to the south wynde, and say to the wood toward the south: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God.
Beholde, I wyl kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees wyth the drye. No man shalbe able to quenche his flame, but al that looketh from the south to the north, shalbe brent therein: and all flesshe shall see, that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man may quenche it. Then sayde I: O Lorde, they wyll say Jere. 20. b of me: * Tushe, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The. xxi. Chapter.

He threatneth the swearde, that is to saye, destruction to the cyte of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of kyng Zedekyah. He is commaunded to prophecye the destruction of the children of Ammon.
After the slaughter of other at the laste the Lorde threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonozor hymselfe.

THe worde of the Lorde came to me, saying: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuary, and prophecye against the land of Israel, say to the land of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, I will vpon the, and will drawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the, both the righteous & the wycked. Seyng then ỹ I will rote out of the both the righteous & wicked, therfore shall my swearde goe out of his sheath a-gaynst all flesshe, from the North to the South: that all flesshe may knowe howe that I the Lorde haue drawen my sweard out of the sheath, & it shal not be put in againe. Mourne therfore (O thou son of B man) that thy loynes cracke withall, yea, mourne bytterly for thē in their presence.
And if they say: wherfore mournest thou?
Thē tell them: for the tydinges that commeth, at the which all hertes shall melte, all handes shalbe letten downe, all sto-mackes shall faynt, & all knees shal ware feble. Behold, it commeth and shalbe ful-fylled, sayth the Lorde God. Againe, the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying:
Thou sonne of man prophecy, & speake.
Thus sayth the Lord God: speake. The sweard, the sweard is sharpened & well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured ỹ it may bee bryght. Shall C we then make myrth? Against the * tryde Ezech. of my sōne it is gone forth, destroying all trees. He hath put his sweard to ỹ dyght-yng, that good holde may be taken of it.
This swearde is sharpened & dyght, ỹ it may be geue into ỹ hand of ỹ manslayer.
Crye, (O ỹ sonne of man & houle, for this sweard shal smyte my people, & al the rulers in Israel, my people shall be feared thorow this sweard. Smyte therefore ỹ hand thy thygh, for it is gone forth to make a trial. And what a trial shal this be, whē euen my scepter shalbe refused? It shal not be (sayth the Lord God. Prophecye ỹ sōne of mā, & smyte thine hādes together:
make the sweard two edged, yea, make it D thre edged, ỹ māslayers sweard ỹ sweard of the great slaughter which shall smyte thē, euen in their preuy chābers, to make thē abashed & faynt at the hertes, & in all gates to make some of thē fal. I haue geuen ỹ fearful sweard. O how bryght and sharpe is it, how wel dyght & mete for ỹ slaughter? Set the some place alone, ey-ther vpon ỹ right hand or on ỹ left, why-ther soeuer thy face turneth. I will smyte my handes together also, and satisfye my wrathful indignacion: Euen I the Lord haue sayd it. The word of the Lord came yet vnto me againe, saying: Thou sonne of mā, make the .ii. stretes ỹ the sweard of ỹ king of Babylō may come. Both these stretes shall go out of one kynges lande.

And

And chose thee a place, at the heade of the streete chose out a corner. Make the a streete, that the swearde maye come towarde Ra-bath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge citie of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turning of the waye, at the head of the two streetes: *to aske cousel at the sothsayers, casting the lottes with hys arowes, to aske counsell at the ydolle, and to loke in the lyuer. But the soth saying shall poynt to the ryght syde vppon Jerusalem, that he may set me of warre to smite it with a greate noyse, to crye out alarum, to set battel rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp bicches, and to make bulwarkes.
Neuertheles, as for the sothsaying, they shall holde it but for vanytie. And esteme them as those to whome they haue often sworne: Notwithstandynge he shal remē-ber theyr wickednesse, so that by right they must be taken and woune. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God. For somuche as ye youre selues shewe youre offence, and haue opened youre wyckednes, so that in all youre workes men maye see youre synnes: therefore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence. O thou shameful wycked guyde of Israell, whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wyckednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lord God, take awaye the garlande, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punish, punishe, yea, punishe thē will I, & destroye them: and that shall not be fulfylled vntill he come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth, and to whom I haue geuen it.
And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God to the chyldren of *Ammon, & to theyr blasphemy, speake thou: The swearde, the sweard is drawen forth already to the slaughter, & scoured to consume, þ it glystreth (becaus thou haste loked the out vanities, and propheryed lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, like as vpō the other vngodly, which be slayne, whose daye came whē theyr wickednesse was full. Shoulde I put it vp againe? Naye, I will punishe the in the land where thou wast norysched and borne, and poure myne indignacion vpon the, and will blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, & deliuer thee vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to destroye. Thou shalte fede the fyre, & thy bloud shalbe shedde in the lande, that thou mayest bee put oute of remembraunce. Euē I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The.xxii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynste Jerusalem for manslaughter, & denying due honoure vnto theyr fathers and mothers, and other wickednesses. Of the wicked doctryne of the false prophetes & preistes, and of theyr vnsaciable couetousnesse. The tyranny of rulers. The wickednesse of the people.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lord I came vnto mē, and sayed: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not ce-rtayne thys bloudthurstie citie?
Shewe them theyr abhominacyons, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O kest the ydoles to defyle the withal. Thou hast made thy selfe gyltie in the bloud that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the ydolles, which thou hast made. Thou haste caused thy dayes to drawe nye, and made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therefore wyll I make thee to bee confounded amonge the Heathen, & to be despysed in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they strawe thee aboute in the landes, and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to cease oute of thee. yea, and thou shalte bee thyne owne enhe-ritaunce and not myne, in the syghte of the heathen: that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Ezay.1.c. *the house of Israel is turned to drosse.

All they that should bee brasse, tynne, yron, & leade, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde GOD.
For so muche as ye al are turned into drosse:
C Beholde, I will bringe you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tyn, and leade, are put together in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them. Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacion. I will bringe you together, & kyndle ỹ fyre of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that you maye bee melted therin. Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fire, so shall ye also be melted therin, ỹ ye maye knowe howe that I the Lorde haue pow-red my wrathe vpon you. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, tell her. Thou art an vn-ỹ cleane lande, whiche is not rayned vpon in Ezech.22.c. the daie of the cruel wrath: *thy prophetes ỹ are in the are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roarying lyon, that ruyeth by hys praye. They receyue riches & good, and make many widdowes in thee. Thy priestes breake my lawe, and defyle my Leuit.10.c. sanctuary. * They put no differēce betweene the holy and vnholy, neyther discerne they betweene the cleane & vncleane: they turne theyr eyes from my sabbothes, and I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in thee are lyke rauyshynge wolues to shede Micheh.3.c. blonde, and to destroye soules for theyr Zoph.3.d owne couetous lucre. * As for thy pro-Ezec.13.b. phetes, they daube with vntempered clay, they see vanityes, and prophecy lyes vnto G thē, saying: the Lord God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wycked extorcion & rob-Exo.22.a. ry. They vexe the poore and nedy, and *op-presse the straunger agaynste ryght. And I sought in the land for a mā, that would make vp the hedge, and set hym selfe in the gap before me in the landes behalfe, that it shoulde not bee corrupted: but I coulde fynde none. Therfore wyll I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne thē in the fyre of my wrathe: theyr owne wayes will I recōpence vpō theyr heades, sayeth the Lorde GOD.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

Of the fornication, that is to saye, of the ydolatrye of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Oholah and Oholybah. In comparyson of Samarya he sheweth that the fornication of Jerusalem is the fylthyer. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophecyed. The aduoutry of bothe the whores is founde out. Theyr destruction.

THe worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me, I saying: Thou sonne of manne, there were two women, that had one mother: these (when they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes * in Egypte. There Exo. were theyr brestes bruised, & the pappes of theyr maydenhead did the Egyptians de-stroye. The eldest of thē was called Oholah, & her yongest syster Oholibah. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes and daughters. Theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem that was Oholibah. As for Oholah she began to go a whoryng when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon her 4.Reg. louers the Assirians, as her neyghbours which had to do with her, euen the prynces & lordes that were dect in costly aray, fayre yonge men, lustye ryders of horses. Thus B thorowe her whordome, she cleaued vnto al ỹ yong men of Assiria. Yea she was mad vpon them, & defyled her selfe with al theyr ydols. Neyther ceassed she from the fornycacyon that she vsed wt the Egyptians: for in her youth they lay with her, they broked the brestes of her maydenhead, and poured theyr whordom vpō her. Wherfore * I de- 4.Reg. lyuered her into the handes of her louers: euen the Assirians whō she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, & slue her wt the sword: In cuill name gat she of all people, and they punyshed her. * Her syster Oholibah sawe this, & Jere. destroyed her selfe wt inordinate loue more than she, and exceded her syster in whordō:
* she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye 4.Reg. with her) namelye the prynces, and greate Ezec. lordes, that were clothed with al maner of gorgeous apparel, al lusty horsemē & fayre yonge persons. Then I sawe, ỹ they bothe were defyled alike. But she encreased still in C whordome, for when she sawe mē paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with freshe colours, wt fayre gyrdles aboute them, & goodly bonettes vpon theyr heades, loking al like princes (after ỹ maner of the Babylonians, & Chaldees in their owne lande where they were borne) immediatly, as soone as she saw them, she brent

brent in loue vpō thē, & sent messengers for them into the land of the Chaldees. Nowe when ꝑ Babylonians came to her, they lay with her, & defiled her with theyr whordome, & so was she polluted with thē. And when her lust was abated from thē * her whordome & shame was discouered & sene: then my heart forsoke her, like as my heart was gone frō her sister also. Neuertheles, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the more, & remembred the daies of her youth, wherin she had played ꝑ harlot in the lande of Egipte: * she brēt in lust vpon thē, whose flesche was lyke the flesche of Asses, & theyr seede like ꝑ seede of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthines of thy youthe, when thy louers bruised thy pappes, & marred thy breastes in Egipt. Therfore (O Oholibah) thus sayeth the Lord God: I will rayse vp thy louers (with whome thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, & gather thē together rounde about the: namelye, the Babylonians, & al the Chaldees, rulers, mighty men & tyrauntes, with all the Assirians: all yong & fayre louers, princes and lordes, knightes & gentle men, whiche be all good horsemen. These shal come vpon the with horses, charetes, & a great multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed about the on euery side, w brestplates, shildes, & helmettes: I wil punish the before thē: yea, they thē selues shall punish the according to theyr owne iudgement. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so ꝑ they shal deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shal fal thorowe the swearde. They shal cary awaye thy sonnes, & daughters, & the residue shalbe brent in ꝑ fyre. They shal strippe the out of thy clothes, and cary thy costly iewels away with thē. Thus wyl I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whordome, whiche thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalt tourne thyne eyes nomore after them, and cast thy minde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus saith the Lorde: beholde, I will delyuer the into the handes of them, whō thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust, which shal deale cruelly with thee. All thy labour shall they take with thē, and leaue the naked & bare: & thus ꝑ shame of thy fylthy whordome shal come to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto the because of thy whordō which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentiles, with whose ydolles thou hast defiled thy selfe.

Thou hast walked in the waie of thy sister, therfore wil I geue thee her cup in thy hād. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drynke of thy sisters cuppe, howe depe and farre soeuer it be to ꝑ botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derysion, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria, is a cuppe of destruccion & wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke, & supp it out euen to the dregges: yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken pieces of it, and so teare thyne owne brestes. For euē I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde GOD.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God. ℣ For somoche as thou hast forgotten me & caste me alyde behynde the, so beare nowe thine owne filthinesse and whordome. The Lord sayed moreouer vnto me: Thou sōne of man, wilt thou not reprouc Oholah and Oholibah? & hewe them theyr abhominacions, namely, that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and stayned theyr handes with bloude: yea, euen with theyr ydolles haue they committed aduoutry * and offered thē by the fyre theyr owne childrē (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sanctuary in that same day, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For whē they had slayne theyr children for theyr ydolles, they came ꝑ same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, thys haue they done in my house: Beside all thys, thou hast sent thy messengers for men oute of farre countreyes: and when they came thou hast bathed and paynted thine eyes with colours, trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the beste fashion: thou satest vpō a goodly bed and a table spred before the, wherupō thou hast set mine * incense and myne oyle. Then was there greate cheare w̄ her to obtayne peace, & though with those men many men came, yet were there also brought men of Saba from ꝑ wildernesse: which gaue thē bracelettes vpon theyr handes, and set glorious crownes vpon theyr heades: & I sayde vnto her: that seyng she was stryken in age in her whordomes, nowe shall her fornicacyons come to an end with her. And they wēt into her as vnto a commen harlot. Euen so went they (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthy women. O all ye that loue vertue and ryghteousnesse, iudge them, punyche them, * as aduouterers and murtherers, oughte to ber iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in theyr handes.

Wherfore

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will bring a great multitude of people vpō them, & make them be scatred and spoyled: these shall stone them, and gore them with theyr swerdes. They shal slaie their sōnes & daughters & burne vp theyr houses with fyre. Thus will I destroy all suche filthynesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after youre vnclennesse. And so they shall layr your filthinesse vpon yourr owne selues, & ye shalbe punished for the synnes that ye haue committed with youre idols: and ye shall know that I am the Lorde GOD.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

He prouyth the tyrynge of Ierusalem by a parable of a seethynge pot. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe dyenge dead, whiche he after expounderth.

IN the nynthe yeare, in the tenthe moneth, the tēth daye of the moneth, came the word of the Lord vnto mē, saying: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of thys day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, whē the kinge of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. Shewe that obstinate housholde a *a parable, and speake vnto them. Thus b sayeth the Lorde God: Set ther a pot, set it on, and poure water into it: put all ỳ peces together in it, all ỳ good peces: ỳ loyne and the shoulder, and fill it with the beste bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones withall: let it bolle well, and let the bones seethe well therin. With B that sayed the Lord God on this maner.

Mat. 23. c. Luc. 11. b. *Woe be vnto the bloudy citie of the pot, where vpon the rustinesse hangeth, & is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after another: there neade not lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne drye stone hathe she poured it, and not vpon the ground, that it might be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne drye stony rocke, because it shoulde not be hid, & that I might bring my wrathful indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her. C Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: O woe be vnto ỳ bloudthyrstie citie, for whō euen I my selfe wyll make a greate fyre & set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, and spyce the pot, so that the very bones shalbe brent. Moreouer, I will set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metal shalbe brent, and molten also for heate, and the filthinesse of it shalbe molten in it, and the drosse of it shalbe consumed. Thou tohelt great paine thus to defyle thy selfe. And it will not be pourged from the exceadyng drosse in it: but thorowe fyre shal ỳ drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse, euen in thy mischeuous dedes thou dost cō- D tynue, and because thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clēsed the, but thou art not clensed: Thou shalt not bee purged frō thyne vncleanesse, till I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpon the. Euen I ỳ Lorde haue so decreed. Yea, it is come thereto alreadye that I will do it: I wil not go backe, I wil not spare, I wil not be entreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punished, sayeth the Lord god. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sōne of mā, behold, E I wil take awaye ỳ pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou neither mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feete, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people betymes in ỳ mornynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe, I dyd as I was commaunded, and the people sayde vnto me: wylt thou not tell vs what this signifieth F to warde vs, for this thou dost for oure sake. I answered thē, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Tel the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God: behold, I wyll suspende my Sanctuarye, euen the glory of youre power, the pleasure of your eyes, & the thyng that ye loue: youre sōnes and doughters whom ye haue left shall fall thorowe the swerde. Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread: youre bonettes shal ye haue vpon your heades, & shoes vpon youre feete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowfull, & one repent wh another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewtokē. For loke G as he hath done, so (whē this commeth) ye shal do also: ỳ ye maye learne to know that I am ỳ Lord God. But behold, O ỳ sonne of mā: In the day whē I take frō thē their power, their ioye & honour, the lust of their eyes, ỳ burthen of theyr liues, namely theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not thys be knowē. Then shal there one escape, & come vnto the for to shewe the. In that daye shal thy mouthe be opened to him whiche is escaped, ỳ thou mayest speake, & bee nomore dumme. Yea, & thou shalt be theyr shewtoken ỳ they may know how ỳ I am ỳ Lord.

The.xxv.Chapter.

The worde of ꝯ Lord vpō the sonnes of Ammō, which reioyced at the fal of Jerusalē. Against Moab & Seyr, against Idumea, against ꝯ Philistynes.

THe woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face against the * Ammonites, prophecy vpon them, & say vnto the Ammonytes: heare the woorde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Forasmuche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarye: Aha, I trow it be now suspended: and ouer the land of Israel: I trow it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prysoners: Behold, I wil deliuer thee to the people of the east, ꝯ they may haue the in possession: these shal set theyr castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, & drynke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall for camels, & of Ammon a shepefold, & ye shal know that I am the Lord. For thus sayth the Lord God: In somuche as thou haste clapped with thyne handes, & stamped with thy feete: yea, reioyced in thine herte ouer the land of Israel wt despite: behold, I will stretch out myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer the to be spoyled of the heathen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all lādes: yea, I wil make the to be layd waste, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord God: Forasmuche as * Moab & Seyr do say: As for ꝯ houle of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be. Therfore behold, I wil open the syde of Moab, & take away their strēgth, their cities, & cheefe coastes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the countrey. As namely, Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon, & Cariathaim, these wil I open vnto them of the east, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites, and wil geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonytes shall nomore be had in remembraunce amōg the heathen. Euen thus wil I punish Moab also, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde God. Because that * Edom hath auenged and eased hymselfe vpon the house of Juda, and hathe done greate offence, and auenged hymselfe vpon thē, therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: I will reache out my hande vpon Edom, and take awaye manne and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedā will I make it desolate, they shall be slayne with the swearde: * thorowe my people of Israel wyll I auenge me agayne vpon Edom: they shall handle hym accordyng to my wrathe and indignacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, sayeth the Lord God. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Forasmuche as the * Philystines haue done thys: namelye taken vengeaunce wyth despytefull stomackes, and of an olde euyll wyll sette themselues to destroy, therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyll stretch out my hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the sea coaste to perish. I great vengeaunce will I take vpon them, and punish them cruelly: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde whiche haue auenged me of them.

The.xxvi.Chapter.

He prophecyeth that Tyrus shalbe ouerthrowen, bycause it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalē. The wondryng & astonyshmēt of the marchaūtes for the desolation of Tyrus.

IT happened that in ꝯ eleuenth yere, the first day of the moneth, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of manne, because * that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: Aha, nowe I trowe the portes of the people bee broken, and she turned vnto me: for nowe that she is destroyed, I shalbe fylled. yea, therefore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyll vpon thee, I wyll bryng a greate multytude of people againste thee, lyke as when the sea aryseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towers. I wyll scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vp theyr nettes by the sea syde. Euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lord God. The Gentyles shal spoyle her: her doughters vpon the fielde shall perysh wyth the swearde, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, I wyll bryng hyther Nabuchodonozor (whiche is the kyng of Babylon, and a kyng of kynges frō the north, vpon Tyre: wyth horses, charettes, horsemenne, and wyth a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the lande shall he slaye wyth the swearde, but agaynst thee he shall make bul-bulwoꝛkes, and graue vp dyches about thee, and lyft vp his shylde agaynst thee. His stynges and batelrammes shall he ꝓpare foꝛ thy walles, & with his weapons breake downe thy towers. The dust of his hoꝛses shall couer thee, they shall be so manye: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the hoꝛsemenne, charettes, and wheles, when he commeth to thy poꝛtes, as menne dooe into an open cytye. With the houres of his hoꝛse feete C shall he treade downe all thy stretes. He shall slay the people with the sweard, and breake downe the pillers of thy strength. They shall waste awaye thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbꝛe and foundacions shal they cast in the Xere. 7. b. water. * Thus will I bꝛyng the melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsye to an ende, so that they shall no moꝛe be heaꝛde. I will make a bare stone of thee: yea, a dꝛying place foꝛ nettes, and thou shalt neuer be buylded againe: Foꝛ euen I the Loꝛde haue spoken it, sayeth the Loꝛd God. Thus hath the Loꝛd God spoke concerning Tyꝛe. The yles shalbe moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the cꝛye of the slayne that shalbe murthered in thee. All kynges of the sea shall come downe from theyꝛ seates regall: they shal lay awaye their roobes, and put of their costly clothing. yea, with trembling shal they be clothed, they shall sytte vpon the grounde, they shall be afrayed at thy sodayne fall, and be abashed at thee.

D They shall mourne foꝛ the, and say vnto * Xer. 1. a. Apoc. 18. c thee: * O thou noble citie, that haste been so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that hast been the strongest vpon the sea, with thyne inhabytours, of whom all menne stode in feare: Howe art thou nowe so vterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall, the inhabytours of the yles, yea, and the yles themselues shall stande in feare at thy ende. Foꝛ thus sayeth the Loꝛde God: when I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no manne dwell in) and when I bꝛyng the deape vpon thee, that great waters maye couer thee: Then will I cast the downe vnto them that descende into the pytte, vnto a people that hath been long dead, and sette the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the old wyldernesse, with them which go downe to theyꝛ graues, so that no manne shall dwell moꝛe in the. And I will make the to be nomoꝛe in honoure in the lande of the lyuing. I will make an ende of thee, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought foꝛ, yet shalt thou not be founde foꝛ euermoꝛe: sayeth the Loꝛde God.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

The Prophete is moued to bewayle the desolacion of Tyrus. He setteth out the prayse of Tyrus, foꝛ the hauntyng of marchauntes thereto.

THe woꝛde of the Loꝛde came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of manne, make a lamentable complaynte vpon * Tyꝛe, & say vpon Tyꝛe: thou whiche art a poꝛte of the sea, that occupieth with muche people, and many yles: thus speaketh the Loꝛde God. O Tyꝛe, thou haste sayde: what, I am a noble cytie: thy boꝛders are in the myddest of the sea, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypꝛes trees of the mounte Sanyr. From Libanus haue they taken Cedꝛe trees, to make the maستes and the okes of Basan to make the towers. Thy boꝛdes haue B they made of yuory, and of costly wood out of the yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours: smal nedle woꝛke out of the lande of Egypte, to hang vpon thy maste, and thy hangynges of yelowe sylke, purple, oute of the yles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thy maryners, and the wyseste in Tyꝛe were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wyseste at Gebal were they that amended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the sea wyth theyꝛ shyppmenne occupyed theyꝛ marchaundyse in thee. The Perses, Lidians and Phutens were in thyne hoste, and helped thee to fyght, these hanged vp theyꝛ shyldes and helmettes wyth thee, these sette foꝛthe thy beautye. They of Arnad were with thine hoste rounde aboute thy walles: and C the Pygmenians were thy watchmenne vpon thy towers: these hanged vp theyꝛ quyuers rounde aboute thy walles, and made the meruelous goodlye. Tharsis occupyed wyth thee in all maner of wares, in syluer, yꝛon, tynne and leade, and made thy markette greate. Iauan, Tubal, and Meseth were thy marchauntes, which bꝛought the menne and oꝛnamentes of metall foꝛ thy occupyinge. They of the house of Thogarma, bꝛought brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horsmen & rulers. They of * Dedā were thy marchauntes: & many other yles that occupyed with ther, brought the wethers, Elephant bones, and Pecockes, for a present. The Syrians occupyed with the because of thy diuers workes, & increased thy marchaundyse, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with white lynen clothe, with sylke, and with christall.

D Juda and the lande of Israell occupyed with the, and brought vnto thy marketes wheat of Minnith, and Panag, balme, hony, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundise with ther in the best wyne of Helbō, & with woll, because thy occupying was so greate, and thy wares so many.
Dan, Jauan, and Meusal, haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made, with Cassia and Calamus, accordyng to thyne occupying. Dedan occupyed with the in kayre tapestry worke, and cushyns. Arabia, and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers, and goates. The E marchaūtes of Seba and Rema, haue occupyed also with the, in all costly spyces, in al precious stones, and golde, whiche they brought vnto thy marketes. Harā, Chene, and Edē, the marchauntes of Saba, Assria, and Chelmad were all doers with the, & occupyed with the: In costlye raymēte of yelow silke, & nedle worke (verie precious, & therefore packt and bounde together with ropes. Yea, and in cedre wood, at the time of thy marketes. The shippes of Tharsis were þ chefe of thy occupying. Thus thou art full, and in greate worshyppe, euen in þ myddest of the sea. Thy robbers shal bring F the into greate waters, the east wynde shal ouer beare the in to the myddest of þ sea, so that thy wares, thy marchaundyse, thy rychesse, thy maryners, thy shypmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupiers (that brought the the thynges necessarye) the mē of warre that are in thee, & al thy cōmens shal perishe in the middest of þ sea, in þ daye of thy fal: The suburbes shal shake at the loude crie of thy shypmen. All whirymenne, and all maryners vpon the sea, shall leape out of theyr boates, & set them selues
G vpon the land. They shal lift vp theyr voice because of the, and make a lamentable crie. They shall cast dust vpon theyr heades, & lie downe in the asshes. They shal shaue thē selues, and put sackecloth vpon them for thy sake. They shall mourne for thee with heartful sorowe, and heuy lamētacion: yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cite hath so bene destroyed in the sea, as Tire is? When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the seas: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of the earthe haste thou made ryche, thorow the multitude of thy wares & occupying. But thou art now cast downe into the deepe of the sea, all thy resorte of people is perysshed with thee. All they that dwell in the yles are abasshed at thee, and all theyr kynges are afrayed: yea, theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchāntes of the nations wondre at the: In þ thou art so cleane brought to nought, and commest nomore vp.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynste the kynge of Tyrus, for his pryde. Daniel the prophet is moued to bewaile the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde against Sidon. The Lord promyseth that he will gather together the children of Israell.

Lorde GOD: For so moche as thou hast B lyft vp thyne heart as though thou were GOD: beholde, I wyll bringe enemyes vpon the, euen the tyraunes of the heathen: these shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shal defyle thy glory. They shall caste the downe to the pyt, so that thou shalte dye in the middeste of the sea, as they that bee slayne. Let see, yf thou wylte saye then (before them that slaye the) I am GOD, where as thou arte but a manne and not GOD, in the handes of them that sleye the. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to be desolate among other waste countryes, and her cyties to lye voyde fourty yeares among other voyde cyties: And I wyl scatter the Egyptians among the heathen and nacions, and strow them in the landes aboute. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * when the .xl. yeares are

They shal nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them any more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall know, that I am the Lorde God. In the .xxvii.

Yet hath Tyre geuen neyther hym nor hys hoste any rewarde, for the great trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll geue the lande of Egypte vnto Nabuchodonozor the king of Babylon, that he may take away all her substaunce, robbe her treasures, and spoyle her spoyles, to paye his hooste theyr wages withall. I wyll geue hym the lande of Egypte, for his labour that he tooke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme will I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayn among them: that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The. xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypte and of his cytyes, is bewayled.

THe woorde of the Lorde came moreouer vnto me, saying: thou sonne of manne, prophecye and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Mourne, woe worthe this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come, the darke daye of the heathen: the houre is at hande, the swearde commeth vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacions are destroyed, the Moryans lande shalbe afrayed: yea the Moryans lande, Lybia and Lidia, all theyr common people, and Chub, and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the sweard. Thus sayeth the Lord: B
The mayntayners of the land of Egypte shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe, euen vnto the towre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate coūtryes they shalbe made desolate, & among other waste cyties they shalbe wasted. And they shall know that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers goe forthe from me in shyppes, to make the careles Moryans afrayed and sorowe shall come vpon them, accordyng to the daye of Egypte, for doubtlesse it shall come. Thus sayeth the Lord God: C
I wyll make an ende of the people of Egypte thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon. He and hys people with hym, yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the heathen shall be brought to destroy the lande. They shall drawe out theyr swordes vpon Egypte, and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyll drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wycked people. The land and al that is therein, wyll I destroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it. And thus sayth D the Lorde God: * I wyll destroye the Zach. 13. 2. ydols, and bryngе the ymages of Noph to an end. There shal nomore be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse will I send into the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan the cytte. No, I will punyshe and powre my wrathfull indignacion vpon Syn, whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroy, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte. Syn shall bee in greate beaunesse, Alexandria shall bee rooted out, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe.

E sorowe. The best men of Heliopolys and Bubasto, shalbe slayne with the sweard, and caryed awaye captyue. At Caphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her doughters shalbe led away into captiuitye. Thus wil I punishe Egypte, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde. It happened in the eleuenth yeare, vpon the seuenth daye of the fyrste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of F man, I wyll breake the arme of Pharao kyng of Egypte: and loe, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, neyther shall any plaister be layde vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a sweard. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kyng of Egypte, and breake his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyll smyte the sweard out of hys handes.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scattre them among the heathen, & strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne, I wyll
G strength the arme of the kyng of Babylon, and geue hym a sweard in his hand: but I will breake Pharaos arme, so that he shal hold it before him pyteously lyke a wounded man. Yea, I wil stablish ꝑ kinge of Babylons arme, & the armes of Pharao shal fall downe: ꝑ it may be knowen that I am the Lorde, whiche geue the king of Babilon my sweard in his hãde, that he may drawe it out vpon the lande of Egypte: and that when I scattre the Egyptians among the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they may knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

A comparyson of the prosperite of Pharao with the prosperite of the Assirians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruction vnto them both.

A Moreouer, it happened in the eleuenth yeare, the fyrst day of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypte, and to all his people. Whome art thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde, Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus, with fayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes, and shotte out verye hye: hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and the depe set hym vp on hye. Rounde aboute the rootes of him, ranne there floudes of water: he sente out hys litle ryuers vnto al the trees of the fielde.
B Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the fielde, and thorowe the multytude of waters that he sente from hym, he obtayned many long braunches. All foules of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches: vnder his boughes gendred all the beastes of the fielde, and vnder his shadowe dwelt all people. Fayre and beutyfull was he in hys greatnesse and in the length of hys braunches, for his roote stode besyde great waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garden of God there was no fyrre tree lyke
C his braunches, the plane trees were not lyke the boughes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his beuty, so fayre and goodly had I made hym with the multitude of his braunches. In so muche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuye at hym. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: forasmuche as he D hath lyft vp hymselfe so hye, & stretched his toppe into the cloudes, and seeyng his harte is proude in his hyghnesse, I wyll delyuer him into the handes of the myghtiest amonge the heathen, whiche shall roote hym out. Accordyng to his wyckednesse will I cast him awaye, the enemy shall destroy hym, and the mighty menne of the heathen shall so scattre hym, that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes, and in all valeys: hys boughes shall bee broken downe to the E grounde, thorowe out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall goe from his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon him, and all the wylde beastes of the fielde shall goe aboute amonge hys braunches, so that from hence forthe, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hye as he hath done. For vnto death shal they all be delyuered vnder the earth, & go downe to the graue lyke other menne. Moreouer thus sayeth the F Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wil cause a lamentacion to be made: I wyll couer the depe vpon him, I will staunche his floudes, &

the

the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorowful for his sake, and all the trees of the fielde shal be smitten.
I wyll make the heathen shake at the sound of his fal, when I cast hym down to * hel, with them that descend into the pyt. All the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and beste trees of Libanus, yea, and al they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne wt him also in the lower habitacions: for they shall goe downe to hell wyth hym, vnto them that be slaine with the sworde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadow of his arme among the Heathen. To whom shalt thou be likened, that art so glorious and great, among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast down vnder the earth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye among vncircumcised, with them that bee slayne with ꝑ sworde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The .xxxii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kyng of Egypt. He propheneth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt through the kyng of Babilo.

IN the eleuenth yeare, the fyrste daye of the .xii. moneth, the worde of the lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of mã, take vp a lamentacion vpon * Pharao the kyng of Egypte, and saye vnto hym: ꝑ art reputed as a Lyon of the Heathen, and as a whalfyshe in the sea. Thou castest thy waters aboute thee, thou troublest the waters with thy feete, & stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: * I wyl spred my net ouer the, namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dryue thee into my yarne, for I wyl cast the vpon the lande: and let the lye vpon the field, that all the fowles of the ayre maye sit vpon thee. I will geue al the beastes of the field inough of the. Thy flesh will I cast vpõ the hilles, and fyl the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wil water the land with the aboundaunce of thy blond, euen to the mountaines, and the riuers shalbee full of thy blonde.
When thou art putte out, I wil couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme, * I wyl spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the moone shall not geue her lighte. All the lightes of heauen wyl I put out ouer the,
and bryng darkenesse vpon thy land, sayth the Lorde God. I will trouble the heartes of many people, when I bring thy destruction among the Heathen and countreyes, whome thou knowest not. Yea, I wyll make many people with theyr kinges so afraid through the, ꝑ theyr herre shal stande vp, when I shake my sworde at theyr faces. Sodainly shal they be astonyed euery man in himselfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the lorde God: the kynge of Babylons sworde shal come vpon the: wyth the swordes of the worthyes wil I smite downe thy people. All they that bee mighty amõg the Gentiles shal wast the proud pompe of Egypt, and bryng downe al her people. All the cattell also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shal come no more vpon the waters, so that neither mans foote, nor beastes claw, shal styrre thẽ anye more.
Then wyl I make theyr waters depe, and cause theyr floudes to runne like oyle, sayth the Lorde God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countrey with al that is therein, shalbee layed wast, and when I smite all them which dwel in it, that they maye know that I am ꝑ lorde.
This is the mourning that the daughters of the Heathen shall make, yea, a sorowe & lamentacion shall they take vppe vpon Egypt, and al her people, sayth the lorde God.
In the twelue yeare the fyftene day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of mã: Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypt, and cast them downe: yea, them I say, and the mighty people of the Heathen also, e with them * that dwell beneth: and wyth them that goe downe into the graue.
Down (how fayre so euer thou be) and lay the with ꝑ vncircumcised. Among those ꝑ be slaine with ꝑ sworde, shal they lye. To ꝑ sworde is she already deliuered: therefore plucke down to ꝑ ground, her & al her multitude. The mighty worthies shal speake to him out of ꝑ hel, & to his helpers that be gone down & lye vncircumcised, & with thẽ ꝑ be slaine with the sworde. Assur is there also with his companye, and their graues round about, which wer slain & fel al with the sworde, whose graues lie beside him in ꝑ low pit. His commens are buried round about his graue, altogether wounded and slaine with ꝑ sworde, which men afore time brought feare into the lande of the liuing.
* There is Elam also with all his people, and theyr graues rounde about: whiche al beyng wounded & slaine with the sworde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the yearth, whyche neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the liuyng: for the which they beare theyr shame, with the other that be gone down to the graue.
Theyr buriall is gruen them, and al theyr people, among them that be slaine. Their graues are rounde about all them whiche bee vncircumcised, and with them that bee slaine through the sworde: for seeyng that in tymes past, they made the land of the liuyng afrayde, they muste nowe beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pit, and lye among them that be slaine.

There is Meschech also and Tuball, and their people, and their graues rounde about. These al are among the vncircumcised, & them that be slaine with the sworde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the liuing afrayd. Should not they then lye also among the worthies and vncircumcised gyauntes, which with their weapons are gone downe to hel, whose swordes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthies they haue brought feare into the land of the liuing. Yea, among the vncircumcised shalte thou bee destroyed, and G slepe with them that perished through the sworde. There is the land of * Edom with her kynges and princes also, whiche wyth their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the sworde, yea, among the vncircumcised, and they which are gone downe into the pit. Moreouer, ther be al the princes of the north, wyth all the Sydonyans, whiche are gone downe to the slaine. With their feare and strength they are come to confusyon, and lye there vncircumcised among those that be slaine with the sworde, and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pitte. Nowe when Pharao seeth this, he shalbe coumforted ouer all his people that is slayne wyth the sworde, both Pharao and all his hooste, sayeth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the liuing. But Pharao and all his people shall lye among the vncircumcysed, and among them that bee slayne with the sworde, sayth the lord god.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

He setteth out the office of a minister that preacheth the gospell. He strengtheneth them that dispayre, & boldeneth them with the promise of mercye. The woorde of the Lorde against the remnaunte of the people. Against the mockers of the woordes of the prophete.

AGayne the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sone of manne. Speake to the children of thy people, and tel them: Whe I sende a sworde vpon a lande, if the people of the lande take a man of their countrey, and set hym to be their * watcherman, * Heb. 1 the same man (when he seeth the sworde come vpon the lande) shall blow the trompet, and warne the people. If a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet and wil not be warned, and the sworde come and take him away, his bloud shalbe vpon his own heade: for he heard the sounde of the trompet, and wouldе not take hede, therfore his bloud be vpon hym. But yf he wyl receyue warnynge, he shall saue hys lyfe. Agayne, yf the watchman see the sworde come and blowe it not with the trompette, so that þ B people is not warned: yf the sworde come then and take any man from among them, the same shalbee taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I require of the watchmans hande. * And nowe (O thou sonne of mã) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israell, þ where as thou heareste any thyng out of my mouth, thou mayeste warne them on my behalfe. If I say vnto þ wicked: thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye, and thou geueste him not warnyng, that he maye be ware of his vngodlye waye: then shall the wicked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wil I require of thy hand. Neuertheless, yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyl not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of hys synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house C of Israell. Yea, saye thus: Our offences & sinnes lye vpon vs, & we be corrupt in thẽ, how should we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tel them: * As truly as I liue saith þ lord god, I haue no pleasure in þ death of þ wicked, but much rather that the wicked turne frõ his way, & liue. Turne you, turne you, frõ your vngodly wayes, O ye of þ house of Israel. Oh, wherfore wil ye dye? Thou sonne of man, tel the children of thy people. * The righteousnes of the ryghteous shal not saue him, whensoeuer he turneth away vnfaythfully. Again, the wickednes of the wicked shall not hurte him, whensoeuer he conuerteth from hys vngodlynesse.

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue hys lyfe, whansoeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the righteous þ he shall surely lyue, and so he truste to his owne righteousnesse, and do synne, thẽ shal his righteousnes be no more thought vpõ, but in the wickednes that he hath done, he D shall dye. * Againe, yf I say vnto the wicked: thou shalt surelye dye, and so he turne

from his synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryghte: Insomuche that the same wicked man geueth the pledge again, restoreth that he had take away by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong: The shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, shall neuer bee thoughte vpon. For insomuche as he doth nowe the thyng that is lawful and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye: Tushe, the waye of the lord is not ryght, but they lye, whereas theyr owne waye is rather vnryght. When the righteous turneth fro his righteousnes and doth ỳ thyng that is wicked, he shal die therfore. But yf the wicked turne from hys wickednesse, doing the thynge that is lawfull and ryghte, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: *the way of the lorde is not equall: O ye house of Israell * I will iudge euerye one of you after hys waies. In the twelueth yeare, the fyfte day of ỳ x. moneth of our captiuity, it happened, that one whych was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cyty is destroyed. Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpō me, the euening afore this mā (which was escaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntil ỳ morning that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouth, so ỳ I was no more dum. Thē came the word of ỳ lord vnto me, and said: Thou sonne of mā, these ỳ dwel in the wasted land of Israel, say: Abraham was but one man, & he had ỳ land in possessiō: now are we many, & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tel thē: Thus saith ỳ lord god. * In the bloud haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lift vp to ydols, * and haue shed bloude: shall ye then haue the land in possession? Ye leane vpon your sweordes, ye worke abhominacions, euery one defileth his neighbours wife: & shal ye then possesse ỳ lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto thē. Thus saith ỳ lord god. As truly as I lyue, al ye ỳ dwel in this wildernes, shalbe slayne with ỳ sweord: whatso euer is vpō the field, wil I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: these that bein strong holdes & dennes, shal dye of ỳ pestilence. For I wil make the lād so desolate and wast, and the pompe of her strength shal come to an ende. The mountaines of Israel shalbe so wast, that no mā shall trauayle therby. * Then shall they learne to know that I am the Lord, whē I make the lande waste and desolate, because of al theyr abhominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of manne, the children of thy people that talke of thee by the walles & in the doores of their houses, saying one to another: Come, lette vs heare what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the, after the maner of a greate people: yea, as who sayeth they wer my people: they sit down before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not therafter: for in their mouthes they make a iest of thē, & theyr hart goeth after theyr own couetous lucre, & as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wil not doe therafter.

When this commeth to passe (for loe, it commeth in dede) then shall they knowe ỳ there hath bene a Prophete among them.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

Against Bishops and curates that despise the flocke of Christ, and seke theyr owne. The lord sayeth that he wyll visit his dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malice of certeine of the flocke. He promiseth the true shepeharde Christ, and wyth hym peace.

AND the word of the lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of manne, prophecye agaynste the shepeheardes of Israell, prophecy and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. * Woe bee vnto the shepeheardes of Israell, that fede themselues. Should not ỳ shepeherdes fede ỳ flockes? Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the beste fedde haue ye slaine, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, * ỳ sicke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the out castes haue ye not broughte agayne: the losse haue ye not sought, but * thurlishely and cruelye haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatered here and there without a shepeheard: yea, all the beastes of the fielde deuoure them, and they goe astray. My shepe goe wandring vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euerye hye hyll: yea, they bee scatered abroade in all fieldes, and there is no manne that careth for them, or seketh after them. Therefore O ye shepeheardes, heare the woorde of the Lorde. Thus saieth the Lord God: As truelye as I liue, forsomuche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured, of all the wilde beastes of the field, hauing no shepeheard: & seeing that my shepeheardes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede themselues only, and not my shepe: Therefore heare ỳ woord of the Lord (O ye shepheardes.) C Thus sayth the lorde god: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepheardes: and require my shepe from theyr handes, and make thē cease frō feding of my shepe: yea the shepe-heardes shall fede themselues nomore. For I will deliuer my shepe out of theyr mou-thes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this: For thus sayth the Lorde God:

* Ioh.10.a Iacob.15.b 1.Pet.5.a * Beholde, I will loke to my shepe my selfe and seke thē. Like as a shepeheard among the flocke seketh after the shepe that are sca-tered abroad, euen so wyl I seeke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scatered in the cloudy and darke daye. I wyl bringe them out from al people, and gather them together out of all landes. I wyll bryng them D in to theyr owne land, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrye. I wyl fede them in ryght good pastures, and vp-on the hye mountaynes of Israell shall theyr foldes bee. There shall they lye in a good fold, & in a fat pasture shal they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israell. I will fede my shepe my selfe, & bring them to * Luk.4.b Ioh.10.a their rest, saith the Lord god. * Suche as be lost will I seke: such as go astray, will I bring again: such as bee wounded, wyll I bind vp: suche as bee weake, will I make strong: such as be fat & strong, those will I roote out, & fede thē with the thing that is C lawful. And as for you (O my shepe) saith *mat.25.c the lord god, * I wil put a difference among the shepe, among the wethers and the goates.
Was it not inough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must tread down the residue of your pasture with your fete also? & as it not ynough for you to drincke clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your fete? Thus my shepe must be faine to eate the thing, the ye haue troden down wt your feete, & to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therfore thus saith the lord god vnto them: Behold, I will seuer the fat shepe frō the leane: forsomuch as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sides and shoulders, and runne vpon them wyth your hornes, so long tyl ye haue btterlye scatered them abroade. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shal no more be spoiled: yea, I wyll discerne one shepe from an other. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one one-lye shepeheardе, euen my seruaunte * Da-
* Ye.34.b & Acte.3.c. uyd, he shall fede them, and he shall bee Iere.3.a. theyr shepeheardе. I the Lorde wyll bee theyr God, and my seruaunte * Dauid shal bee theyr prynce. Euen I the Lorde haue I spoken it. Moreouer, I wyl make a counaunte of peace with them, and dryue all euyll beastes out of the lande: so that they maye dwell safelye in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperitye wyll I geue them, and vnto * Da-all that bee rounde aboute my hyll. * I uid.a prosperous showre, and rayne, wil I send them in due season, that the trees in the wood maye bringe foorth theyr fruites, and the grounde her encrease. They shal be safe in theyr lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue broken their yocke, and deliuered thē out of the handes G of those that held them in subiection. They shall nomore be spoyled of the Heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande:
but safely shall they dwell, and no manne shal fraye them. I will set vp an excellente plante for them, so that they shall suffer no more hunger in the land, neither beare the repryse of the heathē any more. Thus shal they vnderstand, þ I the lord their God am with thē, and þ they (euē þ house of Israel) are my people, sayeth the Lord God. Ye *ps.95.a and.99.b mē are my flocke, * ye are þ shepe of my pa-ture: and I am your god, saith þ lord god.

there shall no manne goe thyther, nor come tries, and riuers, shal lye ful of them that are slayne with the sweorde. I wil make thee a perpetual wildernes, so that thy cityes shall not returne to theyr former estate, that ye may know how that I am the Lorde. And because thou hast said: what, both these nacions, and both these lãdes, must be mine, & I will haue them in possession * where as the Lorde was there: Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: as truly as I liue, I wil handle thee according to thy wrath and gelousye, lyke as thou hast delt cruelly with them: that I may be knowen among thẽ, how I haue punished thee. Yea, & that thou also maist be sure, that I the lord haue heard al thy despytefull wordes, whiche thou haste spoken agaynste the mountaynes of Israel, saying: Loe, they are made waste, & geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with youre mouthes ye haue made youre boaste against me, yea, & multiplied your proud wordes against me, which I haue heard altogether. Whereunto, thus sayeth the Lord god: to the ioy of al the world wil I make thee waste. * And like as thou (O mount Seyr) wast glad, because the heritage of ỹ house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wil I do vnto thee also, that thou and whole Edom shalbe destroied, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

The prophete sheweth deliuerance from the Gentiles vnto Israel. The benefites done vnto ỹ Iewes are to be ascribed to the mercye of God, not vnto theyr desertinges. God renueth our hartes that we may walke in his commaundementes.

THou sonne of man, prophecy vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * heare the worde of the lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth ỹ lord god: because your enemy hath said vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastyng places are nowe become ours: Prophecye therfore, and speake: thus sayth the lord God. Seeyng ye bee wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles: whiche haue broughte you into mennes mouthes, and vnto an euill name among the people: Therfore, heare the woorde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleyes, and dales, to the voyde wildernesse and desolate cityes, whiche are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of the heathen: yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyse agaynste the residue of the Gentiles, and agaynste all * Edom: which haue taken in my land vnto themselues for a possession: whiche also reioyced from theyr whole hearte with a despiteful mynde, to waste it, & to spoyle it. Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaines and hilles, to valleyes and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beeholde, this haue I deuysed in my gelousye and terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffered reprofe of the heathen, therfore thus sayth the lord god: I haue sworne that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shall beare theyr confusion themselues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shal shote out your braunches, & bring furth your fruite to my people of Israel, for it is hard by that it wil come. Behold, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye may be tilled and sowen. I will sende you muche people, whiche shalbe al of the house of Israell, the cities shalbee inhabited, and the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne: I will prouyde you with muche people and cattel, which shal encrease and bring fruite: I will restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before, wherby ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde: yea, people wil I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whiche shall haue ther in possession, and thou shalte be theyr inheritaunce, so that thou shalte no more be without thẽ. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God: For so much as they say vnto you: thou arte an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no more menne, neyther destroye thy people any more, sayeth the Lorde God. And I wil not suffre thee for to heare thyne owne confusion, amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprofe of the nacions, nor caste out thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God. Moreouer, the woorde of the lorde came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israell dwelt vpon theyr owne grounde, they defyled themselues with theyr own wayes and ymaginacions: so that in my syght theyr way was lyke the vncleannesse of a menstruous woman. Wherefore I powred my wrathful displeasure vpon them, because of the blonde that they had shed in the lande, and because of theyr ydoles, wherwith they had defyled themselues. I scatered them also among the heathē, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordyng to theyr wayes and after theyr owne inuencions, so did I punishe them. * Now when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amonge them, they dishonored my holye name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of god, and must goe out of their owne land. Thē I spared my holy name which the house of Israell had dishonored among the Gentiles, to whome they came. Therfore tell the house of Israell. Thus sayth the lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonored among ꝑ heathē, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halow my great name agayn, which among the Gentiles is euil spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonored it among thē. And ꝑ gentiles shal know that I am ꝑ lord, when I am honored in you before theyr eyes, sayth the lord god. As for you, I wil take you from amōg the Heathen, and gather you together out of al countreyes, and bring you agayne into your owne lande. * Thē wil I powre clere water vpon you, & ye shalbe cleane: yea, from all your vnclennes, and from al your idols shal I clense you. A new heart also wil I geue you, & a new spirite wil I put into you. As for ꝑ stony heart, I will take it out of youre body & geue you a fleshy hearte. I will geue my spirite among you * & cause you to walke in my cōmaundemēres, to kepe my lawes, & to fulfyl thē. And so ye shall dwel in the land, ꝑ I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shal be my people, and I wil be your God. I wil helpe you out of all your vnclennesse. I will call for the corne, and will encrease it, and lette you haue no hunger. I wil multiply ꝑ frutes of the trees, and the increase of the fielde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reproue of hūger among the Heathen. Thē shal ye remēbre your owne wicked waies and your ymaginacions, which were not good: so that ye shal thinke that ye were worthy to be destroyed, for your sinnes and abhominacions.

But I wil not doe this for your sakes (sayeth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: What tyme as I shall clense you from all youre offences, then wil I make the cities to be occupyed agayne, and will repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be builded agayn, which afore time laye waste in the syghte of all them that went by. Then shall it bee sayde: thys waste lande is become lyke a gardyne of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate, and broke downe cities, are nowe strong and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken downe, and plant againe that that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wil doe it in dede. Thus sayeth the lord God: I wil yet once be founde agayn of the house of Israel, & doe this for them: * I shal encrease them as a flock of men: Lyke as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalē are in the hye solemne feastes: so shall also the wylde wasted cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they shal know that I am the Lorde.

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophecieth the bringing agayne of the people, bring in captiuitie. She sheweth the vnion of the ten trybes with the two.

The hand of the lord came vpon me, and caried me oute in the spirite of the lord, & let me down in a playne field, that lay ful of bones, and he led me round about by them: & behold, ꝑ bones that lay vpon the fielde, were very many and maruelous drye also. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sōne of mā: thinkest thou these bones may liue againe? I answered: O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he said vnto me. Prophecy thou vpō these bones, and speake vnto them. Ye drye bones, heare ꝑ word of the lorde. Thus sayeth the lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyll put breathe into you, ꝑ ye may liue: I will geue you sinowes and make fleshe grow vpon you, and couer you ouer with skinne: & so geue you * brieth, that ye may lyue, and know that I am the lord. So I prophecied, as he had cōmaunded me. And as I was prophecying, there came a noyse and a great mocion, so that the bones ran euery one to another. Now when I had loked, beholde, they had sinowes, and fleshe grew vpon vpon them:and aboue they were couered with skinne,but there was no brethe in them. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou C sonne of man,prophecy thou toward the winde:prophecy and speake to the wind. Thus sayeth the Lorde God.Come (O thou ayre) from the foure wyndes,and blow vpon these slayn,that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied as he had commaũded me:then came the brethe into them,& they receiued life,& stode vp vpon their fete,a meruelous great sort. Moreouer,he sayd vnto me:Thou sõne of man,these bones are the whole house of Israel.Behold,they saye:Our bones are dryed vp,oure hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therfore prophecy thou,& D speake vnto them:thus sayeth the lorde god.Behold,I wil open your graues(o my people)and take you out of your sepulchres,and bring you into the land of Israel agayne. So shal ye knowe that I am the lorde,when I open your graues and bryng you out of them.My spirite also wil I put in you,and ye shall liue: I wil set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shal knowe that I am the Lorde whiche haue sayde it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The woorde of the Lorde came vnto me,saying:thou sonne of manne,take a sticke, and write vpon it:Vnto Juda and to the childrẽ of Israel his companions. Then take another sticke and write vpõ E it:Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israell hys companyons.And then take bothe these together in thyne hande, so shal there bee one sticke thereof. Now if the children of thy people saye vnto the, wilte thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answere:thus saith the Lorde:beholde, * I will take the Ezech.37.b. stocke of Joseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim,and of the tribes of Israell hys felowes, and wyll put them to the stocke of Juda, and make thẽ one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hande.And the two stickes whereupon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande,that they may se,and shalt say vnto them.

F Thus sayth the lord God:beholde, I wil take away the children of Israell from among the Heathen, vnto whome they be gone,and will gather them together on euerye syde, and bryng them agayne into theyr owne lande:yea, I will make one people of them in the lande,vpon the mountaynes of Israel,and they all shal haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples from henceforth, neither be deuided into two kingdomes, they shal also defyle thẽselues no more with theyr abhominacions, Idols,and al theyr wicked dooynges. I will helpe them out of all theyr dwellyng places, wherin they haue synned:and wil so clẽse them,that they shalbe my people,and I theyr God.

Dauyd my seruaunte shall be theyr G kyng, and they all shall haue one shepeheard onelye. They shall walke in my lawes,and my commaundementes shal they both kepe & fulfill. They shal dwell in the lande,that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunte, where as your fathers also haue dwelte:yea,euen in the same lande shal they,theyr chyldren, and theyr childres children dwel for euermore,and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlasting prince.Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace with them, whiche shalbe vnto them an euerlasting couenant. I wil sette them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuary wil I sette among them for Leu.26.b euermore. * My dwellyng shall be with them:yea,I will be theyr God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israell, when my Sanctuary shalbe among them for euermore.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

The prophecieth that Gog and Magog shal come with an appoynted hoost into the lande of promes. Theyr entent. He rehearseth that the cummyng of Gog was before prophecied of the prophetes. The destruccion of hym.

AND the woorde of the Lorde came I vnto me,saying: Thou sonne of mã, turne thy face toward Gog ꝓ lande of Magog,whiche is the chiefe prince at Mesech and Tuball:prophecy agaynste hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God:* O Gog thou chiefe prince of Me- Eze.39.b. sech and Tubal: beholde, I will vpon Apoc.20.c thee,and will turne thee aboute, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I will bryng thee foorth and all thy hooste,both horse and horsemen,which be all weaponed of the beste fashion:a great people,that handle altogether speares,shyldes,and sweordes:the Perses,Mozians,and with thẽ the Libyans, which all beare shyldes & helmettes:Gomer and all hys hoostes:

The. xxxix. Chapter.

Deſcꝛibeth the deſtruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoſte. The prophecieth that Gog and hys companye ſhall bee deuoured of byꝛdes and beaſtes: wherfoꝛe the houſe of Iſrael is waſted: Theyr bꝛyngyng agayne from captiuitie, is promiſed.

people of Israell: and I will not let my holy name be euyl spoken of, anye more: but the very Heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde the holy one of Israell. Beholde, it cummeth, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue spoken. They that dweil in the cities of Israell, shall goe furth and set fyre vpon the weapons, & burne them: shieldes & speares, bowes, and arowes, billes and clubbes: seuen yeres shal they be burning therof, so that they shall cities bryng no stickes from the field, neither haue nede to hewe down any out of the wood. For they shal haue weapons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, saith the Lord god. At the same tyme wil I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley, where thorowe men goe from the east to the sea ward. Those that trauayle therby, shall stoppe theyr noses for stenche. There shall Gog and all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be burying of them, þ they may clēse þ land: yea, al þ people of the land shal bury thē. O, it shal be a glorious day when I get me þ honour, sayth the lorde God. They shal ordeine men also to be dead buriers, euer going thorow the land: & appoynte them certayne places to burye those in, whiche remayne vpon the fielde, that the lande may be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seeke, and that seuen monethes long. Nowe those that goe thorowe the lande, where they see a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, til the dead buriers haue buryed it also in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citye shall bee called Hamonah (that is, a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man, thus sayth the lord god. Speake vnto al the fowles and euery byrd, yea & to al þ wild beastes of þ field: heape you together and come gather you rounde about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you, euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate flesh and drynke bloude. ye shall eate the flesh of the woorthies, and drinke the bloud of the prynces of þ lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that bee all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belly full, and drinke bloud, till ye be dronken, of þ slaughter which I haue slayne vnto you. Fil you at my table with horses and strong horsemen, with captaynes & men of warre, saith the lord god. I wil bring my glory also among the Gentiles, that al the Heathen may see my iudgemente, þ I haue kept, and my hand which I haue layd vpon them: that the house of Israel may know, how that I am the Lorde theyr God from that daye furth. And the Heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israell were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that they might all be slayne with the sweord. According to theyr vnclenneſſe and vnfaythful dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now wil I bryng agayne the captiues of Iacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and bee gelous for my names sake. All theyr confusion and offence that they haue doone agaynste me, shall be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in theyr lande, that no manne shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought them agayne from among the people, when I haue gathered them together oute of theyr enemyes landes, and am prayſed in thē beefore many Heathen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whiche suffered them to bee ledde into captiuitie among the Heathen. But nowe haue I brought them agayne into theyr owne lande, and haue not lefte one of them ponder. After that, will I hyde my face no more from them, *but will powre oute my spiryte vpon the house of Israell, sayeth the Lorde God. *Ez.16.b

The.xl. Chapter.

The restoryng of the cyties and of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the Prophete.

In the.xxv. yere of oure captiuitye, in the beegynnyng of the yere, the tenth daye of the moneth: that is, the xiiii. yere after þ the citie was smitten downe, the same day came the hand of the lord vpon me, & caryed me furth: euē into þ land of Israel brought he me in þ visions of god: & set me ſette me downe vpon a meruelous hye mountayn, wherupon there was a building (as it had beene of a citie) towarde the north. Thither he caryed me, and behold there was a man, whoſe ſimilitude was lyke braſſe, which had a threede of flaxe in his hand, and a meterod alſo. He ſtode in the doze, and ſayd vnto me: thou ſonne of man, marke wel with thine eies, harken to with thyne eares, and faſten it in thine heart, whatſoeuer I ſhal ſhewe the: for to that intent that they might be ſhewed thee, therfore art thou broughte hither. And whatſoeuer thou ſeeſt, thou ſhalt certify the houſe of Iſraell therof.

B Behold, there was a wal on the outſide round about the houſe: the meterod that he had in his hande, was .vi. cubites lõg and a ſpan. So he meaſured the bredth of the building, whiche was a meterod, and the heigth alſo a meterod. Then came he vnto the eaſte dooze, and went vp the ſtayres, and meaſured the poſtes of the dooze, wherof euery one was a meterod thicke. Euery chaumbre was a meterod long and brode: betweene the chaumbres were fyue cubites. The poſt of the doze within the porche, was one meterod. He meaſured alſo the porch of the innermer doze, which contayned a meterod. Then meaſured he the entry of the dooze, that contayned eyghte cubites, and hys pyl-lers two cubites, and thys entry ſtoode C inwarde. The chaumbres of the dooze eaſtward, were .iii. on euery ſyde: a lyke brode and longe. The pyllers alſo that ſtode on both the ſydes, were of one meſure. After thys, he meaſured the wyde-nes of the dooze, whiche was tenne cu-bites, and the heyghte of the dooze thyr-teene cubites. The edge before the chambres was one cubite broade vpon both the ſydes, and the chambres ſixe cubites wyde of eyther ſyde. He meaſured the dooze from the ridge of one chambre to another, whoſe wideneſſe, was .xxv. cu-bites, and one dooze ſtode agaynſt another. He made pyllers alſo .lx. cubites hie, round about the courte doze. Before the inwarde part vnto the foze entree of the innermoze dooze, were fifty cubites. The chambres and theyr pyllers within roũde about vnto the dooze had ſyde windowes. So had the foze entries alſo, whoſe windowes went round about within. And vpon the pillers there ſtode date trees. Then brought he me into the foze court, where as were chambres and paued woozkes, made in the foze courte round about. xxx. chaumbres vpon one paued woozke. Now the paued woozke was along beſyde the dozes: that was the lower paued woozke. After thys he meaſured the bredthe from the lower dooze, vnto the innermoze courte of the outſyde, which had an hũdreth cubites vpon the eaſt and the northpart. And the doze in the vttermoſt court toward the northe, meaſured he after the length and bredth: hys three chambres alſo on either ſyde with hys pyllers and foze entries, which had euen the meaſure of the firſte doze. Hys heygthe was .l. cubites, the bredth .xxv. cubites, his windowes and porches with hys date trees, had euen like meaſure as the doze toward ꝑ eaſt: there were ſeauen ſteppes to go vp vpõ, and theyr porche before them. Now the dooze of ꝑ innermer court ſtode ſtreight D ouer agaynſt the doze, that was toward the northeaſt. From one doze to another he meaſured an .C. cubites. After that, he brought me to the ſouthſyde wher there ſtode a doze toward ꝑ ſouth: whoſe pillers & porches he meaſured, theſe had ꝑ firſte meaſure: & with theyr porches they had windowes round about, like ꝑ firſte windowes. The heygth was .l. cubites, the breadth .xxv. with ſteppes to goe vp vpon: his porche ſtoode before with hys pillers & date trees on eyther ſyde. And ꝑ doze of ꝑ innermer court ſtode towarde ꝑ ſouth, & he meſured frõ one doze to another, an .C. cubites. So he brought me into the innermer courte, thorow ꝑ doze of the ſouthſyde whiche he meſured: & it had the meſure afore ſayd. In like maner his chambres, pyllers, & forentries, had euẽ the foreſaid meſure alſo. And he had wt his porches round about windowes of .l. cubites heygthe, and .xxv. cubites brode. The porches round about were xxv. cubites long, and .v. cubites brode: and hys porche reached vnto the vtter-moſt court: vpon his pillers, there were date trees, & .viii. ſteppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me alſo into the inmoſt
E courte vpon the Eaſteſyde, and meſured the dooze accordyng to the meſure afore ſaid, his chambres, pillers and porches had euen the ſame meaſure, as the firſte had: and with his porches he had windowes rounde about. The heigth was .l. cubites, ꝑ bredth .xxv cubites: his porch reached

reached vnto the vtermoſt courte: hys pillers alſo had date trees on either ſide and.viii.ſteppes to goe vp vpon. And he brought me to the nozth dooze, and meaſured it, whiche alſo had the fozeſayde meaſure. His chaumbers, pillers, & pozches had windowes roũdabout: whoſe heygth was.l.cubites, and the bzeadth xxv. His pillers ſtode towarde ꝑ vtmoſt courte, and vpon them both were date trees, and.viii.ſteppes to goe vp vpon. There ſtode a chaumbze alſo, whoſe entraunce was at the dooze pyllers, and there the burnte offringes were waſhed.

F In the dooze pozch there ſtoode on either ſyde, two tables foz the ſlaughtynge, to ſlaye the burnt offeringes, ſinofferinges, and treſpaceofferinges therupon. And on the outſide as men go furth to the nozth dooze, there ſtode two tables. Foure tables ſtode on eyther ſyde of the dooze, ꝑ is.viii.tables: wherupon they ſlaughted. Foure tables were of hewen ſtone foz the burntofferinges, of a cubite and a halfe long and bzode, and one cubite hye: wherevpon were layed the veſſelles and ornamentes which were vſed to ꝑ burnt and ſlayne offerynges, when they were ſlaughted. And within there were hokes, foure fyngers bzoade, faſtened round about to hang fleſhe vpon, and vpon the tables was layde the offering fleſhe. On the outſyde of the innermoze dooze, were the ſyngers chaumbzes, in the inwarde courte beſyde the nozthe dooze ouer againſt the ſouth. There ſtode one alſo beſyde the eaſt dooze nozthwarde. And he

G ſayde vnto me: Thys chaumbze on the ſouthe ſyde beelongeth to the ꝓpieſtes, that kepe the habitaciõ: and this toward the nozth, * is the ꝓpieſtes that wayte vpon the aulter, whiche be the ſonnes of *Sadoch, that dooe ſeruice beefoze the Lozde in ſteade of the childzen of Leui. So he meaſured ꝑ fozecourt, which had in lengthe an.C.cubites, and aſmuche in bzedth by the foure cozners. Nowe the aulter ſtoode beefoze the houſe. And he brought me to the foze entry of ꝑ houſe, and meaſured the walles by the entrye dooze, which were fyue cubites long on eyther ſyde. The thyckeneſſe alſo of the doze on eyther ſyde, was thzee cubites. The length of ꝑ pozche was.xx.cubites: the bzedth.xi.cubites, and vpon ſteppes went menne vp to it: by the walles alſo were pillers, on eyther ſyde one.

The.xli.Chapter.

The diſpoſition and dreſſe of buildyng agayne the temple, & of the other thinges therto belonging.

A Fter this he brought me to the temple, and meſured the poſtes, which were of bothe ſydes ſyxe cubites thicke, accozdyng to the wydenes of the tabernacle. The bzedth of the dooze was ten cubites, and the walles of the dooze on either ſide fyue cubites. He meaſured the length therof, which conteyned.xl.cubites, and the bzedth.xx. Then wẽt he in and meaſured the dooze poſtes, whiche were.ii.cubites thycke: but the dooze it ſelfe was.vi.cubites, and the bzedth of ꝑ dooze was ſeuen cubites. He meaſured the length & bzedth therof, which wer euery one twenty cubites, befoze the temple. And he ſayd vnto me this is the holyeſt of all. He meaſured alſo the wall of the houſe, whiche was.vi.cubites. The chambzes ꝑ ſtode roũd about the houſe, wer euery one foure cubites wide: & one ſtode harde vpon an other, wherof there were.xxxiii. Ther ſtode poſtes bevveth by the walles roũd about ꝑ houſe, to beare them vp, but in ꝑ walle of the houſe they were not faſtened. The ſyde chaumbzes were the hyer the wyder, & had ſteppes thozow the round about ꝑ houſe. Thus

B was it wyder aboue, that from the loweſt, men might goe to the hyeſt by the mid chambzes. I ſaw alſo that the houſe was very hye round about. The foũdacion of the ſide chambzes was a metrod, that is.vi.cubites, bzode. The thickneſſe of the ſyde wall without, contayned.v. cubites, & ſo did the outwal of the chambzes in the houſe.

Beetweene the chaumbzes was the wydenes.xx.cubites, rounde aboute the houſe. The chaumbze doozes ſtoode ouer agaynſte the outewall, the one dooze was toward ꝑ nozthe, the other toward the Southe: and the thyckeneſſe of the outwalle was fyue cubites roumde about. Now the building that was ſeparated towarde the weſte, was.lxx.cubites wyde: the walle of the buildynge was.v.cubites thycke, rounde aboute, and the lengthe, foure ſcoze cubites and teme. So he meaſured the houſe, which was an.C.cubites long: and the ſeparated building with the walle, were an.C. cubites long alſo. The widnes befoze ꝑ houſe, and of it that was ſeparated toward the eaſt, was an.C.cubites.

And

C And he measured the lengthe of the buildyng before and behynde, with the chaumbres vpon both the sydes, and it contayned an. C. cubites. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore courte, the syde postes, these three had syde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde about ouer against the postes, from the grounde vp to the windowes. The windowes them selues were syled ouer with boordes: and thus was it aboue the doore vnto the inmost house, and without also. Yea, ꝑ whole walle on euery syde, both within & without, was syled ouer with great boordes. There were cherubyns and date trees made also, so ꝑ one date tree stode euer betwixt two Cherubins. One D Cherub had two faces, the face of a man loking aside towarde the date tree, and a Lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made round about in al ꝑ house. Yea the Cherubins and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the doore, and so stoode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The poposites of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuarye was * euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the visyon. The table was of wood iii. cubites hye, and ii. cubites long: hys corners, the lengthe, and the walles were of wood. And he sayde vnto me. This is ꝑ table that shal stand before the Lord. The temple, and the holiest of all had either of them two doores, and euerye doore had two litle wicketes which were folden in, one vpon an other, on euery side two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the walles: and a great thick balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Vpon both the sides of the walles of the porche, ther were made depe windowes and date trees, hauing beames & balkes lyke as the house had.

The xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the preestes, and the holy thinges.

I Then caried he me oute into the fore court toward the north, & brought me into ꝑ chambre that stode ouer against the backebuilding northwarde, which had the lengthe of an. C. cubites, whose doore turned toward ꝑ north. The wydnes contayned. l. cubites: ouer against the. xx. cubites of the innermer court and against the paued worke that was in the court, besyde all these three, there stoode pillers, one ouer against another. And before this chaumbre there was a walking place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and theyr doores toward the north. Thus ꝑ hyest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buildyng, for they bare chaumbre vpon chaumbre, & stode three together one vpon an other, not hauing pillers lyke the fore courte: therefore were they smaller then those beneth, and in the middest, to reken from the grounde vpward. The wal B without that stode by the chaumbres toward the vttermost court vpon the foreside of ꝑ chambres, was. l. cubites long, for the length of the vttermost chambres in the fore courte was. l. cubites also: but the lēgth therof before ꝑ temple, was an. C. cubites. These chaumbres had vnder them an entraūce of ꝑ eastside, whereby a man might go into thē out of ꝑ fore court thorow the thicke wall of ꝑ fore courte toward the east, right ouer against ꝑ separated building. Before the same building vpon thys syde, there were chaumbres also, which had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambre on the northsyde, of the same length and wydenes. Theyr entrance, fashion, & doores, were also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chambre doores were, so were those also of the southsyde. And before the way toward the syngers steppes on the eastsyde, there stode a doore to go in at. The sayd he vnto me: The chambres toward the north and the south whiche stand before the backe building: those be holy habitacions, wherin the preestes that doo seruice before the lord, must eat the most holy offerynges: and there must they lay ꝑ most holy offeringes: meate offeringes synneofferinges, and trespace offeringes, for it is an holy place. When the preestes come therin, they shal not go out into the fore courte: but (seing they be holy) they shal leaue the clothes of theyr ministracion, and put on other garmentes, when they haue any thing to do with ꝑ people. Nowe when he had measured all the in- D nermer house, he broughte me foorthe thorowe the easte porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east side with the meterod, which rounde aboute contayned. v. c. meterodes: And

the

the northside measured he, whiche conteyned rounde aboute euen so muche. The other two sides also toward the south and the west, whiche he measured, conteined either of them .v. hundred meterods. So he measured al the .iiii. sides, wher ther went it wall round about, v. hundred meterods long, and as broade also, which seperated the holy from the vnholy.

The .xlui. Chapter.

He seeth the glory of God going into the Temple from whēce it had before departed. He mentioneth the idolatry of the children of Israel, for the which they were consumed and brought to nought: he is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

AFter he brought me to the dore þ turneth toward the Este. Behold, then came þ glory of þ god of Israel, from out of the East, whose voice was like a great noyse of waters, & the yearth was lightened with hys glory. His sight to loke vpon was * like the sight that I sawe, when I wente in, what time as þ city shoulde haue bene destroyed: * and like the visyon that I sawe by þ water of Cobar. Then fel I vpō my face: but the glory of the lorde came into the house, through þ East dore. So a wind toke me vp, & brought me into the innermer court: & behold, the house was ful of the glory of þ lord. I heard one speakyng vnto me out of the house, & ther stode one by me, þ sayde vnto me: O þ sonne of man, * thys rouine is my seat, and the place of my sote steps, whereas I wil dwel among the children of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shal no more defile my holye name: neither they, nor their kinges through their whordome, through their hye places, and through the deade bodies of their kynges: whiche haue builded theyr thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholdes, & theyr postes almost at my postes, and a wal betwixt me and them. Thus haue they defiled my holy name with their abhominacions, þ they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed thē in my wrath. But now they shal put away their whordom, & the deade bodyes of their kynges oute of my sight, that I may dwel among them for euermore. * Therfore O thou sonne of man, shew þ the houshold of Israel a temple þ they male be ashamed of their wickednes, & measure themselues an example thereat. And when they bee ashamed of all theyr workes, then shew thē the fourme & fashion of the temple, þ comming in, the goinge out, all the maner and description thereof. yea, al the vses and ordinaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfil al the fashions and customes therof. This is the description of the house. Aboue vpon the mount rounde about al þ corners, it shalbe þ holiest of all. Beholde, þ is the description & fashion of the house. This is the measure of the alter, after þ true cubite, whiche is a span longer thē another cubite: his bottom in the middest was a cubite long and wide, and the ledge þ went round about it, was a span broad. This is the heigth of the alter. Frō the ground to þ lower steps, the length is two cubites, and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower steps to the higher, are .iiii. cubites and the bredth but one cubite.

* The alter was foure cubytes hye, and from the alter vpwarde stoode foure hornes, and it was twelue cubites longe, and twelue cubites broade vpon the foure corners: the couering of the alter was .xiiii. cubytes longe, and broade vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute hadde halfe a cubyte, and the bottome thereof rounde aboute one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the East. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saith the lord god: these are the ordinaunces and lawes of the alter in the daye when it is made to offer burnte offeringes, and to sprinkle blonde therupon. To the priestes, to the Leuites that bee of the sede of Sadoch, * & treade before me to do me seruice, sayeth the Lorde God: Unto these geue þ a yonge bullocke for a sinne offering: & take the blonde of him, and sprinkle his foure hornes withal: & the .iiii. corners of þ alter couering, with þ ledge that goeth rounde aboute herewith shalte thou clense it, and reconcile it. * Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the synne offering, and burne him in a seuerall place without the Sanctuarye. The next daye, take a gote bucke, without blemishe, for a synne offeryng, to reconcile the Alter withal, lyke as it was reconciled with þ bullocke. Nowe when thou haste made it cleane, then offer a yong bullocke * without blemish, & a ram out of the flocke without blemish also. Offer thē before the Lorde, and let þ priestе cast * salt therupon, and geue them so vnto the lord for a burnt offering. Seuen dayes shalt thou bryng euery day a goate bucke for synne. A yonge bullocke & a ram of þ flocke, both without blemish, shal they offer. Seuen dayes shal they reconcyle and clense the Alter, and offer ker vpon it. When these dayes are expyred, then vpon the eyght daye and so forth, the Priestes shall offer their burnte offeringes, and their hofferinges vpon the alter: so I wyll be mercifull vnto you, sayth the Lorde God.

The.xliii. Chapter.

Declareth what doore of ỳ temple is shut. He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with their offence. The vncircumcised in hearte, and in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruyce of the temple, and who to be refused. Declareth what presentes he would haue admitted into the holye place, and also their ordre.

A Fter thys he brought me againe to ỳ outward doore of the Sanctuary on the East side, and that was shut. Thē said the Lord vnto me, this doore shalbe still shut, and not opened for any manne to goe throughit, but only for ỳ lord god of Israel: yea, he shal go throughit, els shal it be shut still. The Prince himself shal come thoroughit ỳ he may eat bread before ỳ lord. At the porch shal he come in, & ther shal he goe out again. Then brought he me to the doore vpon the north side of the house. And as I loked about me, beholde, * the glorye of the lord filled the house, & I fel down vpon my face. So the lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, laiken this to thyne heart, behold, and take diligent hede to al ỳ I wil say vnto the concernyng al the ordynaunces of the lord, and al his lawes: ponder wel with thine hearte the commyng in of the house and the goinge foorth of the Sanctuary, and tell that obstinate household of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God: O house of Israell, ye haue nowe done ynough with al your abhominacions, seing that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary straungers, hauinge vncircumcised hartes and flesche, where through my Sanctuary is defiled, when ye offer me bread, fat, and blonde. Thus with al youre abhominacyous ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but sette keepers of my Sanctuary, euen after youre owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: of all the straungers that dwell among the childrē of Israell, no straunger whose hearte and flesche is not circumcysed, shall come wythin my Sanctuarye: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue disceiued the people of Israell with all errours, goyng after their Idolles: therefore shall they beare their own wickednes. Shoulde they be sette and ordeyned to minister vnder the doores of the house of my Sanctuary? And to doe seruice in the house, to slay burnt offeringes & sacrifices for the people, to stande before them, and to serue them, seeinge the seruice ỳ they do them, is before their ydols, & cause the house of Israell to stumble through their wickednes? For ỳ which cause I haue pluct out mine hand ouer them, saith the lord god: so ỳ now they must beare their owne iniquity, and not to come nye me to serue me with their priesthode i my Sanctuary, & most holiest of all: that they maye beare their own shame and abhominations, whiche they haue done. Shoulde I vse them to bee porters of the house, & to all the seruice ỳ is done therein? But the priestes, the Leuites, the sōne of Sadoth, ỳ kepte the holye ordinaunces of my Sanctuary, whē the childrē of Israell wer gone frō me, shal come to me, to do me seruice, to stād before me, & to offer me ỳ fat & the bloud, saith ỳ lord god. They shal go into my Sanctuary, & treade before my table: to doo me seruice, and to wayte vpon myne ordinaunces. Nowe when they goe in at the doores of the innermer courte: they shal put on linnen clothes, so ỳ no wolleyne come vpon thē whyle they do seruice vnder the doores of the innermer courte, & within. Thei shal haue faire linen bonets vpō their heades, & linen brethes vpon their loynes, which i their labor they shal not put about thē. And whē they go forth to the people in to the outward court, they shal putte of the clothes, wherin thei haue ministred, & laye thē in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, & put on other apparel, lest they vnhalow ỳ people with their clothes. * They shal not shaue their heades, nor norish the bushe of their heere, but rounde their heades only. * All the priestes that go into the inmoste courte, shall drynke no wyne. & They shal mary no widow, neither one that is putte from her housbande: but a mayde of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widowe ỳ hath had a priest before. * They shal shew my people the difference betwene the holy & vnholy, betwixte ỳ cleane & vncleane. & yf any discord arise, thei shal discerne it: & geue sentēce after my iudgmētes. My solemne feastes, my lawes & ordinaunces shal thei kepe, & halow my Sabbothes. * Thei shal come at no dead perso to defile themselues, excepte it bee father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or sister, that hathe had yet no housbād, in such maye thei be defiled.

And

And when he is clensed, there shalbee rekened vnto hym seuen dayes: and yf he go into the Sanctuary agayne to doe seruice, he shall bryng a synne offeryng, saith the lord God.* They shal haue an herytage, yea, I my selfe wyl bee theyr heritage, els shal ye geue them no possessiō in Israell, for I am theyr possession. The meat offerynges, sin-offering, & trespasse offering shal they eate: and euery dedicate thyng in Israel, shalbee theyrs. The fyrstlynges of all the fyrste fruites, and all frewyll offeringes shall be the priestes. ye shal geue vnto the priest also all the fyrst fruite of your fyrste bozne, al I saye, and al that is seperated vnto God: al your heue offerynges (I saye) shalbe ỳ priestes, & also ỳ firstlinges of your dough, ỳ god may prosper ỳ residue.* But no dead caryon shal the Priest eate, nor such as is deuoured of wild beastes, foules, or cattell.

The.xlv.Chapter.

Out of all the lande of promise are ther seperate.iii. portions, of which the fyrst is geuen to the priestes vnto the temple, the seconde to the Leuites, the thyrd to the citye. the fourth to the prince. An exhortation vnto the heades of Israel: Of iust weyghtes and measures. Of fyrst fruites. &c.

When ye deuide the lande by ỳ lot, ye shall put aside one* parte for the Lord, to be holy from other landes, namelye. xxv.M. metes rods long, & x.M. broade. Thys shalbee holye, as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this part ther shal belong vnto the Sanctuary.v.C. meteroddes, in al ỳ.iiii. corners, and.l. cubites wide round about to the suburbes. And from this measure, namely of xxv.M. meteroddes long, & x.M. broade, ỳ shalt measure, wherein the Sanctuarye & the holyest of al may stand. The residue of ỳ holy ground shalbe ỳ priestes which doe seruice in ỳ Sanctuary of the lorde, & go in before the lord to serue him, that they may haue roume to dwel in. As for the Sanc-tuarye, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen twenty habytacions, of the.xxv.M length, and ten thousande bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the citye a possessyon of fiue thousande mete rods broade, and fyue and twenty thousande longe, beside ỳ parte of the Sanctuary: that shalbee for the whole house of Israel.* Upon both the sides of ỳ Sanctuaries part, & by the citie, there shal be geuen vnto the prince whatsoeuer lyeth ouer against the Citie: as far as reacheth westwarde and Eastwarde, whiche shall be as longe as one part, from the west vnto the East. This shalbe his owne land in Israel, that my princes be no more chargeable vnto my people. And suche as remaineth yet ouer in the land shalbe geuē to the house of Israel, accordynge to theyr tribes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye Princes, ye haue now oppressed & destroyed ynoughe: now leaue of, handle nowe accordyng to the thynge that is equall and lawfull: and thrust out my people nomore sayth the lorde God.* Ye shall haue a trew weight, a true Ephah, and a true bath.
The Ephah & the bath, shalbee a like. One bath shall conteyne the tenth part of an homer, and so shal one Ephah do: theyr measure shalbe after the homer. & One sicle ma-keth twentye geras. So twentye sicles, & xxv. & xv. sicles make a pound. This is the heue offeringe that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the sixtene part of an Ephah, out of an homer of wheate, and the sixtene part of an Ephah, out of an homer of barley. The oyle shalbe measured with ỳ bath:
euen the.x. parte of one bath out of a Cor.

Ten bathes make one homer: for one homer fylleth tenne bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe out of ỳ pasture of Israell, for a meat offering, burnte offeryng, and heithoffering, to reconcile them, sayth the Lorde God: All the people of the land shall geue this heue offerynge with a free wyl, for the people of Israel. Agayne, it shal bee the princes parte to offer burnte offerynges, meat offerynges, and dryncke offeringes vnto the lorde, in the holy daies, new mones, Sabbothes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The sin offering, meat offering, burnt offering, & heith offering, shal he geue to reconcile ỳ house of Israel. Thus saith ỳ lord god: The fyrste day of ỳ firste moneth ỳ shalt take a yonge bullocke without blemish, & clense ỳ Sanctuary. So the priest shall take of ỳ bloude of the sin offeringe, and sprincle it vnto the postes of ỳ house, & vpō the.iiii. corners of the auiter, with ỳ doze postes of the inner-mer court. And thus shalt thou do also the
vii. day of ỳ moneth* (for such as haue sinned of ignorauce, or being discerned) to recocile ỳ house withal.* Upō the.xiiii. day of ỳ firste moneth, ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen daies shal ỳ feast cōtinue, wherin ther shall no sowre nor leuened bread be eaten. Upon the same day, shal the Prynce geue for himself and al the people of the land a bullocke, for a synofferyng. And in the feast of the seuen dayes, he shal offer euerye daye a bullocke and a ramme, that are without blemishe, for a burnt offering vnto the Lord: and an he gote dayly for a sinne offeringe. For the meate offeringes he shall geue euen an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah, to a rā, and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shal kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euē as the other seuen dayes, with the sinne offeryng, burnt offering, meat offering, and with the oyle.

The. xlvi. Chapter.

The sacrifices of the Sabboth and of the new mones. Through which doores they muste goo in, or come out of the temple. &c.

THus saith the lord god: the doore of the innermer court toward ꝑ East, shalbe shut ꝑ. vi. worlinge dayes: but in the Sabboth, & in the daye of the new mone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the prince come vnder the doore porteh, and stand stil without by the doore cheke. So ꝑ prestes shal offer vp his burnt and helth offeringes. And he shal worshipp at the doore poste, and goe his waye foorth agayne, but the doore shall nomore bee shut tyl the euenyng. On the same maner shal ꝑ people of the lande also doe theyr worshyp before the Lorde without thys doore, vpō the Sabbothes and newe mones. This is now the burnt offering, that the prince shal bryng vnto the Lord vpon the Sabboth: syxe lambes without blemishe, and a ram wythoute blemishe, and an Ephah for a meat offering with the ramme. As for the lambes, he maye geue as many meate offeryngs to them as he will: and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemishe: syxe lambes and a ram also without blemish: & ith the bullocke he shal geue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meat offering, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Whē the prince cōmeth, he shal goe vnder the doore porche, and euē there departe forth againe. But when the people of the lande come before the Lord in the hye solemne feaste, as many as come in by the north doore to do woorshipp, shall go out againe at the south doore. And they that come in at the south doore shall goe forth agayne at the north doore. There shal none go out at the doore, wher he came in, but shal go right forth ouer on the other side and ꝑ prince shall goe in and out among the. Upon the solemne and hye feaste dayes, this shalbe the meate offering. An Ephah to a bullocke, & an Ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wil: but euer an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Now whē the prince bringeth a burnt offering, or an helthoffering with a free will vnto the lord, the East doore shalbe opened vnto him, ꝑ he maye do with his burnt and helthofferinges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth: & when he goeth forth, ꝑ doore shal be shut after him againe. He shal daily bring vnto ꝑ lord a lamb of a yere old without blemish, for a burnt offering: this shal he do euerye morning. And for a meat offering, he shal geue ꝑ. vi. part of an Ephah, and the thirde part of an hyn of oyle, to mingle with ꝑ cakes euery morning. Yea, this shalbe a daily meat offering vnto ꝑ lord, for an euerlasting ordinaūce: & thus shal ꝑ lamb, the meat offering, & oyle be geuen euery morning, for a daily burnt offering. Moreouer thus saith ꝑ lord god: If the prince geue a gyfte vnto any of hys sonnes, then shal it bee his sonnes heritage perpetual, ꝑ he maye possesse it. But yf he wil geue one of his seruaūtes some of his heritage, it shalbe his to the free yere, & then to returne againe vnto the prince: for hys heritage shal bee his sonnes onelye. & The prince also shal take none of the peoples inheritaunce nor put them from theyr possession: but to his own sonnes shal he giue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euerye man maye haue his owne. And he brought me through the entraunce at the side of the doore, to the habitaciō of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes & stode toward ꝑ north: & behold, there was a place vpon the west side, then said he vnto me. This is the place wher the prestes shal digest the trespasse & sin offeringes, & bake the meate offeringes, ꝑ they neede not beare them into the outwarde court, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court rounde about al the foure corners. Behold, in euery corner of the court, there was yet a lytle court. Yea, in al ꝑ. iiii. corners of the court, there was made a litle court of fourtye cubites long, and thirty cubites broad: these foure litle courtes wer of one like measure, and there went a ridge wal rounde about them all foure, vnder the wyche there wer harthes made rounde about. Then said he vnto me. This is the kytchen wher the ministers of the house shall dyght the same offeryngs of the people.

The

The.xlvii. Chapter.

The vision of the waters that came oute of the temple. The coastes of the land of promcise, and the prision therof by trybes.

AFter thys he broughte me agayne before the doze of the house: and beholde, there gushed out waters from vnder ꝑ postes of the house eastwarde, for the house stode toward the easte, that ran downe vpō the tyghte syde of the house, whyche lyeth to the aultar southwarde. Then caryed he me out to the nozth doze, and broughte me forth there round aboute by the vtmost doze that turneth eastewarde. *Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the tyghte syde. Nowe when the man that had the metrod in hys hande wente vnto the east doze, he measured a thousand cubites, and then he broughte me thorowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After thys he measured a thousande agayne, then was it suche a ryuer, ꝑ I might not wade thorow it. The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it might no be waded ouer. And he saide vnto me: haste thou sene this, O thou son of man? and wyth that he broughte me to the ryuer banke agayne. Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpō ether syde of the ryuer banke. Thē said he vnto me: This water ꝑ floweth out toward the easte, & runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the sea: and from the sea runneth out and maketh the waters whole. Yea, all that lyue and moue whereunto thys ryuer commeth, shal recouer. *And where this water cōmeth there shalbe muche fysh. For al that trō̄eth to thys water, shall be lusty and whole. By thys ryuer shall the fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and ther spreade out theyr nettes: for there shall be greate heapes of fyshe, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for hys clayе and pyttes, they shall not be whole: for why? it shall be occupied for salte.

By thys ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore, there shal growe al maner of frutteful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, nether shall theyr frute perysshe, but euer be rype at theyr monethes, for theyr water runneth out of theyr Sanctuarie, & his frute is good to eate, and hys leafe profytable for medecyne. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Let thys be ꝑ border wherein ye shall deuyde the lande vnto the twelue trybes of Israell, wyth the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: *of the whych lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it shoulde fall to your inheritaunce. Thys is the border of the lande vpō the nozth syde, from the mayn sea, as mē go to Zadada: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim, from the borders of Damascus and Hemath, vnto Hazer, Tichon, and that lieth vpon the costes of Hauran. Thus the borders from the sea forth, shall be Hazar, Enan: the border of Damascus the nozth: and the borders of Hemah, that is the nozth parte. The easte syde shall ye measure from Hauran and Damascus, from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordane, and so forth from the sea coaste, that lyeth eastward: and thys is the east parte. The south side is from Thamar forth to the *waters of stryfe vnto Cades, the ryuer to the mayne sea: and that is the south parte. The west parte, namely the greate sea from the borders therof, tyll a man come vnto Hemath, thys is the weste parte. *Thys lande shall ye parte amonge you, according to the trybes of Israell, and deuyde it to be an heritage for you, and for the straungers that dwell among you, and beget chyldren. For ye shal take the among the chyldren of Israell, lyke as though they were of your owne housholde, and cōtrey: and they shall haue heritage wyth you among the children of Israel. Loke in what tribe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tribe shal ye geue hym his heritage, sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xlviii. Chapter.

The lottes of the seuen trybes. The partes of the pollessyon of the prestes, and of the temple, of the Leuites, of the cytye, of the prince, & ther offices. The lottes of the other trybes. & the gates of the cytye.

THese are the names of the tribes that lye vpon the nozthsyde, by ꝑ way of Hetlon, tyl thou commest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, ꝑ borders of Damascus toward the nozth beside Hemath: Dan shall haue hys portiō from the easte quarter vnto the west. Upon the borders of Dan from the easte side vnto the weste, shall Asser haue hys portyon. Upon the borders of Asser from the easte parte vnto the weste, shall Nephtaly haue hys portyon. Upon the borders of Nephtaly frō the east quarter vnto the west, shal Manasses haue his portyon. Upon ꝑ borders of Manasses frō the east syde vnto ꝑ west shal Ephraim haue hys porcion. Upon the borders of Ephraim, from ꝑ east parte vnto ꝑ west, shal Ruben haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Ruben, from the easte quarter vnto the west, shall Juda haue his porcion. Upon ꝑ borders of Juda, from ꝑ east part vnto the west, ye shal set aside one portiō of .xxv.M. metroddes longe and brode, lyke as another porcyon from the easte syde vnto the weste, wherin the sanctuary shall stande.

Ex.41.2 * Is for the porcyon that ye shall seperate out for the lord, it shalbe .xxv.M. long, and .x.M. brode: whyche seperated holy porcyon shal belōg vnto these, namely to ꝑ preastes: towarde the north .xxv.M. and toward the west .x.M. brode, toward ꝑ east .x.M. brode also and toward the south. xxv.M. longe, wherin the sanctuary of ꝑ lorde shal stande. Yea, thys same place shalbe the prestes that Ez.40.46 are of the chyldren of * Sadoch, and haue and.44.15 kept my holy ordinaunce: whyche wente not B astray in the errour of the chyldre of Israel, lyke as the Leuytes are gone astraye: and thys seperated piece that they haue of land, shall be the most holy, harde vpon the borders of the leuites. And nexte vnto ꝑ prestes shall the Leuites haue .xxv.M. longe, and .x.M. brode. Thys shalbe on euery syde .xxv.M. longe end .x.M. brode. Of thys porcion they shal sel nothyng, nor make any permutacyon thereof, lest the chefe of the lande fal vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the lorde. The other .v.M. after ꝑ bredeth that lyeth by the .xxv.M. shalbe comen: it shal belong to the citye, & to the suburbes for habitaciōs, and the Cytye shall stande in the myddest therof. Let thys be the measure: toward the north part .v.C. and .iii.M. toward ꝑ south parte .v.C. & .iii.M. towarde the east parte .v.C. and .iii.M. towarde the west parte. v C. and .iii.M. The suburbes harde vpon ꝑ citye shall haue towarde the north fyftye & ii.C. towarde the south .l. and .ii.C. towarde the easte .l. and .ii.C. towarde the weste also l. and .ii.C. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the seperated holye grounde: namely .x.M. toward the east, and .x.M. towarde the weste, nexte vnto the holy porcyon: & the increase therof shal serue for theyr meate, that labour in the Cytye.

C They that labour for the welth of the citye, shall mayntayne thys also out of what tribe soeuer they be in Israel. All that is seperated of the .xxv.M. longe and .xxv.M. brode on the four partes, that shall ye put aside for ꝑ seperated porcyon of the sanctuary, and for the possessyon of the cytye.

The residue vpō both ꝑ sides of the sanctuary and possession of the citte, shal belong to the prynce, before the place of the .xxv.M. vnto the east ende, and before the place of ꝑ .xxv.M. westwarde vnto the borders of the cytye, thys shall be the Prynces porcyon. Thys shal be the holye place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stande in the myddest. Moreouer from the Leuites and the cityes possession, that lye in the midst of the princes parte: loke what remayneth betwyxte the border of Juda, & the border of Ben Jamin, it shalbe the Prynces.

Nowe of the other trybes. From the easte parte vnto the west, shal Ben Jamin haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Ben Jamin from the easte syde vnto the weste, shall Symeon haue hys porcyon. Upon ꝑ borders of Symeon frō the east parte vnto the west shall Jsaker haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Jsakar from the east D syde vnto the west shall Zabulon haue hys porcyon. Upon the border of Zabulon from the east parte vntō the west shall Gad haue hys porcion. Upō the borders of Gad southwarde, the costes shal reache from Thamar forth vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades, & to the floude, euen vnto the mayne sea.

This is the lande with his * porcions, which Jos.13.4 ye shal dystrybute vnto the tribes of Jsrael, Num.34 sayth the lord God. Thus wyde shal ꝑ citye reache vpon the north parte .v.C. and .foure M. measures. The portes of the cytye shall haue ꝑ names of the trybes of Jsraell. Thre portes of the northsyde: one Ruben, another Juda, the thyrd Leui. Upon the eastsyde, v C. and .iii.M. measures, wyth thre portes: ꝑ one Joseph, another Ben Jamin, the thyrde Dan. Upon the southsyde .v.C. and .iii.M measures, wyth thre portes: the one Symeō, another Jsakar, the thyrd Zabulon. And vpon the westsyde .v.C. and .iii.M. measures, wyth thre portes also: the one Gad, another Aser, the thirde Nephtali. Thus shal it haue .xviii.M. measures rounde aboute. And from that tyme forth, ꝑ name of the cytye shal be: the lord is there.

The ende of the prophecie of Ezechiel.

The

The booke of the prophet Daniel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The prophet sheweth the captiuite of Iehoakim kyng of Iuda. Of ꝑ sonnes that were in captiuitye: the kynge commaundeth to chose whych of them should be taught the learnyng and language of the Caldees. They are alowed ꝑ kynges feadyng. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kyng of Babilon.

IN the thyrde yere of the reigne of Iehoakim kyng of Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Ierusalem, and beseged it: * and the lord deliuered Iehoakim the kynge of Iuda into hys hande, wyth certayne ornamentes of the house of God, whyche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of hys god, & there he brought them into his goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Aſphanaz the chefe chamberlayne, that he shoulde bringe hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel, that were come of the kynges seede & of princes, yong spryngaldes wythout any blemish, but fayre & welfauored, instructe in al wisdome, connynge and vnderstandynge, whych were able to stand in the kynges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Caldyshe.

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcion of hys owne meate: and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysshe them thre yere: that afterwarde they myghte stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the childre of Iuda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sidrach: Misaell, Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he would not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat, nor the wyne whyche he dronke. And thys he desired of the chefe chamberlayne, lest he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Danyell fauour & grace before ꝑ chefe chamberlaine, that he sayd vnto him: I am afrayde of my lord ꝑ kynge, whyche hath appoynted you your meat & drynke, leest he spye your faces to be worse lyking the the other spryngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me loose my heade vnto ꝑ kyng. Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe chamberlain had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes wyth thy seruauntes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, & water to drynke, then loke vpō our faces, & theyrs that eate of ꝑ kinges meate: And as thou seest, so deale wyth thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, & proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, theyr faces were better lyking & fatter, then all the yong spryngaldes, which did eat of ꝑ kinges meate. Thus Melassar toke awaye theyr meate and wyne, and gaue the pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these four spryngaldes connynge and learnyng in all scripture and wisedom: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of all visions and dreames. Now when the tyme was expired, ꝑ the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these yong spryngaldes vnto him, the chefe chamberlaine brought the before Nabuchodonosor, & the king comoned wᵗ them. But among them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias. Therfore stode they before the king, which in al wisdome, & matters of vnderstādyng, ꝑ he enquired of the, founde the .x. times better, the al ꝑ southsayers & charmers, that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode still, vnto the fyrst yere of king Cirus.

The seconde Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answer that they cannot shew it. The kyng commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Danyel requyreth tyme to solue the question. The Lorde openeth the mistery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto ꝑ king, & sheweth him his dreame, & the interpretacō therof. Of the euerlastyng kyngdome of Christ.

IN ꝑ seconde yeare of the reigne of Nabuchodonosor had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * wherethorowe his spirite was vexed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers, witches, and Caldees, for to shewe the kinge his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the king sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, & my spirite was so troubled therwyth, that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees aunswered the kyng in ꝑ Syryans speche: O king, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaūtes the dreame, & we shal shewe the, what it meaneth. The king gaue ꝑ Caldees their answer & said: It is gone fro me. Yf ye wil not make me vnderstand ꝑ dreame wᵗ the interpretacō therof, ye shal die, & your houses shal be prised. But yf ye tel me ꝑ dreame & the meaning therof, ye shal haue of me giftes, rewardes & greate honour: onely shewe me the dreame & Þ̄ sygnifycacō of it. They answered againe and sayde: the kynge muste shewe hys seruauntes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truth that ye doe but prolonge the tyme, for so muche as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgemente. But ye fayne and dissemble wyth vayne wordes, whyche ye speake before me to put of Þ̄ tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I knowe yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upō this, the Caldees gaue answere before the kyng, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe, that can tell the thynge, whyche the kynge speaketh of: yea there is nyther kinge, prince nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thinges at a sothsayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a very harde matter, that the kyng requyreth. Nyther is there any, that can certyfye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellyng is not amonge the creatures.

For the whyche cause the kyng was wroth wyth great indignacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: & the proclamacyon went forth, and the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniell wt hys companyons. The Danyell enquired of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgemente and sentence that was gone forth alreadi to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch being then the kinges deputye. Why hath Þ̄ kyng proclamed so cruel a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon thys went Daniel vp and desyred the kyng that he might haue leysure to shewe the kyng the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne & shewed the thynge vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias hys companyons: that they shoulde beseche the God of heauen for grace in thys secret, that Danyell and hys fellowes wyth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not. Then was Þ̄ mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyghte. And Daniel praysed the God of heauen.

Danyel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God might be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome and strength are hys owne, *he chaungeth the times and ages, he putteth downe kinges, he setteth vp kinges, *he geueth wysdome vnto the wise, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darknesse, for the lyghte dwelleth wyth hym. I thanke the, and prayse the, o thou GOD of my fathers, that thou haste lente me wysdome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thynge, that we desyred of the, for thou haste opened the kynges matter vnto me. Upon thys wente Danyel in vnto Arioch, whom Þ̄ kyng had ordained to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, and sayde: destroye not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but bryng me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the kyng the interpretacō. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kynge in all the haste, and saide vnto hym: I haue founde a man amonge the prysoners of Juda, that shall shewe Þ̄ kyng the interpretacyō. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canste shewe me the dreame whyche I haue sene, and Þ̄ interpretacyon therof? Danyel answered the kyng to hys face, & sayde: As for thys secret, for the which the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is nyther the wyse, the sorcerer, Þ̄ charmer, nor the deuell coniurer, that can certifye the kynge of it. *Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes. Thy dreame, and that whyche thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is thys: O kynge, thou dyddest cast in thy mynde what should come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, thys secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other lyuyng: but onely that I myght shewe the kyng the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe Þ̄ thoughtes of hys owne harte. Thou kynge sawest and beholde, there stode before the a great ymage whose syghte was maruelouse greate & hys vysage grym me. The images heade was of fyne golde, hys brest & armes of syluer, his body & loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

*Thys thou sawest, tyll the tyme that without any handes, there was hewen of a stone, whyche smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken al together in peces: and became like the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the sommer floures, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that

that smote ꝑ ymage, became a greate moũtayne, which fulfilleth ꝑ whole earth: This is the dreame. And nowe will we shewe before the kynge what it meaneth. *O kyng, thou arte a kynge of kynges. For the God of heuen hath geuen ꝑ a kyngdome, riches, strength, & maiestie: and hath deliuered thee al thynges, that are amonge the children of men: the beastes of the feelde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. After thee there shall aryse another kyngdome, whiche shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, and haue dominacion in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as strong as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh al thinges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe: so shal it beate downe and destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete & toes, parte of earth & parte of yron: that is a deuided kyngdome, whiche neuertheless shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it, for so muche as thou haste seene the yron myxte with ꝑ clay. The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of clay: sygnifieth that it shall be a kyngdom partely stronge & partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixt with clay, they shall mingle them selues with the sede of simple people, and yet not continue one with another, lyke as yron will not be souldered with a potteshearde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shal the God of heaue̅ set vp an *euerlastyng kyngdome which shall not perishe, and his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yea, the same shall breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer. And where as thou sawest ꝑ without any handes there was cut out of the *moũte & a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, the earth, the siluer and golde in peces: by ꝑ hath the great God shewed the kyng, what wil come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacion of it is sure. Then ꝑ kyng Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meatofferynges & swete odoures vnto him. The kyng answered Daniel, and sayd: yea, of a trueth youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seyng thou canst discouer this misterie. So the kyng made Daniel a great mã, & gaue him many & great giftes. *He made him rular of all the countries of Babylon, & lord of al the nobles, that were at Babylon. Now Daniel intreated ꝑ kyng for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, so ꝑ he made them rulars ouer all the officers in ꝑ land of Babilon: But Daniel him selfe remayned still in the courte by the kynge.

The. iii. Chapter.

The kyng setteth vp a golden ymage, whyche he cõmaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they despised the kynges commaũdement. They are broughte vnto the kynge, and commaunded to worshyp the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng ouē. By beleefe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the syght of the miracle.

NAbuchodonosor the kyng caused a golde̅ ymage to be made, which was. lx. cubites hye, & syxe cubies thicke. This he made to be set vp in the celde of Dura, in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges & officers ꝑ debities and shreues, with all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to ꝑ dedicacion of the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp: So ꝑ dukes, Lordes and nobles, the Iudges and officers, debities and shreues with al the rulers of ꝑ lande, gathered them together & came vnto the dedicating of the ymage ꝑ Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whyche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cried out with all his myght: O ye people, kynreddes & tonges, to you be it sayde: ꝑ when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shalbe blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes & al maner of Musyke: ye fall downe and worshyppe the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore when all the folke heard ꝑ noyse of the tro̅pettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies, and all kynde of melody, the all ꝑ people, kynreds & nacions, fel down, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. Now were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that wēt euē then & accused the Iewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beyng kyng hast geuē a commaundemente, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompets, harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, symphonies, and all the other melodyes shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe and worshypped not ꝑ he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng oue.

Dani.2.g. Now are there certayne Iewes * whome ꝑ hast set ouer the officers of ꝑ lande of Babilon: namely, Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they wil not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden D ymage that thou hast set vp. Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before ꝑ kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrah, Misach, and Abednago, will not you serue my goddes, nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be redy hereafter. When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blow, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphones, and al the other melodies: that ye fall downe and worshyp ꝑ ymage which I haue made. But yf ye worshyp it not, ye shalbe caste immediatly into an hote burnyge ouen. Let se what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered ꝑ kyng and sayde, O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter:
Mat.16.g. for why? oure God whome we serue * is able to kepe vs from the hote burning oue, (O kynge) & can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet
E shalt thou know (O kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to the Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so ꝑ the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpō Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste, for to bynd Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen. So these men were bounde in their coates, hosen, shoes, with their other garmētes, and caste into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strayte, & the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and A-F bednago, the flame of the fyre destroied thē.
And these thre men, Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beyng fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueyled & stode vp in al hast: he spake vnto his counsayle, & sayd: dyd not you cast these thre men bounde vnto ꝑ fyre? They answered and sayd vnto the kynge: Yea, O kyng. He answered and sayde: loe, for all that yet do I se foure men goyng lense in the myddest of the fyre, and nothing corrupte, and the fourth is like the sonne of god to loke vpon. Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of ꝑ hote burnynge ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, ye seruauntes of ꝑ hye god, go forth, and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then ꝑ dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges cōsayle came together to se these men, * vpon whome the Esa.43.c fyre had no maner of power in their bodies. In somuche that the verye heere of their heade was not burnte, and their clothes vnchaunged: yea, there was no smell of fyre aultered the kynges commaundement and leoparde their bodyes there vpon, rather then they wouldе serue or worshyppe any other God, excepte their owne God only. Therfore I will and commaunde, that all people, kynreddes, and tōges, which speake any blasphemye agaynste the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shal dye, and their houses shalbe pyled: Bicause * there *Esa.44.

kynge promoted Sidrach, Misach and Abednago in the lande of Babylon.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayn, Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put oute of his realme, and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored vnto his kyngdome.

the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of myne heade, troubled 21.1.a. me. * Then sente I out a commission, that all they which were of wysedome at Babylon, shoulde be brought before me to tel me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, and conturers of deuels: to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shew me: til at ỳ last, ther came one Daniel (other wise called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath ỳ spyte of the holye goddes in hym, to whome I
B tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthazar, thou prince of sothsayers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou hast ỳ spyte of the holy goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the, tell me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, whiche was verye hye, great and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto ỳ heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of ỳ earthe: his leaues were fayre, he had verye muche frute so that euery man had ynough to eate therin. The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, & the foules of ỳ ayre dwelt in ỳ boughes therof. Shortly, al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holye one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtelye, sayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheless leaue the grounde of hys rote stil in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron and stele. With ỳ dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wilde beastes. That mans harte C of his shalbe taken from hym, and a beastes harte shalbe gyuen him, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym. This crande of the watcher, is a commaundement groũded and sought out in the councell of hym, that is moost holy: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whome it lyketh hym, and bryngeth ỳ verye outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, ỳ I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therefore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so muche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shew me what it meaneth. But thou cãst do it, for the spyrite of the holy goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held his peace by the space of an houre, & hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake, and sayd: O Balthazar, let neyther ỳ dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthazar answered, saying: O my lord, D this dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretacion to thyne aduersaryes.
As for the tree that thou sawest whiche was so great and mighty whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and his bredth into all the worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and ỳ frute muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd sytte: Euen thou, O kyng, arte the tree great and strong. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto ỳ heauen, so doth thy power to ỳ endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher, euen an holye angell, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron and stele: he shalbe wet with the dewe of heuen, and his part shalbe with the beastes of the felde, tyl .vii. yeares be come and gone vpon hym: This (O kynge) is the in- E terpretacion, yea it is ỳ very decree of him that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my lorde the kynge. Thou shalt be cast out from mẽ, and thy dwellynge shalbe with the beastes of ỳ felde, with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an ore. Thou muste be wette with the dewe of the heauen: yea, seuen yeares shall come and go vpon the, tyll thou knowe * that the * Dan. 2. E

Moreouer, where as it was sayde, that the roote of the tree shoulde be lefte still in the grounde: it betokeneth that thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto thee, after ỳ hast learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. mercye to poore people: for this shalbe an healynge of thyne errour. All these thinges touch the kynge Nabuchodonosor. So af- F ter .xii. monethers, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of ỳ kyngdome of Babilon, and sayde: This is the greate cyte of Babilon, whiche I my selfe (with my power and strengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiesty. While these hꝛdes were yet in the kynges mouth, ther fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosoꝛ, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdom shall departe from the, ꝑ shalte be cast out of mens company: thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of the feld, so that ꝑ shalt eate grasse as an oxe, till seuen yeares be come and gone ouer the: euen vntil thou knowest that the hyest hath power vpon ꝑ kingdomes of men, and that he maye gyue them vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was thys matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosoꝛ: so that he was cast oute of mens company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of heaue, till his heares were as great as Iegles fethers, and his nayles lyke hyꝛ-des clawes. When this tyme was paste, I Nabuchodonosoꝛ lyft vp mine eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restoꝛed vnto me agayn. Then gaue I thãkes vnto the hyest. I magnified and praysed hym that liueth foꝛ euermoꝛe * whose power endureth al waye, and his kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparison of whom all they that dwell vpon the erth, are to be reputed as nothing. * He handleth accoꝛdyng to his will amonge the powers of heauen, and amonge the inhabitours of the earthe: and there is none that maye resyste hys hande, oꝛ saye: what doest thou? *

At the same tyme was myne vnderstanding geuẽ me agayne, and I was restoꝛed to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignitye, and to myne owne shape agayn. All ꝑ great estates and princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater woꝛshyp. Then dyd I Na-buchodonosoꝛ, loue, magnifye and prayse the kynge of heauen: foꝛ all his woꝛkes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As foꝛ those that go on proudlye, he is able to bꝛynge them downe.

The.v. Chapter.

Balthasar kynge of Babilon, abusynge the vessels of the temple, seeth an hand wꝛytyng on the wall. The soth sayers, called of the kynge, can not expounde the wꝛytyng. Daniel is called, which rea-deth it and interpreteth it also. Balthasar beynge slayne, Darius succeadeth in his rowme.

KYnge Balthasar made a great banket to his thousande lozdes:
with all these thousande he made greate chere, and when he was dronken with wine, he cõmaunded to bꝛing hym the golden and syluer vessels * whyche his father Nabuchodonosoꝛ had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kynge and his lozdes, with his quene and concu-bynes myght dꝛynke therout. So they bꝛought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lozdes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his Lozdes with his quene and concubynes, dꝛonke out of them. They dꝛonke wyne & praysed their Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wood and stone. In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wꝛyting, ryght ouer agaynst the candlestycke vpon the playn wal in the kinges palace: and the kynge saw the palme of the hande that wꝛote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that ꝑ ioyntes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. * Wherfoꝛe the kynge cryed myghte-lye, that they shoulde bꝛynge hym the charmers, Caldees, and coniurers of deuels.
The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayd: Whoso can reade this wꝛytyng, and shew me the playne meanyng therof, shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyꝛde parte of my kyngdome. Upon this came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neither reade the wꝛytyng, noꝛ shewe the kynge what it signified. Then was the kynge soꝛe afrayed, in so muche, that his coloure chaunged, and his lozdes were soꝛe vexed. So by reasõ of this matter, that had happened to the kynge and his Lozdes, the Quene wente vp her selfe into the banket house and spake vnto the kynge, saying: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe foꝛ euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. Foꝛ why, there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hathe the spꝛite of the holye goddes wythin him, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hathe vnderstandynge & wysedome lyke the god-des. Yea the kynge Nabuchodonosoꝛ thy father, made this man cheefe of ꝑ sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & readers of deuynes:
because that suche an aboundaunt spꝛite, knowlege and wysedom (to expounde dꝛeames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtes) was founde in hym: yea, euen in Daniell, whom the kynge named Balthāzar. Let this same Daniel be sent foꝛ, and he shall tell what it meaneth. Then was Daniel bꝛought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel, one of the pꝛisoners of Iuda, whome

whome my father the kynge brought oute of Iewrye I haue heard speake of thee, þ thou hast the spryte of the holye goddes, experience and vnderstanding, and that there hath bene great wysedome founde in the.

Nowe haue there bene broughte me wyse & connynge charmes, to reade thys wrytyng, and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tel me what this matter signified. Then heard I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thinges, and declare harde doubtes. Wel then, yf thou canst reade this wrytyng, and shewe me the meanyng therof, thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome. Daniell answered, and sayde before the kynge: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, or gyue thy riche gyftes to another: yet not the les, I wil reade the wrytyng vnto the king, and shewe hym the interpretacion therof,

* O kynge heare, God the hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie of a kyng with worshyp and honoure: so that all people, kynredes and tonges stode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hye estate, that he had lente hym. For why, he slewe whome he woulde: he smote whome it pleased him. Agayn, whom he woulde he set vp: and whom he lyst he put downe. * But because his harte was so proude, and hys stomack set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kingly trone, and his maiesty was taken from hym. He was shut out from amonge men, his hearte was lyke a beastes hearte, and his dwellynge was with the wilde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an ore, and his bodye was wet with the dewe of the heauen, tyll he knewe, that the hyest had power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and setteth ouer them, whom he lyste.

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all this, hast not submitted thyne hart, thoughe þ knewest all these thynges: but haste magnified thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that þ vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene & thy concubynes, myght drynke wyne therout. And hast praised the Idoles of syluer and golde, copper & yron, of wood and stone: whiche neyther see, heare nor vnderstande. As for the God * in whose hande consisteth thy breath, and al thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym. Therfore is the palme of thys hande sente hyther fro him, to token vp this wrytyng. And this is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetell, Phares. Now the interpretacio of the thinge is this. Mane, God hath numbred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetell, thou art wayed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes & Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar to cloth Daniell with purple, to hange a chayne of golde about his necke, and to make a proclamacion concernynge hym: that he should be the ruler of the thyrde part of hys kyngdome. * The verye same nyght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Media toke in þ kingdom, beyng .lxii. yeares of age.

The.vi. Chapter.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The Imagynacion of an acte agaynste Daniell. The proclamacion of the acte, wherof Daniell is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour. He is put into a dene of Lyons by the commaundemente of the kyng. He is delyuered by fayth in God: Daniels accusers are put vnto the Lyons to be torne in sonder. Darius by the proclamacio of a decree, magnifieth the God of Daniell.

IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdom an. C. and .xx. Lordes, which should be in all his kingdome about. Aboue these he set thre princes (of whome Daniell was one) that the Lordes might gyue accoptes vnto them, and the kynge to be vndiscased. But Daniell exceaded all these princes and lordes, for the spryte of God was plentcouse in him: so that the kynge was myuded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the princes and lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel agaynst the kyngdom: yet coulde they fynde none occasio nor faute vpon hym. For why, he was so fayethfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestye founde in hym. Then sayde these men: we can get no quarell agaynst this Daniel, except it be in the law of his God. Upon this, went the princes and lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayd thus vnto hym: Kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme, as the Princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kyng, & to make a sure statute: namely, that whoso desireth any petition, either of anye God or man (within these .xxx. dayes) excepte it be only of thee, O king: þ same perso may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, confirme þ this statute, & make a wrytyng: þ the thing whiche the Medes & Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broke.

Do

So Darius made the wrytynge and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniell vnderstode that the wrytynge was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of his walle towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he down vpon hys knees, thre tymes a day: there he made hys petition and prayed his God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme. Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge his petition, and prayinge vnto hys God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before hym concernynge his commaundemente, sayinge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that wythin. xxx. dayes who so requyreth hys petition of anye God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken. Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniell one of the prisoners of Juda, O kynge, regardeth neyther thee, nor the statute that thou hast made: but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the kyng heard these wordes he was sore grieued, and wolde haue excused Daniell, to delyuer him, and put of the matter vntill the Sunne wente downe, to the intente that he myght saue hym. These men perceyuyng the kynges mynde, sayd vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute whiche the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then the kynge bad them bringe Daniel, and they cast him into the Lyons denne. The kyng also spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: thy God, whome thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the kynge sealed with hys owne ringe, and with the sygnet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel shoulde not be broken. So the kynge went vnto his palace, and eate no meate that nyght, neither was there any mynstrelsye brought in before hym, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But betymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Bel.r.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cryed with a pyteous voyce vnto Daniell: yea, the kynge spake and sayde vnto Daniell: O Daniell thou seruaunte of the lyuynge God is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer thee from the Lyons? Daniell sayde vnto the kynge: O kyng God saue thy life for euer. * My God hath sent hys angell: whiche hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why? myne vngyltynesse is founde oute before hym. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the. Then was the kynge exceadyng glad, and commaunded to take Daniell out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put hys trust in hys god. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to bryng them, and to cast them in the lions denne: them, their children, and their wyues. * So the lyons had the maistery of them, and brake all their bones asonder, or euer they came at the grounde. * After thys, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people, kynredes, and tonges, that dwelte in al landes: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundemente is, in all my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God. * For he is the lyuynge God, whiche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastinge.

* It is he that delyuereth and saueth: he dothe wonders and meruaylous workes in heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The. vii. Chapter.

A vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniell. The vision is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the worlde. Of the power and encrease of Antichrist. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christ.

IN the firste yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babilon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his head vpon hys bedde. Whych dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys. Daniel spake and sayd: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and behold: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp from the sea, one vnlyke another. The first was as * a lion, and yet had her egles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were pluckte from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans hearte. Beholde, the second beast was lyke a * Bear, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in hys mouthe he had. iii. greate longe teeth, and it was

it was sayd vnto him: Aryse, eate vp muche flesshe. Then I loked, & beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leoparde, this had wynges as a foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. This beaste had foure heades, and there was power gyuen hym. After this I saw in a vysió by night: & beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and marueleous stronge. It had greate yron teath, it deuoured and destroyed, & stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had *ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them another lytle horne, before whom there were thre of the fyrst hornes pluckt awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a man: and a mouthe speakyng prelúptuous thynges.

* I loked tyl the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hym downe. His clothyng was as white as snowe, & the heeres of his head lyke the pure wooll. His throne was lyke the fyrye flame, and his wheles as the burnyng fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye streme, and wente oute from hym. * I thousande tymes a thousande serued him. & M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened.

Then toke I hede there vnto, bycause of ỹ voyce of the proude wordes, which ỹ horne spake. I beheld tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, * geuen ouer to be brente in the fyre. As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I saw in a vision by nyghte, and beholde, * there came one in ỹ cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regall, that all people, tribes & tonges should serue him. * His power is an euerlastyng power which shal neuer be put downe: and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hart was vexed, * & I Daniell had a troubled spryte within me, & ỹ visions of my head made me afrayed, tyl I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth concernynge all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of the thynges. These foure great beastes, are foure kynges which shall arise out of the earthe. These shal take in the kyngdome of the saintes of the moste hyest, & possesse it still more and more for a longe season. After this I required diligétlye to know the truth, concernyng the fourth beast, whiche was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete: I desired also to knowe the truth, as touchyng the * ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whiche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which horne had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and loked with a grymmer visage then his felowes. I beheld, & the same horne made batell agaynst the saintes: yea, and gat the victorye of them vntill the tyme that ỹ olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the chefeste saintes: and tyll the tyme that the saintes had the kyngdom in possession. He gaue me this answer. That fourth beast shalbe the fourthe kingdome vpon earth: it shalbe more thé al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroy al other landes. * The ten hornes are ten kynges, that shall arise out of the kyngdome, after whom there shall stande vp another, which shalbe greater then the first. He shal subdue thre kynges, & shal speake wordes agaynst the hyest of all: he shall destroye the saintes of the moost hyest. * & thynke that he maye chaunge tymes & lawes. They shalbe gyuē vnder his power, * vntill a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme. But the iudgemēt shalbe kepte, so that his power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, and perysh at the last. As for the kyngdome, power, and al myghte that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe gyuen to the holy people of the moost hiest, * whose kyngdome is euerlastynge: yea, all powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheless, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaūce chaunged, * but the wordes I kept still in my heart.

The.viii. Chapter.

A vision of a stryke betwene a Ramme and an he goate. The vnderstandyng of the vision is of ỹ battel betwene the kynge of Persia, and the kyng of the Grecians. Of the shamelés kynge Antichrist.

IN the thyrde peare of the reygne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had seue the * fyrst. I saw in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe citie, whiche lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai. Then I loked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whiche had two hornes; hornes: and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, & the hyest came vp behynde. I sawe ꝑ thys ramme pushed with his hornes against the west, against the north, and against the south: so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende them from his power: but he dyd as him lusted and waxed greatlye. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from ꝑ west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde. This goate had a maruelous wyghe horne betwyxte his eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had ꝑ two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his myght. I sawe hym drawe nye, vnto the Ramme, beynge very fearce vpon him: yea, he gaue him fiue a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Neither had the Rãme so much strength as to stande before him: but he cast him downe, trode hym vnder his fete, and no man was able to deliuer the Ramme out of his power. The goate waxed exceadyng greate, and when he was at the strongeste, hys greate horne was broken also. * Then grew there other foure such lyke in ꝑ stede, towarde the foure wyndes of ꝑ heaue. Yea, oute of one of the least of these hornes, there came yet vp another horne, whiche waxed maruelous greate toward ꝑ south, toward the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some down to ꝑ grounde, and of the starres also and trode the vndre fete. Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost, from whom the dayly offryng was take, and the place of his Sanctuarye caste downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynste the dayly offryng (because of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thynges that it went about. Upon thys I hearde one of the saintes speakyng, which saint sayd vnto one that asked this question. Howe longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice, and of the wastynge abhominacion endure, that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder foote? And he answered hym: Unto the euenynge and the mornynge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: than shall the Sanctuary be clensed agayn. Now whe I Daniel had sene this vision and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I heard a mans voice in the ryuer of Vlay whyche cryed, and sayd: O Gabriel, make this man to vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakyng vnto me, I waxed faynt, so that I sanke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, & set me vp agayne, sayinge: Beholde, I will shewe the what shall happen in the last wrath: for in ꝑ tyme appointed it shalbe fulfilled. The Ramme whyche thou saweste with the two hornes, is ꝑ kyng of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is ꝑ kyng of Greke lande: the great horne that stode betwyxte his eyes, that is the principall kyng. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp * foure kyngdomes, but not so myghtye as it. After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynes is a growyng) there shal aryse a kyng of an vnshamefaste face, whiche shall be wyse in darcke speakynges. He shalbe myghty and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere: he shal slaye the stronge and holye people. And thorow his craftynes, falshed shal prospere in his hande: his herte shalbe proude, and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stande vp agaynste the prince of princes, * but he shall be destroyed without hande. And this vision ꝑ is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenyng and the mornynge. * Therfore wryte thou vp this syghte, for it will be lõge or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel verye faynt, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at the vision, neuertheles noman knew of it.

The .ix. Chapter.

Daniel desireth to haue that performed of God, whiche he had promysed concernynge the returne of the people from their banysshmente in Babylon. A true confession. Daniels prayer is heard. Gabriel the angell expounded vnto hym the vision of the lxx. weekes. The anoyntyng of Christe. The buyldyng agayne of Jerusalem vnder Nehemiah. The death of Christ.

In the firste yeare of Darius the sone of Ahaluerus, * whiche was of the seade of the Medes, and was made kyng ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euen in the firste yere of hys reygne I Daniel desired to knowe the yearly numbre out of the bokes, wherof the lorde

Lorde spake vnto * Jeremy the prophete: þ Jerusalem shoulde lye waste. lxx. yeares: a I turned me vnto God the lord for to praye and make myne intercession, wyth fastynge, sackecloth and asshes: I prayed before the Lord my God, and knowleged sayinge.
* O lord, thou greate and fearful God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with the, wheych loue the, & do thy commaundementes:
* We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene dysobedyente and gone backe:
yea we haue departed from al thy preceptes and iudgementes. We would neuer folowe thy seruauntes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and prynces, to our forefathers, and to all the people of the lande. * O lorde, ryghteousnes belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth nothynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this day vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be farre or nye, thorowout all landes, wherin thou haste strowed them, because of the offences, that they had done agaynste the. Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to our kynges, and prynces, to our forefathers, eue to vs al, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O lord our God, pertayneth mercye and forgeuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from hym and haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord oure God, to walke in hys lawes, * wheych he layd before vs by hys seruauntes the prophetes: yea all Israell haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not harkened vnto thy voyce.
Wherfore the curse and oth * that is wrytte in the lawe of Moses þ seruaunt of God (a-gaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpon vs. * And he hath performed hys wordes, wheych he spake agaynste vs, and agaynste oure iudges that iudged vs: to bryng vpon vs such a great plage, as neuer was vnder heauen lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all thys plage, as it is wrytte in the lawe of Moses, is come vpō vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wyckednesse, and to be learned in thy veryte. Therefore hath the Lord made hast to bryng thys plage vpon vs, for the lorde oure God is ryghteous in all hys workes wheych he doth: for why? we woulde not herken vnto hys voyce.
* And nowe, O lord oure God þ wyth a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get the selfe a name which remayneth this day, we haue synned O lord, and done wickedly agaynste all thy righte-ousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) from thy cytye Jerusalem thy holy hyll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of our forefathers, is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are aboute vs.
Nowe therfore, O oure God, heare þ prayer of thy seruaunte, and hys intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste: for the lordes sake. O my God enclyne thyne eare, and herken (at the leaste for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes, behold howe we be desolate, yea, and the cytye also, wheych is called after thy name: for we do not caste our prayers before thee in oure owne ryghteousnes: no, but only in thy great mercyes: O Lorde heare: O forgyue Lord, O lord consider, tary not ouer long: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God, for thy cytie, & thy people is called after thy name.
As I was yet speakyng at my prayers, knowlegynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercessyon before the Lorde my God, for the holy hylles sake of my God: yea, whyle I was yet speakyng in my prayer, beholde, * Dan. 7. the man Gabriel, (* whō I had sene before and 9. a in the vysyon) came flyenge to me, & touched me aboute the offrynge tyme in þ euenynge.
He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he, I am nowe come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so decreed, and therefore am I come to shewe the. And why? * For thou art a man greatly beloued. Wherfore, pondre the matter well, Dan. 10. c. that thou mayest learne to vnderstande the vysyon. lxx. weakes are determined ouer thy people and ouer the holy cytye: that the wickednesse may be consumed, that the sinne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bryng in euerlastyng righteousnesse, to fulfyll the vysions and the prophetes, & to annoynte the moost holy one.
Vnderstande thys then, and marke it well, þ from the tyme it shall be concluded * to go 1. Esd. 1. 16.
and repayre Jerusalem agayne vnto Christ 1. Esd. 1. 1.
(or the anoynted prynce) there shalbe seuen wekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne lxii. weakes: but wyth hard troublous tyme. After the. lxii. wekes shall Chryste be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people wyth the prynce, and destroye the cytye and the Sanctuary: and his ende shal come come as the water floude. But the desolacio shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde wyth many for the space of a weeke: and whe the weeke Mat. 24. b is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne
Dan. 11. b and meatoffrynge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacio, til it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that thys wastyng shal continue to the ende.

The. x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Daniell a man clothed in lynnen, wyche sheweth hym wherefore he is sente.

IN the thyrde yeare of kyng Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel otherwise called Baltha- I zer a matter yea a true matter but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter wel and perceyued what the visio was. In the same tyme I Daniell mourned for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesshe and wine there came none wythin my mouthe: also I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyl the whole thre weekes were out. Upon the xxiiii. day of the fyrste moneth I was by the great floud,
* Dan. 7. a called * Tygris, I lyfte vp myne eyes and Apoca. 1. a loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynen, whose lomes were gurded vp with fine golde of Arabye, hys body was like the Chrysolite stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was like lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes and fete were lyke tayre glysterynge metal, but the voice of his wordes was like
B the voice of a multitude. * I Daniel alone sawe
* Dan. 1. c thys vysion, the men that were wyth me,
* Acte. 9. a sawe it not: but a great fearfulnesse fell vpo them, so that they fled awaye and hyd themselues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe thys great vision, so longe tyl there remayned nomore strength wythin me.
Yea, I loste my coloure cleane, I wasted awaye & my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voice of his wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, fastnesse came vpo me, and I fel downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whyche set me vp vpon my knees, & vpo the palmes of my handes, saying vnto me: * O Daniel,
Dan. 9. b thou well beloued man, take good hede of the wordes that I shal saye vnto the, and stand tyghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente.
And when he had said these wordes, I stode
C vp trembling. The said he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for whyle thou fyrste daye thou dyddest set thyne harte to vnderstande, and dyddest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene heard. And I had come vnto the, when thou begannest to speake, had not the prynce ouer the kyngdome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes. But Lo,
* Michael one of the chefe prynces, came to Dan. helpe, and I was left to continue there with the kinges of Persia, and, am come to shewe the what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wylbe longe yet or the vision be fulfilled. Nowe when he had spoke these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the grounde and helde my tonge.
Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very like vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto hym that stode before me: O D my Lorde my joynctes are lensed in the visio and there is nomore strength wythin me.
Howe may my Lordes seruaunte then talke wyth my Lorde: seynge there is no strengthe in me, so that I can not take my breathe vpon thys there touched me agayne one
* Dan. muche like a man * & comforted me, saying:
O thou man so well beloued, feare not: be contente, take a good hart vnto the and be stronge. So when he had spoke vnto me, I recouered, and sayde: Speake on my Lord, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wil I go againe to fight wyth the kyng & the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekeland shal come. Neuertheles I wyl shewe the that thynge, that is faste noted in the scripture of truth. And as for al ponder matters there is none that helpeth me in the, but Michael youre prince.

The. xi. Chapter.

A prophecie of the kinges of Persia. Of the kingdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egipt, & of the bonde therof, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that flye vnto the kynge of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kynge of Syria persecuteth, whych figureth vnto vs Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

AND in the fyrste yeare of Darius of I Media, I stode by hym, to comforte hym and to strength hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Behelde, there shal stande vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre rycher then they all.
And when he is in the chefest power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke euery man againste the realme of Grekeland. * Then shal there Dan. 7. d aryse yet a mightye kyng, that shal rule with greate dominion, and do what hym luste.
* And as soone as his kingdome cometh vp, 11. Mac. 3 it shalbe destroied, & deuided toward the foure kyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue suche power & dominion as he: but his kingdome shalbe scattered, yea, euen among other then those. And the kinge of the south shalbe myghtyer, then hys other prynces. And one shall be stronger then he, and shall rule hys dominyon wyth greate power. And in the ende of yeares, they shalbe ioyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the king of the North, for to make frendshyp, but she shal not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure thorowe hys myghte: but she, and suche as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shall be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shal one stande vp in hys steade, whyche wyth power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to hys strength. As for theyr Idols & pryces, wyth theyr costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shall carye them awaye captiues into Egipt, and he shall reygne more yeares then the king of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shal be fayne to turne againe into his owne land. Wherefore his sonnes shalbee displeased, & shall gather together a myghtye greate hoste of people: and one of them shal come, & goe thorough lyke a water floude: then shall he returne, and goe forth wyth defynge and boastynge, vnto hys owne lande. Then the kynge of the south shalbee angrye, and shall come forth to fight agaynst the kinge of the north: yea, he shal bring a great multitude of people together, and a great heape shall bee geuen into his hand: these shal be cary away with great pryde, forsomuch as he hath cast down so manye thousandes: neuertheles, he shal not preuayle. For the kynge of the northe shall gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, & come forth (after a certain time & yeares) with a mighty hoost, and exceading greate good.

At thesame tyme there shall manye stand vp agaynste the kynge of the south, so that the wicked chyldren of thy people also shall exalt themselues (to fulfyll the vysion) and the fall. So the kyng of the north shall come to lay sege, and to take the strong fensed cities: And the power of them of the south shal not be able to abyde hym, and the best menne of the people shall not be so strong as to resiste hym. Howbeit, when he commeth, he shall handell hym as he lyste, and no man shalbee so hardye as to stande agaynste hym.

He shal stande in the pleasaunt countrie, which thorowe hym shalbe destroyed. He shall set hys face wyth all hys power to obtayne hys kyngdome, and to be lyke it. Yea, that shall he do, and geue hym vnto the daughters amonge wemen to destroye hym. But he shal fayle, nether shall he obtayne hys purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Iles, and take many of the. A pryncc shal stoppe him to do him a shame, beside the confusion yt els shal come vnto him. Thus shal he turne agayne to his owne lande, stomble and fal, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpō hym and dyd hym vyolence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunte kyngdom: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, & that neyther in wrath, nor in battell. In his steade there shall aryse a vyle persone, not holden worthye of a kynges dygnitie: this shal come in peaceably, & obtayne the kingdome with fayre woordes: he shall fyght agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, & agaynst the pryncc of the couenaunt. So after that he hath take truce with hym, he shall handle dyscentfullye that he may gette vp and ouercome hym wyth a small flocke, and so with craftynelle to gette hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse, then eyther his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroy the thing that they had robbed & spoyled yea, & al theyr substaunce, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the strong holdes, & that for a time. His power and heart shalbe stiered vp with a great army agaynst the king of the south, where thorow the king of the south shalbe moued then vnto battel with a great & mighty hoste also. Neuertheleſſe he shall not be able to stand, for they shal conspyre against him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shall hurte him: so that his hoste shal fall, & many be slayne downe. These two kynges shalbe minded to do mischefe, and talke of dyscey le at one table, but they shall not prospere: for why? the end shal not come yet, vnto the time appointed. * Then shal he goe home agayn vnto his owne lande with great good, and sette hys hearte agaynste the holy couenaunt: he shal be busy agaynste it, and then returne home. At the tyme appointed, he shall come agayn and goe towarde the south. So shall it happen otherwyse then at the fyrste, yet once agayne. And why? the shyppes with Italians shall come vpon hym, that he maye bee smytten, and turne agayne: that he maye take indygnacyon agaynste the couenaunte of holynesse, to medle agaynste it.

* 1. Mac. 8.

set mighty me to vnhalowe the Sanctuary and to set vp the abhominable desolacion.

And suche as breake the couenaunt, shall he flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people that wyll knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande & prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandyng among the people, shall en-courme the multitude: and for a long season they shall be persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, with captiuite, & with the taking away of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fal, they shall be set vp wyth a lytle helpe: but many shall cleaue vnto them fayndelye.
Yea some of those which haue vnderstãding shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed, purified and clensed, tyll the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme appointed.
a. The kyng shall do what hym lyst * he shall ursed already. He shal not regarde the God of hys fathers, but hys luste shall be vpon women. Yea, he shal not care for anye God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all.

In hys place shall he worshyp the myghtye knewe not, shall he honoure wyth gold and syluer wyth precious stones and pleasaunt

G fensed places, setting vp hys straunge God whom he confesseth, & increasyng his glory.
Suche as wyll receaue hym and take hym for God, he shal geue them greate worshyp and power: yea, and make them lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande wyth rewardes. In the latter tyme shal the kynge of the south stryue wyth hym, and the kynge of the north in like maner shal come agaynst hym wyth charettes, horsemen and wyth a greate naup of shyppes. He shall come into the landes, destroy and go thorowe: he shall enter also into the fayre pleasaunte lande.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Danyel.

The booke of the prophete Oseas.

¶ The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takyng an harlot to his wyfe, sygnifyeth the ydolatry of the people. The destruccion of the offspryng of Iehu, and of the Israelytes, is prophecyed.

THis is the woorde of the Lord that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery* in the dayes of Oseas, Joathan, Ihas, and Ezekias kinges of Juda, & in the time of Jeroboā the sonne of Joas king of Israel. Fyrst whē the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto him: Go thy way, take an harlot to thy wyfe, & get chyldrē by her, for the land hath cōmytted greate whoredom against the Lord. So he wēt & tooke Gomer, the doughter of Deblaim, which conceiued and brought forth a son. And the Lord sayd vnto him: call his name Jezrael, for I will shortly auenge the bloud of Jezrael, vpon the house of Jehu, & will bryng the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then will I breake the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezrael. She conceiued yet agayne, and bare a doughter: And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name Loruhamah (that is, not obtayning mercye:) * for I will haue no pitie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce.* Neuertheles, I wil haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wil saue them euen thorowe the Lord their God. But I wyll not delyuer them thorowe any bowe, swearde, battayle, horses, or horsemenne. Nowe when she had wayned Loruhamah, she conceyued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayde he: call his name Loampe. For why* ye are not my people: therefore wyll not I be your God. And though the numbre of the children of Israel be as the sande of the sea, which can neyther be measured nor told, yet in the place where it is sayde vnto them: *ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of them: *they be the children of the lyuyng God. ‡ Then shall the children of Juda, and the children of Israel, be gathered together agaīne, and chose themselues one head, and then depart out of the land: for great shalbe the daye of Israel.

The people is called vnto repentaunce.

TEll your brethren that they are my people: and your systers, that they haue obtayned mercye. As for your mother ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her, *for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande: onelesse she put awaye her whoredome out of my syght, and her aduoutrye from her brestes. Yt no, I shall strippe her naked, and set her *euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, and slay her for thyrst. But I wyll hedge her way with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her fore steppes: & though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shall seke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: well, I will go turne agayne to my firste husbande: for at that time was I better at ease then nowe. Hose. 3. b latter dayes they shall worshyppe the Lorde, and his louyng kyndnesse.

The. iiii. Chapter.

A complaynt agaynst the people, and the priestes, of Israel.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, O ye children of Israel. For the Lorde must punyshe them that dwell in the lande. And why? there is no trueth, there is no mercye, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearyng, lying, manslaughter: theft & aduoutry haue gotten the vpper hand, & one bloud giltynes followeth another. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein shall bee rooted out. The beastes in the field, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea, shall dye: Yet is there none that wyll chasten nor reproue an other. For * thy people rebuketh þ priestes, Hose. 4. c whiche shoulde refourme other menne.

Therfore stombiest thou in the daye tyme, and the Prophete with thee in the night. I wil bryng thy mother to silence: and why? * my people perysshe, because Hose. 4. a they haue no knowledge. Seeyng then Ezech. 44. a that thou haste refused vnderstandyng, therefore wyll I refuse thee also: so that thou shalt nomore be my priest. And for somuche as thou haste forgotten the law of thy God, I wyll also forget thy children. The more they increased in the multytude, the more they synned against me: therfore wyll I chaunge their honoure into shame. * They eate vp the synnes of Leui. 6. d my people, and courage them in their

Whoredome, wyne, and dronkennesse, taketh taketh the hert awaye. * Myne people aske counsayle at theyr stockes, theyr staffe muste tell them. For a whorysshe mynde hath deceyued them, so that they commit fornicacion agaynst theyr God. * They make sacrifyces vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hylles: yea, among the okes, groues, & bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre doughters are become harlottes, and your spouses haue broken theyr wedlocke. I will not punysh your doughters for beeyng defyled, and your bydes that became whores: * seeyng the fathers themselues haue medled wyth harlottes, and offred with vnthryftes: but the people that will not vnderstande, must be punyshed. Though thou Israel arte disposed to playe the harlotte, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldeste not haue runne vnto Gilgal, * nor haue gone vp to Bethauen: nor haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore shall make her fede as the lambe that goeth astray. And whereas Ephraim is become partaker of idols, well, let hym goe: theyr dronkennesse hath put them backe, and brought them to whoredome. Theyr rulers loue rewardes, bryng (say they) to theyr owne shame. A wynde shall take holde of theyr fethers: and they shall be confounded in theyr offrynges.

The.v. Chapter.

Against the priestes and rulers of Israel.

Ye priestes, heare this, take hede, O thou housholde of Israel: geue eare, O thou kyngly house, for it were your parte to see iudgemente done: but you are become a snare vnto Mysphah, and a spred nette vnto the mounte of Thabor. They kyll sacrifyces by heapes: and turne farre from the Lorde, and I haue been a rebuker of them all. * I knowe Ephraim well ynough, & Israel is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlotte, and Israel is defyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto theyr God, for they haue an whorish hart, so that they cannot knowe the Lord. * But the pryde of Israel will be rewarded him in his face: yea, both Israel & Ephraim shal fal for their wickednesse, & Juda with them also. * They shal come with theyr shepe & bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone fro them. As for the Lord, they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastard chyldren: a moneth therfore shall deuoure them with theyr portyons.

Blowe with the trawmes in Gibea, and with the trompette in Ramah: crye out at Bethauen vpon the pondesyde of Benjamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therefore dyd I faythfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the pynces of Juda become lyke them * that remoue the lande markes: Therefore will I powre oute my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no right of the law: for why, they folowe ỹ doctrynes of vngodly men. Therfore will I be vnto Ephraim as a mothe, & to the house of Juda as a caterpiller. When Ephraim saw his sycknesse and Juda his disease, * Ephraim wet vnto Assur, & sent vnto king Jareb: yet coulde not he helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wil spoyle them, and go my waye. I will take them with me, and no man shall rescue them: I will goe, and returne to my place, tyll they knowledge that they haue synned, and seke me.

The.vi. Chapter.

Affliccyon causeth a man to turne to God. The wyckednesse of the priestes.

In theyr aduersytie, they shall earlye seke me, and saye: come, lette vs turne agayns to the Lord * for he hath smytten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shall he quycken vs, in the thyrd day he shall rayse vs vp so that we shal lyue in his sight. Then shal we haue vnderstanding, and endeuer oure selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go forth as the spryng of the day, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and mornyng rayne vpon the earth. O Ephraim, what shall I doe vnto thee? O Juda, howe shal I entreate thee? seyng youre loue is lyke a mornynge cloude, and lyke a dewe that goeth earlye awaye. Therefore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, & let them be slaine for my wordes sake: so that thy punishmẽt shall come to light. * For I haue pleasure in louing kyndnes, & not in offryng: yea, in the knowledge of God more then in burnte sacrifyce. But euen wyckednesse & lyes. All these burne in aduoutry, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth when he hath left knedyng, tyll ỹ begyn to be wood dronken thorowwyne, yet doe they ymagine mysscheefe agaynste

They shall begyn to bee wery̌ed with the burthen of kynges and prynces. Ephraim hathe made many aultars to do wyckednesse, his aultars (I saye) he had to his syn.
Thoughe I shewe them my lawe neuer so moch, they counte it but straunge doctrine.
D where as they do sacrifice, offeryng the fleshe, and eatyng it, the Lord will haue no pleasure therein: but will remembre theyr wyckednesse, and punysshe theyr synnes.

buylde fayre palaces, & Juda maketh mafyre into theyr cities, and it shall consume theyr palaces.

The.ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuyte of Israel.

REioyce not thou, O Israel, make no boastyng ouer ioyous thynges as do the Heathen: for thou hast committed aduoutrye agaynst thy God: whoryshe rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the corne floores. r.2.c * Therefore shall they nomore enioye the corne floores and wyne presses, and theyr swete wyne shall fayle them. They wil not 4.4.d dwell in the Lordes lande: * but Ephraim tourneth agayne into Egipte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assirians.
They poure oute no wyne for a drynke-offering vnto ỹ Lord, neyther geue they him theyr slayne offrynges: but they be vnto thẽ as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them, are defyled. For the breade that they haue suche luste vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wyll ye do thẽ in the solemne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo, they shal get them away D for the destruccyon. Egipt shal receyue thẽ, and Noph shall bury them. The nettles shall ouergrowe theyr pleasaunt goodes, and burres shalbe in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visytacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hand: And then shal Israel know, that they were deceyued by a prophet, foolysshe, mad, & in a frensy: for ỹ multitude of thyne iniquitie, God shall multiplye enemyes a-gaynste the. Ephraim hath made hym selfe a watcheman of my God, a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in euery strete, a abhomynacion in the house of hys God.
They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed themselues, like as they dyd afore tyme * at Gabaa: therefore theyr wyckednesse shal-be remembred, and theyr synnes punyshed.

I founde Israel lyke grapes in the wil-dernes, and sawe theyr fathers as the fyrst C they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne a- * Nu.25.d waye fro me to that shamefull ydoll, & are become as abhomynable as theyr louers.

Ephraim flyeth lyke a byrde, so shall theyr glorie also: Insomuche ỹ they shal neyther beget, conceyue, nor beare children. And though they bryng vp any, yet wil I make them childles amonge men. Yea, woe shall come to them, when I departe from them.
* Ephraim (as me thinke) is plãted in wel- Ez.28.a. thynesse, lyke as Tyrus: but nowe muste he brynge her owne children forth to the murtherar. O Lorde thou shalt geue them: D what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfrutefull wombe, and drye breastes. All theyr wickednes is done at * Gilgal, there Iosu.4.d do I abhorre thẽ. For the vngratiousnesse of theyr owne inuencions, I wyl dryue thẽ oute of my house. I will loue them nomore, for all theyr princes are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, theyr roote is dryed vp, so that they shall brynge nomore frute: yea, & though they brynge forthe anye, yet will I slaye euen the beste beloued frute of theyr body. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedyent vnto hym: therefore shall they go astraye amonge the Heathen.

The.x. Chapter.

Agaynste Israell and hys ydoles.

ISraell was a goodly, * fyne, I but he hathe brought forthe vn- Esa.5.a. profytable frute: yea, the more frute he had, the moe aultares he made: ỹ more good I did to theyr lande, the more frendshyp shewed they to theyr ymages. Theyr heart is deuided, therefore wyll they bee destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe theyr ymages, he shall de-stroye theyr alters. Then shal they saye: we haue no kynge, for why? we haue not feared the Lord. And what shall then the king do to vs? They commune together, and sweare bayne othes: they bee confederate together, therefore groweth their punysh-mente as the wedes in the forowes of the lande. They that dwell in Samaria haue B worshypped the calfe of Bethauen: therefore shall the people mourne ouer them.
Yea, and the prestes also that in theyr welthynesse reioyced with them: and why? it shall passe awaye from them. It shalbee brought to the Assiryan, for a present vnto kyng Jareb. Ephraim shall receyue ful punyshemente. Israel shalbe confounded for his owne imaginacions. Samaria with hys kynge shall vanyshe awaye, as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Auen, where Israel do synne, shal be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall growe Luke.23.c. vpon theyr alters. * Then shall they saye Apoc.6.c. to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the C hylles, fall vpon vs. O Israell, thou hast Iud.19.a. synned as * Gabaa dyd afore tyme where they remayned: shoulde not the battayle them come vpon the wycked chyldren, as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyl chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre: the people shalbe gathered together ouer the, when I punyshe them for theyr great wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vsed to go to plowe, therfore I loued hym, and set vpon hys fayre necke: I drowe Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Iacob played the housbande manne. Sowe vnto righteousnesse, and reape the frutes of welldoyng: plowe vp youre fresshe lande, for it is tyme to seke the Lorde, tyll he come & rayne righteousnesse vpon you. But you haue D plowed vngodlynesse, ye haue reaped iniquitie, you haue eaten the frute of lyes.

Seyng thou puttest thy confidence in thine owne wayes, & leanest to the multitude of thy worthyes: there shall growe a sedicyon amonge thy people. All thy stronge cytyes shalbe layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his complices, thorowe hym that was auenged of Arbell, in the daye of battayle, where the mother perished with her chyldren: Euen so shal it go with you, O Bethel, because of youre maliciyous wyckednes. Lyke as the morowyng goeth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israell passe.

The.xi. Chapter.

Agaynste the vnkyndnesse of Israel.

When Israell was yonge I loued him, * and called my sonne out of the lande of Egypte. But the more they were called, the more they wente backe, to offeryng vnto yools of Baal, and censyng ymages. I learned Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me that would haue holpen them. I led them with cordes of frendshipp, and with bandes of loue. I was euen he that layed the yocke vpon theyr Exo.16.c. neckes. * I gaue theyr fodder my selfe, that they shoulde not go agayne into Egypte. And nowe is Assur theyr kynge. For they woulde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the swerde beginne in theyr cities, the store that they haue laydc vp, shalbe destroyed and eaten: and that because of theyr owne ymaginacions: and my people shall stande
B in a doubte whither to turne them, for whē the propheetes called them to the moste hyest, not one yet woulde geue him his glory.
What great thinges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim? howe faythfully haue I defended thee O Israell? haue I dealt with Gen.19.d. Deu.29.d. thee as with * Adama? Or haue I entreated thee lyke Seboim? No, my hearte is otherwyse mynded. Yea, my mercie is to feruent: therefore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrathefull displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euē that holy one in the myddest of the, though I came not within the citye. The Lorde roreth lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe C hym: yea, * as a lyon roreth he, that they Apoc.
may be afrayde lyke the chyldren of the sea, & they maye be scattred awaye frō Egipt, as men scatre byrdes: and frayde away as doues vse to bee from the Assirians lande: and that because I woulde haue them tary at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goeth about me with lyes, and the house of Israell dyssembleth: Only Iuda holdeth hym vp God, & with the true holy thinges.

The.xii. Chapter.

Agaynste the vayne trustes of the people.

Ephraim is fed with ayre, and folowyth after the easte wynde; he is euer increasynge lyes and destruccyon. They be confederate with & Assyrians. * Theyr oyle is caryed into Egypte. The Lord hath a courte 4.Re. to holde with Iuda, and will punyshe Iacob. After theyr owne wayes, & accordyng to theyr owne inuencyons, shall he recompence them. * He toke hys brother by the Gen. heele, when he was yet in hys mothers wombe: and in hys strengthe he wrestled with God. He * stroue with the Angel, & Gen.
gat the victory: so that he prayde and desyred hym. * He founde hym at Bethel, and Gen.
there he talketh with vs: yea, & Lord God D of hoostes, euen the Lorde hym selfe remembred hym. Then turne to thy God, kepe mercye and equytie, and hope styll in thy God. But thou art like the marchaunt, that hath a false wayght in hys hande, he hathe a pleasure to oppresse extorcyon. Ephraim thynketh thus: * Tushe, I am ryche, I Gen.
haue goode ynough: in all my workes shall not

not one fault her founde, that I haue offended. yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the land of Egipte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the the feaste dayes. I haue spoke thorow the prophetes, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the mynistracyon of the prophetes. But at Gilead is the abhominacyon, they are fallen to vanitie. At Gilgall they haue slayne oxen: as manye heapes of stones as they had in theyr landforowes, so many aulters haue they made.
* Jacob fled into the lande of Syria. and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe. By a prophet ỹ Lord brought the out of Egypt, and by a prophet he preserued them But Ephraim hath prouoked hym to displeasure thorow his abhominacyons, therefore shall hys bloud be poured vpon hym selfe, and the Lord his God shall rewarde hym hys blasphemyes.

The.xiii. Chapter.

Of the abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the heathe trembled: and he was exalted amonge the Israelites, but he is gone backe, to Baal: therefore muste he dye. And nowe they synne moze & moze: * of theyr syluer they make the molte ymages, after the ymaginacyons of theyr owne brayues, that is very dols, and yet all is nothing, but the worke of the crafteman. Not withstandyng, they preache of ỹ same to suche as there sacrifyceth: whoso wyll kysse the calues, offreth perfectly.
Therefore they shall be as the morninge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye: and lyke as dust that the whirlewind taketh away from the flooze, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.
* I am the Lorde God, whiche brought the oute of the lande of Egypte: that thou shouldest knowe no God but me onely, and that thou shouldest haue * no sauyeur but onely me. I toke dylygent hede of the in the wyldernesse, that drye lande. But whe they were well fedde, & had ynoughe, they waxed proude, and forgat me: * therefore wyll I be vnto them as a lyon and as a leopard in the waye to the Assirians. I will come vpon them, as a she Beare that is robbed of her whelpes, & I wil breake that stubburne harte of theyrs. There wyll I deuoure the as a lyon: yea, the wylde beastes shall teare them. * O Israel, thyne iniquitie hathe destroyed ther, but in me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kynges nowe, that shoulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yea, and thy Judges, of whome thou saidest * giue me a kynge and Prynces: (well) I gaue the a kyng in my wrath, and in my displeasure will I take him from the agayne. The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde togethee, and hys synne lyeth hyd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon hym, as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vndiscrete sõne is he, for he consydreth not that he shoulde not haue bene bayle to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrthe, had not I defẽded him from the graue, and delyuered hym from deathe. * O deathe, I will bee thy death: O hell, I wyll bee thy stynge: yet can I see no counsoure, for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the brethren, the eastewynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shall come downe from the wyldernesse, and drye vp hys condytes, and dryuke vp hys welles:
he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels. As for Samaria, they shalbe layde waste: and why? they are disobedient vnto theyr GOD. They shall perysshe with the swerde: theyr children shalbe slayne, & theyr wemen great with chylde shalbee rypte vp.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

The destruccion of Samaria.

O Israel, * turne thee nowe vnto the Lorde thy God: for thou hast taken a greate fall thorowe thy wickednesse. Take these wordes with you when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye vnto him: O forgeue vs al our sinnes, receyue vs graciously, * and than wyll we offer the bullockes of our lyppes vnto the.
Assur shal bee nomore oure helper, neyther will we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the workes of our handes, we wyl nomore call vpon them: for in it is thou that art oure GOD: thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse. O (yf they would do thys) I shoulde heale theyr sores: yea, with al my harte would I loue the: so that my wrath shoulde cleane bee tourned awaye from them. Yea, I would be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shoulde growe as the lylye, & hys roote shoulde breake out as Libanus.
His braunches should spreade out abrode, and ber as fayre as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwell vnder hys shadowe shoulde come agayne, and growe vp as the corne: and flozysshe as the vyne.
He should haue as good a name as ỹ wine of Libanus. O Ephraim, what haue I to do with ydols any more? I wyll graciously heare hym, and leade hym forthe.

I wyll bee vnto thee as a grene fyrre tree: vpon me shalt thou finde thy frute. * Who-

¶ The ende of the Prophetie of Oseas.

The booke of the Prophet Joell.

The firste Chapter.

A prophecye against the Jewes. He exhorteth the priestes to prayer and fastynge, for the miserye that was commynge at hande.

THis is the worde of ꝑ Lord that came vnto Joell ꝑ sone of Phatuell. Heare, O ye elders: ponder this well, al ye that dwell in the lande: Pf euer there happened suche a thing in youre dayes, or in ꝑ dayes of your fathers. Tell your children of it, and let thē shewe it vnto theyr children, and so they to certifye theyr posterytie thereof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath ꝑ grashopper eaten vp: what the grashopper left, that hath the locuste eaten vp: & what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed. Wake vp ye dronkerdes, and wepe, mourne al ye wine suppers, because of youre swete wyne: for it shalbe taken away from youre mouthe. Yea, a myghtie & innumerable people shall come vp into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, and chawbones lyke the lionesses.
Deu. 32. d * They shall make my vyneyarde waste, they shall pyl of the barkes of my fygtrees, stripe them bare, caste them away, & make the braunches whyte. Make thy mone as a virgin dothe that gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her brydegrome. For the meate and drynke offrynge shalbe taken away from the house of the Lorde, and the priestes, ꝑ Lordes ministers shal mourne. The fielde shalbe wasted, the lande shall be in a myserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shall come to con¶ fusyon, and the oyle vterly desolate. The husband men and the wyne gardeners shall loke pyteously, and make lamentation for the wheate, wyne and barley, and because the harueſt vpō the field is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make greate mone, when the vyneyarde and fygtrees be so vterly wasted. Yea, al the pomgranates, palmtrees, apple trees, & the other trees of the field shal wyther awaye. Thus the mery chere of the chyldren of menne shal come to confusyon. Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O ye priestes, mourne ye ministers of the aultar: go yourr waye in, and slepe in sackeclothe, O ye officers of my God: for D the meate and drynke offrynge shalbee taken awaye from the house of your GOD. Proclayme a fastyng, call the congregacyon, gather the elders, * and all the inhabytours of the lande together into the house Joel. 2. of the Lorde youre God, and crye vnto the Lord: alas, alas, for thys daye. And whye the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Shall not the meates bee taken away before oure eyes, the myrth also and ioye frō the house of oure God? The sede shal perish in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the floores shalbe broken downe, for the corne shall bee destroyed. O what a syghynge make the kyne? the bullockes are in verye euell lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famyshed away.

O Lord, to thee will I crye: for the fire hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wildernes, and the flame hathe burnt vp al the trees of the field. Yea the wild beastes crye also vnto thee, for the water ryuers are dryed vp, & the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wildernesse.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth the comynge and crueltye of theyr enemyes. An exhortation to moue them to repentaunce.

BLowe oute ꝑ trompet in Syon, I and crye vpon my holye hyl, that all suche as dwell in the lande, may tremble at it: * for the daye Daye of the Lorde commeth, and is harde at the lord. hande: a darke daye, a glomynge daye, a cloudye daye: yea, and a stormy daye, lyke as the morynge spreadeth out vpon the hylles. Namely, a great and myghtye people: suche as haue not bene sence the begynnynge, neyther shalbee after them for euermore. Before hym shall bee a consuming fyre, and behynde hym a burnynge flame. The lande shalbee as a garden of pleasure before hym: but behynde hym shall it bee a verye waste wyldernesse, and there is no man that shal escape hym: They are to loke vpon

vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horsemen. They skyppe vp vpon the hilles as it were the sounde of charettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the battayle. The folke shalbee afrayde of hym, al faces shal bee as blacke as a potte. These shall runne lyke Gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in hys going shall kepe hys araye, and not go oute of hys pathe. There shall not one dryue an other, but eche shall kepe hys owne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, and not bee hurte. They shall come into the citie, & runne vpō the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and skippe in at the windowes lyke a theefe. The earth shall quake before hym: yea, the heauens shalbee moued. * The Sunne and the moone shal be darkened, and the starres shall withdrawe theyr shyne. The Lorde shall shewe hys voyce before hys hoaste, for hys hoost is greate, stronge and mightye, to fulfyll hys commaundement. Thys is that greate and marueylous fearefull daye of the Lord. * And who is able to abyde it? Nowe therefore sayeth the Lord: † Turne you vnto me wt all your heartes, with fastynge, weppynge and mournynge: rent youre heartes and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre GOD, *for he is gracyous and mercyfull, longe suffrynge, and of greate compassyon: and ready to pardon wyckednesse. Then (no doubte) he also shall turne and forgeue, & after hys chastenynge he shall let youre encrease remayne for meate and drynke offringes vnto the Lorde your God. * Blow out with the trompet in Syon, proclayme a fastyng, call the congregacyō, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, bryngе the chyldrē and sucklynges together. Lette the bryde grome go forthe of hys chamber, and the bride out of her closet. Let ꝑ priestes serue the Lorde bet wyxte the porche and the aulter, weppynge, and sayinge: her fauourable, O Lorde, her fauourable vnto thy people, let not thyne heritage bee brought to suche confusyon, lest the Heathen be lordes thereof. * Wherefore shoulde they saye amonge the Heathen: where is nowe theyr God? ‡

Then shal the Lorde be gelouse ouer his lande and spare hys people: yea, the Lord shall answere and saye vnto hys people: Beholde, I wyll sende you corne, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plentye of them: and I will nomore geue you ouer, to bee a reprofe amonge the Heathen. Agayne, as for hym of ꝑ northe, I shal dryue hym farre from you: and shutte hym oute into a drye and waste lande, hys face towarde the easte sea, and hys hynder partes towarde the vttermoste sea. The stinke of hym shall goe vp, and hys fylthy corruptyon shall fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proudely. Feare not (O land) but be glad, and reioyce: for the Lord will doo greate thynges. Be not ye afrayde neyther (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shal beare theyr fruite: the sygtrees and vyneyardes shall geue theyr increase. Bee glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) and reioyce in the Lorde youre GOD, for he hath geuen you a teacher of ryghteousnesse: *and he it is that shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, earlye and late in the fyrste moneth: so that the garners shalbee full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wine and oyle. And as for the eares that the grashopper locuste, blastynge, and caterpyller, (my greate hoste whyche I sente amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne, so that ye shall haue ynoughe to eate, and bee satysfyed: and prayse the name of the Lorde youre GOD, that so marueylously hathe dealte with you.

And my people shall neuer bee confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddeste of Israell, and that I am the Lorde youre GOD, yea, and that there is none other: and my people shall nomore bee brought to confusyon.

* After thys wyll I poure oute my spryte vpon all fleshe: and youre sonnes and youre doughters shall prophecye: youre olde men shal dreame dreames, and youre yong men shall see visyons: yea in those dayes I wil poure oute my spryte vpon seruauntes and maydens. I wyll shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the earth beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shalbee turned into darkenesse, and the moone into bloud, before the great and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come, that * whosoeuer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall bee saued. For vpon the mounte Syon, and at Jerusalem, there shall bee a saluacyon, like as the Lorde hathe promysed: yea, and amonge the other remnaunte, whome the Lorde shall call.

Then shal Jerusalem be holy, and there shal no straūgers gothorowe yer any more. * Then shal Amos. 9. the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynoughe, and out of þ Lordes house there shal flow a spryng, to water the brooke of * Sittim: but Egypt shalbe layde waste, and Edom Jere. 49. Jer. 49.
shalbe desolate: because they haue deale so cruelly with the children of Juda, and shed innocente bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Juda shalbee inhabyted for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generacion: for I will not leaue theyr bloud vnauēged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

C The ende of the prophecye of Joell.

The booke of the Prophete Amos.

The first Chapter.

The tyme of the prophecye of Amos. The wordes o. the Lorde agaynste Israh, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynste the sonnes of Ammon.

THese are the sermons I that were shewed vn-to Amos, (which was one of the shepheardes at Thecua) vpō Israel, in the tyme of * Ozias kynge of Juda, & Amos. 7. 4. Reg. 15. in the tyme of * Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israell, 4. Reg. 14.
two yeare before the earthe quake. And he sayde: * The Lorde shall roze out of Sion, Jere. 25.
and shewe hys voyce from Jerusalem, so þ Joel. 3. the pastures of the shepherdes shall be in a myserable case, and the top of C Carmel dryed vp. Thus sayeth the Lord: for thre and foure wyckednesses of * Damascus, I will Esa. 17.
not spare her: because they haue thresshed Jere. 49.
Galaad with yron flayles. But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, þ same shall B consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and roote out the inhabyter from the feld of

Aun,

Iuen, and him that holdeth the scepter out
B of the pleasaunte house: so that the people shalbe dryuen out of fayre Syrya, sayeth the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of *Gaza, I wyll not spare her: because they make the prysoners yet more captyue, and haue dryuen the into the lande of Edom. Therefore wyll I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses. I will rote oute them that dwell at Asdod, and him that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretche oute myne hande ouer Iccaron, that the renaunt of the Philistines shall perysshe, saith the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord: for thre C and foure wyckednesses of the Cityе of *Tyre, I will not spare her: because they haue encreased the captiuytie of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the *brotherly couenaunte. Therefore wyll I sende a fyre into the walles of Tire, that shal consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of *Edō, I will not spare hym, because he perse-ted hys brother with the sweard, destroyed hys mothers wombe, bare hatered very longe, and so kepte indignacion alway by him. Therefore wil I send a fyre into The-man, whiche shall deuoure the palaces of D Bosra. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the childrē of *Ammon, I wyll not spare them: because they rypte vp the wemen greate with childe in Galaad, to make ꝓ borders of theyr lādes the wider. Therfore I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces, with a greate crye, in the daye of battayle, in tempeste and in the daye of storme: so that theyr kyng shall go into cap-tiuitie, he and hys prynces together, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The ii Chapter.

Agaynste Moab, Juda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wyll * not spare hym: because he brent the bones of the kyng of Edom to asshes: Therefore will I sende a fyre into Moab, whiche shal consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shal perysshe with noyse, & the sounde of a shawme.
I will rote oute the Iudge from amonge them, and slaye all hys prynces with hym, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde:
for thre and foure wyckednesses of *Juda, B I will not spare him: because he hath caste alyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kepte hys commaundementes: for why  they Jere.44. woulde nedes bee dyscyued with the lyes Ezec.20.c that theyr forefathers folowed. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into Juda, whiche shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Israell, I will not spare hym, C because he hath solde ꝓ ryghteous for money, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of ꝓ earthe, and crooke the wayes of the meke.
The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name: they lye besyde euery aultare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of theyr gods they drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amorye *before them, that Num.13.c was as hye as the Cedre trees, & as strong as the okes: not withstandyng I destroyed his frute from aboue, and hys rote from vnder. *Agayne, I brought you out of the Exo.14.c lande of Egypte, and led you fourty yeres Deu.1.a. thorowe ꝓ wildernes, that ye myght haue the Amorites lande in possession. I rayled vp prophetes amonge youre children, and aduoteyners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayeth the D Lorde? *But ye gaue the aduoteyners wine Num.6.a to drynke: yea, ye cōmaunded ꝓ prophetes, + Jere.11.a saying: Prophecy not. Behold, I wil crasshe you in sōder, lyke as a wayne crasheth that is ful of sheaues, so that the swifte shal not escape, nether the stronge be able to do any thynge: no, the Giaunt shall not saue hys owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyfte of fote shal not escape. The horseman shall not saue hys lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a gyaunte, shall in that daye bee fayne to runne hys waye naked, sayeth the Lorde.

The.iii. Chapter.

He reproueth the house of Israel of wickednesse.

Heare what the Lorde speaketh I vnto you (O ye children of Israeell,) namely, vnto al the tribes, whom I brought out of Egipt, and sayde: *you onely haue I excepted frō Deu.4.c. all the generacions of the earth: therefore and.32.b. wyll I visit you in al youre wyckednesses.
Maye twayne walke together, except they bee agreed amonge them selues? *Dothe Iob.6.a. a lyon roze in the woode, except he haue a praye? Or cryeth a lions whelpe out of his den, except he haue gotte somethyng? Doth a byrde fal in a snare vpon the earth where B no fouler is? Taketh a man hys snare vp from the grounde, afore he catche sowhat?

Crye

Crye they out Alarum with the trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayed? Cõmeth there any plage in a Cite, without it bee the Lordes doynge? Nowe doth the Lorde God no maner of thynge, but he telleth hys secret before vnto hys seruauntes the prophetes. When a Lyon roareth who wyll not bee afrayed? Seyng then that the Lorde God hym selfe speaketh who wyll not prophecie? Preache in ỹ palaces at Asdod, & in the palaces of the lande of Egipt, and saye: gather you together vpon ỹ mõtaynes of Samaria, so shall ye see greate murther and violente oppression amonge them: for why? they regarde not the thyng ỹ is ryght, sayth ỹ Lord: they gather together ruel gotté goodes, & lay vp robbery in theyr houses. Therefore, thus sayth ỹ lord God. This lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde aboute, thy strength shalbee pluct from ther, and thy palaces robbed.

D Thus sayeth the Lorde, lyke as an heardman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the Lyons mouthe: Euen so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria hauyng theyr couches in the corner, theyr bedds at Damascus shalbe pluct away. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob, (sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes) that when ỹ begynne to vysit the wickednesse of Israell, I will vysit the Iultares at Bethell also: so that the hornes of ỹ Iultare shalbe broken of, & fall to the grounde.

As for the wynter house and sommer house, I wyll smyte them downe: and the houses of yuory, yea, and many other houses shal perishe, and be destroied, sayeth the Lorde.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Agaynste the gouernours of Samaria.

HEare this worde ye fat kine, that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poore men wrong, & oppresse the nedy, ye that saye to youre lordes: bringe hyther, let vs drinke. Therfore, the Lord hath sworne by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpõ you, that ỹ enemies shal cary you away in shippes, & your posterytie shalbe carred awaye vpon fyshers hokes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, euen the kinges palace shal you ouerthrow, to make a way to escape, sayeth the Lord. Ye came to * Bethel for to worke vngraciousnes, and haue encreased youre synnes at * Gilgall: ye bringht youre sacrifyces in the morynge, and youre tythes vnto the thyrde daye. Ye made a thanckeofferyng of leuen, ye proclayme & preache free will offrynges and proclayme them. Suche lyste had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I geuen you ydle teeth in all youre Cyties, & scarcenesse of breade in all youre places, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Yhe there were but thre monethes vnto the harueste, * I withholde the rayne from you: yea, I rayned vpon one Cite, & not vpon another: one pece of grounde was moysture with rayne, and ỹ ground that I rayned not vpon, was dry. Wherefore two, yea, thre cities [illegible] to drynke water, but they [illegible] yet wyll ye not turne [illegible] the Lorde. I haue [illegible] and blastyng: and loke how [illegible] gardes, vineyardes, fygtrees and oliue trees ye had, the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Pestylence haue I sente among you, * as I dyd in Egypte: youre yonge menne haue I slayne with the sweard, and caused youre horses to bee taken captiue: I made the stynkynge sauoure of youre tentes, to come vp into your nostrels. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen * as I ouerthrewe Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a brande pluct out of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Therefore, thus wyll I handle thee agayne, O Israel: yea eurn thus wyll I handle ther. Make the redy then to mete thy GOD, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the morynge and the darkenesse, he treadeth vpõ the hye places of the earth: the Lorde GOD of Hostes is hys name.

The.v. Chapter.

¶ A complaynt of the captiuite of Israel.

HEare this worde, O ye house of Israel: and why? I muste make thys mone for you. The virgyn Israell shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbe caste downe vpon her owne ground, and no manne shall helpe her vp. For thus sayth ỹ Lord god: Where as there dwelt a thousand in one citie, there shalbe lefte scarce an hundred therin: and where there dwelt an. C. there shall scarce ten be lefte, in the house of Israel. Neuertheles thus sayth the Lord vnto the house of Israell: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel,

Come

Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Ber-saba: for Gilgal shall bee caryed awaye captyue, & Bethell shall come to nought.
Seke the Lorde that ye maye lyue: leste the house of Joseph bee brente with fyre and consumed, and leste there be none to quenche Bethell.

Ye turne the lawe to wormewood, and caste downe ryghteousnesse vnto the grounde. * Ye forsake the Lorde that ma-keth the seuen starres, and the Orions, that turneth the nyght into daye, and of the daye he maketh darknesse. * He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name. He rayseth destruccio vpon the myghtye people, and bryngeth downe ỳ strong holde. But they owe him euil wil, ỳ reprooueth them openly: & whoso telleth thẽ the plaine truth, they abhor him. For so muche then as ye oppresse the poore, & rob him of his best sustenaunce:
* therfore wheras ye haue builded houses of square stone, ye shal not dwell in them.
Maruelous pleasaunt vyneyardes shall you plant but the wyne of thẽ shal ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of your wickednesses & your stout sinnes, I know thẽ right wel. Enemyes are ye of ỳ righteous, * ye take rewardes & oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therfore ỳ wyse must now be fayne to holde his tong, so wicked a time is it. Seke after the thyng that is good, and not euil so shal ye lyue: yea, the Lorde God of hostes shalbe with you, accordyng to youre owne desyre.
* Hate the euill, & loue the good: & set vp right again in the porte: & (no doubt) the Lord god of hostes shalbe merciful vnto the remnaunt of Joseph. If no (sayth the Lorde God, ỳ God of hostes) there shalbe mourning in al stretes: yea, they shal say in euery strete: alas, alas. They shal call the housbandmã to lamentacion, & suche as can mourne to mourning. In al vine-yardes there shalbe heuynesse, for I wyll come amõg you, sayth the Lorde. Woe be vnto them that desyre the day of ỳ Lord.
Wherfore would ye haue it? Is for the day of the Lord, it shalbe darke and not cleare. Yea, lyke as when a man runneth frõ a Lyon & a Bear meteth with him: or when he cõmeth into the house, & leaneth his hande vpon the wall, a serpente byteth hym. Shall not the day of the Lorde be darke * and not cleare? shall it not bee cloudye, and no shyne in it? I hate and abhorre your holy dayes: and where as ye cense me when ye come together, I wil not accepte it. And though ye offer me fyent offeringes and meatofferinges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. Is for youre fatte thanke offerynges, I wyll not loke vpon them. Away with that noyse of thy songes. I wyll not heare thy playes of musycke: but see that equitye flow as the water, and ryghteousnesse, as a myghtye streame. O ye house of Israel, * gaue ye me offerynges and sacrifices those foure yeares long in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre * Moloch, and ymages of your ydols: yea, and the starre of youre God Rempha, fygures whiche ye made to worshyp them. Therfore will I cause you to be caryed awaye beyonde Damascus, sayeth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hostes.

The. vi. Chapter.

Against ỳ pryuces of Israel lyuing in pleasures.

Woe bee to the proude welthy in Syon, to suche as thynke them so sure vpon the mount of Samaria: which hold themselues for the best of the world, and rule the house of Israel, euen as they lust. Go vnto Calne, and see: and from thence get you to Hemath the great citie, & so goe downe to Gath of the Philistines: bee they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of they? lande wyder then youres? ye are taken out for the euill daye, euen ye that syt in the stole of wylfulnes. Ye that lye vpon beddes of yuorye, and vse your wantonnesse vpon your couches: ye that eate ỳ best lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: ye that synge to the lute, & in playing of instrumẽtes compare your selues vnto * Dauid: ye that drynke wyne out of gobletes, & anoynt your selues wyth the best oyle, but no man is sorye for Josephs hurte. Therfore, now shal ye be the fyrste of them, that shalbe led awaye captyue, & the lusty chere of the wilfull shall come to an ende. * The Lorde God hathe sworne euen by himselfe (sayth the Lorde God of hostes) I hate ỳ pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: I wyll geue ouer the cytie, with all that is therein: so that though there remayne ten menne in one house, they shall dye. So they? nerre kynsfolkes and the dead buryers shall take them, and carye awaye they? bones, and saye vnto hym, that is in the inner-mer house: is there yet any moe by thee?

And

And he shall answere: they are all gone, holde thy tounge (shall he saye) * for they wolde not remembre the name of the Lorde. Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte the great houses, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houses, that they shall cleaue a sunder. Who canne runne wyth horses, or plow with oxen vpon the hard rockes of stone? For why, ye haue turned true iudgemente into bytternesse, and the frute of righteousnesse into wormewood. Yea, euen ye that reioyce in vayne thinges, ye that saye: haue not we obtained hornes in oure owne strength? Well take hede, O ye house of Israel, saieth the Lorde God of hoostes: I wyll bryng a people vpon you, which shall trouble you from the waye that goeth toward Hemath vnto the broke in the medowe.

The. vii. Chapter.

Of the captyuitie of Israel and Iuda.

THe Lorde God shewed me suche a vysyon: beholde, there stode one that made Grashoppers, euen when the corne was shotyng forth, after the kyng had clypte his shepe. Nowe when they vndertooke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyfull, I beseeche thee, who shoulde els helpe vp Iacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be. Agayne, the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punishe withall, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea, it consumed a parte alreadye. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hold thyne hand: for who shoulde els helpe vp Iacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therein, and the Lorde God sayde: well, it shall not bee. Moreouer he shewed me this vysyon: beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wall, and a masons trowell in his hande. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a masons trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: beholde, I wyll lay the trowel amonge my people of Israel, and wyll nomore ouersee them, but the hye bychapels of Isaac must be layd waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate: * and as for the house of Ieroboam, I wyll stande vp against it wyth the swearde. Vpon this sente Amasiah the priest to Bethell vnto Ieroboam the kyng of Israel, saying: * Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebell against the: the lande cannot away with his wordes. For Amos sayeth: Ieroboam shall dye with the sweard, and Israel shalbe led away captyue out of their owne lande. And Amasiah sayd vnto Amos. Get the hence * (thou that canst see so well) and flee into the lande of Iuda, gette the there thy lyuing & prophecy there: and prophecy nomore at Bethel, for it is the kinges chappel, & the kinges court. Amos answered, & sayd to Amasiah: Ie * for me I am neither Prophete, nor Prophetes son, but a keper of catel. Now as I was breakyng downe molberyes, & goyng after the catel, the Lorde tooke me, & sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, & prophecy vnto my people of Israel. And therfore heare thou nowe the worde of the Lorde: Thou sayest: prophecy not against Israel, and speake nothing against the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde: Thy wyfe shall bee defyled in the cytie, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe slaine with the sweard, and thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an vncleane lande, * and Israel shall be dryuen out of his owne countrye.

The. viii. Chapter.

Against the rulers of Israel. The Lord sweareth that he wyll fulfyl the thynges which he hath determyned against Israel.

THe Lorde God shewed me this vision: and behold, there was a maund with somer frute. And he said: Amos what seyst thou? I answered: a maund with somer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wyll nomore ouersee them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned into sorowe, sayeth the Lorde God: many dead bodyes shall lye in euery place, and be cast forth secretly. * Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye in the lande, saying: When wil the newe moneth be gone, that we maye sell vytayle, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne to make the bushell lesse, and the sycle greater? We shall sette vp false weyghtes, that we may gette the poore vnder vs wyth their money, and the nedye also for shoes: yea, lette vs sell the chaffe for corne. * The Lorde hathe sworne agaynste the pryde of Iacob: these workes of theyrs wyll I neuer forgette. Shall not the lande trem-

tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for this? Shall not they? destruccyon come vpon them lyke a water streame, and flow ouer them as the floud of Egypte? * At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde God) I shall cause the sunne to goe downe at noone, and the lande to bee darke in the clere daye. * Youre hye feastes wyll I turne to sorowe, and your songes to mournyng: I wyll bryng sackcloth vpon all backes, and baldnesse vpon euerye head: yea, suche a mournyng wyll I sende them, * as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, and they shall haue a myserable ende. Behold, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger into the earthe, not the hunger of breade, nor the thyrste of water, but an hunger to heare the woorde of the Lorde: so that they shall goe from the one sea to the other: yea, from the north vnto the east, runnyng aboute to seke the woorde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that time shall the fayre bryngines and the younge men perysh for thyrste: yea, euen they that sweare in the detestable calfe of Samaria, and saye: as truelye as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truelye as thy God lyueth at Berlaba. These shall fall and neuer ryse vp agayne.

The.ix. Chapter.

Threatnynges agaynste Israel. No manne can escape the hande of God.

I Sawe the LORDE standyng vpon the aultare, and he sayde: smyte the doore cheke, that ỹ postes may shake wythall. For they? couetousnesse shall fall vpon all they? heades, and they? posteryte shall be slayne with the swearde. * They shall nor flee away, there shall not one of them escape nor be delyuered. * Though they were buryed in the hell, my hande shall fetche them from thence: though they clyme vp to heauen, yet shall I cast them downe: though they hyde themselues vpon the toppe of Carmell, yet shall I seke them oute, and bryng them from thence: though they crepe downe from my syght into the depe of the sea, I shall commaunde the serpente, euen there to byte them. If they go awaye before they? enemyes into captiuytie, then shall I commaunde the swearde, there to slaye them. Thus wyll I sette myne eyes vpon them, for they? harme and not for they? wealth. For when the Lorde God of hoostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwell therein, muste nedes mourne: And whye they? destruccion shall aryse as euerye streame, and runne ouer them, as the floude in Egypte. * He that hathe hys dwellyng in heauen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earth. * He that calleth the waters as the sea, and powreth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lorde. O ye chyldren of Israel, are ye not vnto me euē as ỹ Moryans sayth the Lorde? haue not I brought Israel out of the lande of Egypte? * The Philystynes from Captho?, and the Syryans from Cir? Beholde, the eyes of the Lord are vpō the realme that synneth to rote it cleane out of the earth: Neuertheles, * I wyll not vtterlye destroye the house of Jacob sayeth the Lorde.

For loe, this I promyse: though I sykte the house of Israel amonge all nacions (lyke as they vse to sykte in a syue) yet shall not the smalest grauell stone fal vpon the earth: But all the wycked doers of my people, that saye: Tushe, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastelye vpon vs: those shall perysshe wyth the swearde. * At that tyme wyll I buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauyd, that is fallen downe, & hedge vp hys gappes, and looke what is broken, I shall repayre it: yea, I shall buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they may possesse the remnaunte of Edom: yea, and all suche people as cal vpon my name, with them sayeth the Lord whiche doeth these thynges. Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that the plowmanne shall ouertake the mowar, and ỹ treader of grapes hym that soweth seede. * The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall be frutefull, and I wyll turne the captyuitie of my people of Israel: they shall repayre the waste Cyties and haue them in possessyon, they shall plant vynegardes, and drynke the wyne thereof, they shall make gardens, and enioy the frutes of them. And I wil plant them vpon their owne ground, so that I wil neuer roote them out again from they? lande whiche I haue geuen them, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Agaynste Edom and the trust that they had in ryches.

THIS is the vysion that was shewed vnto Abdye. Thus hath the Lord God spoke vpon * Edom. We haue heard of ꝑ Lord that there is an embassage sente among the heathen: Vp, let vs aryse, and fyght agaynst them. Behold, * I wyll make the small amonge the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterlye despysed. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte thee vp, thou that dwellest in the stronge holdes of stone, and haste made thee an hye seate. Thou sayest in thyne harte, who shall caste me downe to the grounde? * But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Iegle, and madest thy nest aboue among the starres: yet wouldе I plucke thee downe from thence sayeth the Lorde. ¶ If the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takyng thy rest: should they not steale, tyll they had enough? ¶ If the grape gatherers came vpon thee, wouldе they not leaue the summe grapes? ¶ But howe shall they serche Esau, and seke oute his treasure? Yea the menne that were sworne vnto thee, shall dryue thee oute of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be now at one wyth thee, shall dyscerue thee: and ouercome thee: Euen they that eate thy breade, shall betraye thee, or euer thou perceyue it. * Shall not I at the same tyme destroye the wysemenne of Edom, and those that haue vnderstandyng from the mounte of Esau? Thy gyauntes (O Theman) shall bee afrayde, for thorowe the slaughter, they shall bee all ouerthrowen vpon the mounte of Esau. Shame shall come vpon thee for the malyce that thou shewedste to thy *brother Iacob: yea, for euermore shalt thou perysshe, and that because of the tyme, when thou bydest sette thy selfe agaynste hym, euen when the enemyes caryed awaye his hoste, and when the gseauntes came in at his portes, and caste lottes vpon Ierusalem, and thou thy selfe waste as one of them. Thou shalt nomore see the daye of thy brother, thou shalt nomore behold the tyme of his captiuitie: thou shalt nomore reioyce ouer the chyldren of Iuda, in the daye of theis destruccion, thou shalt trymphe nomore in the tyme of theyr trouble. Thou shalt nomore come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of theyr decay: thou shalt not see theyr miserye in the daye of theyr fall. Thou shalt sende oute no manne agaynst theyr hooste, in the daye of theyr aduersytie: neyther shalte thou stande waytyng any more at the corners of the stretes, to murther suche as are fled, or to take them prysoners, that remayne in the daye of theyr trouble. For the daye of the Lorde is harde by vpon all the heathen. * Lyke as thou haste done, so shalte thou be dealte wythall, yea, thou shalt be rewarded euen vpon thyne head. For lykewise as ye haue dronken vpon myne holy hyll, so shall all heathen drynke contynually: yea, drynke shal they & swalow vp, so that ye shall bee as though ye had neuer been. But vpon the mounte Syon shall the saluacion bee, and holynesse: these shall bee holy, and the house of Iacob shall possesse euen those, * that had themselues afore in possessyon. Moreouer, the house of Iacob shall bee a fyre, the house of Ioseph a flame, & the * house of Esau shall bee the strawe whiche they shal kyndle and consume, so that nothing shall bee lefte of the house of Esau: the Lorde hymselfe hathe sayde it. They of the southe shall haue the mounte of Esau in possessyon: and looke what lyeth vpon the grounde, that shall the Philystynes haue: the playne fieldes shall Ephraim and Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shall Beniamin haue: And this hooste shall bee the chyldren of Israels prysoners. Howe what so lyeth from Canaan vnto Zareptah, and in Sepharad, that shalbe vnder the subiection of Ierusalem, and the cyties of the south shall inherite it. Thus they that escape vpon the hyll of Syon, shall go vp to punish the mount of Esau, * and the kyngdome shalbe the Lordes.

The booke of the Prophete Jonas.

The fyrste Chapter.

Of the flight of Jonas when he was sēt to preach. A tempest ariseth and casteth hym in the sea for his disobedience.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto * Jonas the sone of Amithay, saying: Arise, and get the to Ninyue ỳ * greate citie: and preache vnto thē, how that their wickednes is come vppe before me. And Jonas made him readye to flye vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat him downe to Joppa: where he founde a ship ready for to goe vnto Tharsis. So he paid his fare, and went aboarde: that he might go with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of ỳ lord. But the lorde hurled a great wynde into the sea, and there was a mightye tempest in the sea, so that the shyp was in ieopardy of going in pieces. Then the maryners were afrayde, and cried euery manne vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the shyp they caste into the sea, to lyghten it of thē. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layed hym downe and slūbred. So the maister of the shippe came to hym, and saide vnto him: why slumbrest thou? Up cal vpon thy god: If God (happly) will thinke vpon vs, that wee perishe not. And they sayd one to another: come let vs caste lots, that we may know for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they caste lots, & the lot fell vpō Jonas. Thē said they vnto hym: tel vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence commest thou? (and whither goeste thou?) what countrey man art thou? and of what nacion? He aunswered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, whiche made bothe the sea and the dry lande. Then were the men exceadinglye afrayde, and sayde vnto hym: why dyde ste thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayde moreouer vnto hym: what shall wee doe vnto the, that the sea maye ceasse from troubling vs? (for the sea wrought, and was troublous:) he aunswered them: take me, and caste me into the sea, so shall it lette you bee in reste, for I wotte it is for my sake, that thys greate tempeste is come vpon you. Neuertheles the menne assayed with rowyng to bryng the shippe to lande: but it would not be, because the sea wrought so: and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cryed vnto the Lord, and said: * O Lorde let vs not perishe for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocente bloude vnto oure charge: for thou, O Lorde hast done, euen as thy pleasure was. So they tooke Jonas & cast him into the sea, and the sea lefte ragyng. And the men feared the Lord exceadinglye, doynge sacrifices and makinge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The. ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swalowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas

BVt the Lorde prepared a great fish to swalow vppe Jonas. * So was Jonas in ỳ belly of ỳ fish thre dayes and thre nightes.

And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde hys God, out of the fishes bellye, and sayde: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, & he hearde me: out of the belly of hell I cried, and thou heardest my voice. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the middeste of the sea, and ỳ floud compassed me about: yea, all * thy waues and roules of water went ouer me. I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syghte: But I wyll yet againe loke toward thy holye temple. The waters compassed me, euen to the verye soule: ỳ depe laye aboute me, and the wedes wer wrapt aboute mine heade. I wēt down to the botome of the hilles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But ỳ, O lord my god, hast brought vp my lyfe againe out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon ỳ lord: & my prayer came in vnto the, euē into thy holy temple. They ỳ hold of vaine vanities, wil forsake his mercy. But I will doe the sacrifice with ỳ voice of thankesgeuinge, & wil paye that, ỳ I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fishe, and it caste out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The. iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninyue. The repentaunce of the kyng of Ninyue.

THen came the worde of the lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * Vp and get thee to Ninyue that greate Citye, and preache vnto them the preaching which I bad thee. So Jonas arose and wente to Ninyue at the Lordes commaundemente. Ninyue was a greate cytye vnto God, namelye of three B dayes iourneye. And Jonas wente to and entred into the city, euen a dayes iourney: & cried, saying: Yet are yet foure dayes, *Esa.37.a & then shal Ninive be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninyue beleued God, & proclaimed fastyng, and arayed themselues in sackecloth, as wel the great as the smal of them. And the tidinges came vnto the king of Ninyue, whiche rose out of hys state, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sacke-cloth, and sat hym downe in asshes.

C And it was cryed and commaunded in Ninyue, by the auctoryte of the kyng and Mat.11.b his lordes, saying: * se that neither manne, Luke.17.c nor beast ore, or shepe, tast ought at all: & that they neyther fede nor drynke water, but put on sackecloth both man and beast: Jere.18.a and crye mightely vnto God: * Yea, se that euery man turne from hys euil waye, and from the wickednes that he hath in hand.
Who can tell? God maye turne and repēt, and cease from his fearce wrath, that wee perishe not. And when God sawe theyr workes how they turned from theyr wicked waies: * he repented on the euil, which *Esa.38.b he sayde he would do vnto them, and dyd it not.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

I Therefore Jonas was sore dis-contente & angry. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and saide: O Lorde, was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my countrey? therefore I hasted rather to flye vn-*Psa.86.a to Tharsis. * For I knowe wel ynough, Joel.2.c that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassion, long sufferyng, and of great kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shouldest 3.reg.19.a. take punishemente. And nowe * O Lord, take my lyfe from me (I beseche the) for I hadde rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lord: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the cytie, and sat downe on the B East side therof: & there made him a booth, & sat vnder it in the shadowe, til he might see what shoulde chaunce vnto the cytye.

And the Lorde God prepared a wylde vyne, whiche sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heade, to deliuer hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceading glad of the wild vine.
But vpon the nexte morowe agaynste the C sprynge of the daye, the Lorde ordeyned a worme, whiche smote the wylde vyne, so that it withered away. And whē the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente East winde: and the sunne bet ouer the heade of Jonas, that he fainted again, and wished vnto his soule that he might dye, and said:
It is better for me to dye, then to liue. And D God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for ỳ wilde vine? And he said: yea, very angry am I, euē vnto the death. And the lord sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wylde vine, whereon thou bestowedst no labour, nor madest it grow, whiche sprange vp in one nighte, and perysshed in another. And should I not then haue compassion vpon Ninyue that great cytye, wherein there are aboue an hundred and.xx. M. persones, ỳ knowe not their right hande from the left, besides muche cattelle.

phecie of Jonas.

The booke of the Prophete Micheas.

The fyrst Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of their idolatry.

THis is the worde of ỳ lorde, I that came vnto Micheas ỳ Morasthite in the dayes of * 4.reg.15.
Jothā, Ahas and * Ezechi- 2.par.27.

marke this wel, O earth, and al that therein is. Yea, the lorde God hymself bee witnes amonge you, euen the lorde from hys holy temple. For why? * beholde, the lorde ỳ Esay.26. shal goe out of his place, and come downe and tread vpō the hye thinges of the earth.
The mountaines shal consume vnder him, & the valleyes shall cleaue a sunder: lyke as ware consumeth at ỳ fyre, and as the waters run downwarde. And al this shalbe for the wickednesse of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Israell. But what is the 2.reg.21. wickednes of Jacob? Is not * Samaria? B Which are the hye places of Juda? Is 2.par.33. not Jerusalem? Therefore I shall make 3.reg.12.
Samaria an heape of stones in the fyelde, 4.reg.17.
to laye aboute the vyneyarde: her stones and.19. shal I cast into the valley, and discouer her foundacions. All her ymages shalbe broke downe, and all her garmentes shall bee brente in the fyre: yea, all her ydols wyll I destroye: for why? * they are gathered out 4.reg.23.

byde shal they be turned againe: wherefore I will mourne and make lamentacion, bare and naked wil I go. I must mourne like ỳ dragons, & take sorowe as the Estriches, C for their wounde is paste remedye. And why? It is come into Juda, & hathe touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem already. * Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceiue it. Thou at Bataphra, welter thy self in the dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shal bost no more for very sorowe: and why? her neighbour shal take from her what she hath. The rebellyous citie hopeth that it shall not bee so euil, but for all that the plage shal come from the lord euen into the port of Jerusalem. The greate noyse of the charettes shall feare them that dwel at * Lachis, which is an occasion of the sinne D of the daughter of Sion, for in thee came vp the wickednesses of Israel. Yea, she sent her courlers into the lande of Geth. The houses of lyes wyll disceyue the kinges of Israel. And as for the (O thou that dwellest at Mozalla) I shal bring a possessioner vpon the, & the plage of Israel shal reache vnto Odolla. Make thee bald, & shaue thee because of thy tender children. Make thee cleane bald as an Aegle, for they shal be caryed awaye captiue from thee.

The.ii. Chapter.

Threatnynges agaynst the synfull people.

A WO vnto them ỳ imagin to doe harme, & deuise vngraciousnesse vpō their beds, to perfourme it in ỳ clere day, for their power is agaynst god. When they couet to haue land, they take it by violence, they rob men of theyr houses. Thus thei oppresse a mā for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Therfore, thus saith ỳ lorde: Beholde, * agaynste this household haue I deuised a plage, wherout ye shall not plucke youre nechkes: ye shal no more go so proudly, for it wil be a perilous time. In ỳ day shall thys terme be vsed, & a mourninge shalbee made ouer you on this maner. We be vtterly desolate, ỳ portiō of my people is translated. B When wil he parte vnto vs the lande, ỳ he hath taken frō vs? Neuertheles, * ther shal be no mā to deuide the thy portion in ỳ congregacion of ỳ lord. Tush, hold your tong (say they:) It shal not fal vpō this people: we shal not come so to confusion, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is ỳ spirite of ỳ Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them ỳ liue ri ghte: but my people dothe the contrarye, therefore must I take parte agaynst them: C for they take awaye both cote & cloke from the simple. Ye haue turned youre selues to fighte, ỳ wemen of my people haue ye shut out from theyr good houses, & take away mine excellent gifftes frō their children. Vp, get you hence, for here shal ye haue no rest. Because of their idolatry, thei are corrupt, & shal miserably perish. If I wer a fleshly felow, & a preacher of lies, & told them that they might sit bybbing and bolling, and be dronken, O ỳ were a prophet for this people. D But I wil gather the i dede, O Jacob, & driue ỳ remnaunt of Israel altogether. I shal cary them one with another, as a flocke in ỳ fold, & as ỳ cattel in their stalles, ỳ they maye bee disquieted of other men. Whoso breaketh the gap, he shall goe before. They shal breake vp the porte, and goe in and out at it. The kynge shall goe before them, and the lord shalbe vpon the head of them.

The.iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the tyranny of princes, and false prophetes.

AND I said: heare, O ye heades I of ỳ house of Jacob, & ye leaders of ỳ house of Israel: * Shoulde not ye know, what wer lawfull and right? But ye hate the good & loue ỳ euil: ye plucke of mennes skins, and the flesh frō their bones: ye eate the flesche of my people, and flaye of theyr skin: ye breake theyr bones, ye chop them in pieces as it wer into a caldron, and as flesh into a pot. Now the time shal come, * that when they cal vnto the lorde he shal not heare them, but hide his face from thē, because ỳ throughe theyr B owne imaginations, they haue delt so wickedly. And as concerning the prophetes ỳ disceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them. * Whē they haue any thing to bite vpon, then they preach that al shall be wel: but if a man put not some thing into their mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst him. * Therfore youre vision shalbe turned to night, and your prophecynge to C darkenesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, and the daye shalbe darke vnto them. Then shal the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea, they shal be fayne al ỳ packe of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not goddes woorde. * As for me, I am full of strength, and of the spirite of the Lord, ful of Judgemente and boldnes: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israell their sin. the Assirian, when he commeth within our

amōg the multitude of people, as the dew of the Lord, & as the drops vpon ꝑ grasse, C that tarieth for no man, and waiteth of no Gen.. body. * yea, the residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles, and the multitude of people, as the lyon among the beastes of ꝑ wood, & as ꝑ lions whelpe amōg a flocke of shepe: whiche (whē he goeth throughe) treadeth down, teareth i pieces, & ther is no man that can helpe. Thyne hande shalbe lift vp vpon thyne enemies, and all thyne aduersaries shal perysche. The tyme shall come also, sayeth the Lorde, that I will take thy horses from thee, and destroye thy charets. I will breake downe the cities of thy lande, and ouerthrow all thy strong holdes. * All witchecraftes will I rote out of thine hand, there shal no moe soothsayinges be within the. * Thyne ydols and thine ymages will I destroye out of thee: so that thou shalt no more bow thy selfe vnto the woorkes of thyne own handes. Thy groues will I pluck vp by the rootes, and breake downe the cities. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the Heathen that will not heare.

The. vi. Chapter.

An exhortacion to heare the iudgement agaynste Israel beeyng vnkynde. What maner of sacrifices doe please God.

HEarken now what the Lord sayth: * Up reproue the mountaynes, and lette the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare the punyshement of the Lorde, ye mountaynes, and ye mighty foũdacions of the earth: for the lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel. O my people, what haue I doone vnto thee? or wherin haue I hurt thee? geue me answer. * Because I brought thee from the land of Egipte, and deliuered thee out of the house of bondage. * Because I made Moses, Aaron, and Miriam to leade thee? Remembre (O my people) what Balach the king of Moab had imagined against thee, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue hym, from Sethim vnto Galgal, that ye may know the louyng kyndnesses of the Lorde. What acceptable thing shal I offer vnto the Lorde? shal I bow my knee to the hye God? Shal I come before hym with brent offeringes, and with calues of a yere olde? Hath the lord a pleasure in many thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I geue my first borne for myne offences, and the fruite of my body for the synne of my soule? I wil shewe thee, O manne, what is good, and what the lord requireth of thee: namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in louyng kyndnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy god. * The lordes voyce cryeth vnto the citie, and the man that shall be saued cõsidereth thy name (o lorde). Heare what is your rod, and heare him that warneth you. * Should I not be displeased for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is minished? Or should I iustify the false balances, and the bag of deceytfull weightes among those that be ful of riches vnrighteously gotten: where the citizens deale with falsehead, speke lyes, and haue dysceatful tonges in theyr mouthes? Therfore I will take in hande to punishe thee, and to make thee desolate, because of thy sinnes. * Thou shalt eate, and not haue inough: yea, thou shalte bryng thy selfe downe. Thou shalt fire, but not escape: and those that thou wouldest saue, wil I deliuer to the * sworde. Thou shalte sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olyues, but oyle shalte thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe withal: thou shalt trede out swete must, but shalt drink no wine. ye kepe the ordinances of * Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye follow their pleasures, therfore wil I make the waste, and cause thy inhabiters to be abhorred, O my people: and thus shalt thou beare thyne owne shame.

The. vii. Chapter.

A complaynt of the litle nombre of the righteous. Against the truely ought we not to holde with our greatest frendes.

WOe is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleanyng in the harueste. There are no moe grapes to eat, yet would I fayne (with al my hearte) haue of the best fruite. * There is not a godly man vpon earthe, there is not one righteous amõg men. They labor al to shede bloude, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they say they doe well, when they doe euyl. As the prince will, so sayeth the Iudge, that he maye doe hym a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what hys hearte desyreth: and the hearers alow hym. The best of them is but as a thistle, and the most righteous of them, is but as a bryer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers cõmeth, that thou shalt be visited, then shall they be wasted away. * Let no man beleue his frend, nor put his cõfidence in a brother. Kepe the porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, * for the sõne shall put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shal ryse against her mother, the daughter in law against her mother in law: and a mans foes shalbe euen they of his owne household. Neuertheles I will loke vp vnto the lorde, I wil patiently abide God my sa-uiour: my God shall heare me: * O thou Psal. 17. a enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne: and though I syt in darknes, yet the Lord is my light.

I will beare the punishement of the lorde (for why, I haue offended hym) til he sit

The booke of the Prophete Nahum.

The first Chapter.

Of the destruccion of Niniue and of the deliuerance of Israel.

THis is the heauy burthen of Niniue, which Nahũ of Elchos did
wryte as he saw it.
* The lord is a gelous god, & a taker of vengeance is the lorde, & wrothful. * The lord
taketh vengeaunce of hys enemies, & re-serueth displeasure for his aduersaries.
* The Lord suffereth long, he is of great power, and so innocent, ỳ he leaueth no man faultles before him. The Lord goeth furth in tempest & stormy wether, the cloudes are ỳ dust of his feete. When he reproueth the sea, he dryeth it vp, & turneth al ỳ floudes to drye lande: Basan is desolate, Charmel & the plesure of Liba-nus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, ỳ hilles consume. At the sight of him, ỳ erth quaketh: yea ỳ whole world, & al that dwel therin. * Who may endure before hys wrath? Or who is able to abide his grim displesure? His anger taketh on like fyre: & the hard rockes are clouen in sunder before him. Ful gracious is ỳ lord, and a strong holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth them ỳ put their trust in him: when ỳ floude renneth ouer, & destroyeth the place, & when the C darknes foloweth stil vpon his enemies.
What do ye imagin thẽ against ỳ lord on thys maner? (Tushe, when he hath once made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) For lyke as ỳ thornes ỳ sticke together, & as the drye straw: so shal the dronkerdes be consumed together, euen when they be ful. There come out of the,
such as imagine mischiefe: & geue vngra-cious counsel against the lord. Therfore thus saieth the lord: let them be as well prepared, yea, & as many as they can, yet shal they be hewen down, & passe awaye.
And as for thee, I wil vexe thee, but not D vtterly destroye thee. And now we will I breake hys rodde from thy backe, and burst thy bondes in sundre. But the lord hath geuen a commaũdement concerning ther,

thee, that there shal come no more seede of thy name. * The carued and casten ymages will I roote out of the house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for thee, and thou shalt be confounded.

The.ii. Chapter.

He describeth the victory of the Caldees against the Ninuites.

BEhold, * vpon the mountaynes come the fete of hym, that bryngeth good tidinges, & preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holye dayes, performme thy promises: for Belial shal come no more in thee, he is vtterly rooted out. The scatterer shal come vp agaynste thee, and lay siege to the castel. Loke thou wel to the stretes, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy selfe with al thy might: for the lorde shal restore agayne the glorye of Iacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe, and marred the vyne branches. The shylde of his gyauntes glistreth, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His charrettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde: and hys speare shaftes are soked in venome. B The charets rolle vpon the stretes, and welter in the hye wayes. They are to looke vpon lyke cressets of fyre, and goe swiftly as the lightening. When he doeth but warne hys gyantes, they fal in theyr aray, & hastely they clime vp the walles: yea, the engins of the warre are prepared already. The water portes shalbe opened, and the kinges palace shal fal. The queme herselfe shalbe led away captiue, and her gentle womē shal mourne as the doues, and grone within theyr heartes.

* Ninive is like a poole ful of water, but then shall they bee fayne to flee. Stande, stande, (shal they crye) and there shal not one turne backe. Iwaye with the syluer, away with the golde, for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of all maner of costely ornamentes. Thus muste she be spoyled, emptied, and cleane strypped out: that theyr hearties may be melted awaye, theyr knees tremble, all C theyr loynes bee weake, and theyr faces blacke as a pot. Where is now the dwelling of the Lyons, and the pasture of the Lyons whelpes? where the Lyon and the Lyoneesse went with ỹ whelpes, and no man frayde them away? But the Lyon spoyled ynough for hys young ones, and deuoured for hys Lyoneesse: he filled his dennes with his pray, and his dwelling place with that he had rauished. Behold, I wil vpon thee, sayth the lord of hoostes, and wil sette fyre vpon thy charets that they shal smoke withal, and the sweorde shal deuoure the young Lyons. I wil make an ende of thy spoylyng from out of the erth, and the voyce of thy messengers shal no more be heard.

Of the fall of Ninive.

There the horsemen get vp with naked sweordes, and glystryng speares: there lyeth a multitude slayne, & a great heape of dead bodies: there is no ende of dead corses: yea, men fall vpon theyr bodies. And that for the greate and manyfolde whoredome, of the fayre and beautyfull harlot, which is a mastres of witchcraft: yea, and selleth the people thorowe her whoredom, and the nacions thorow her B witchcraft. * Behold, I will vpon thee (sayeth the lord of hoostes) and will pul thy clothes ouer thy head, ỹ I may shew thy nakednesse among the Heathen, and thy shame among the kingdomes. I wil cast durte vpon thee, to make thee be abhorred, and a gasyng stocke: yea, all they that looke vpon thee, shal starte backe, & say: Ninive is destroyed. Who wil haue pitie vpon thee? where shal I seeke one to comforte thee? Art thou better then the great citie of * Alexandria that lay in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it? whiche was strongly fenced and walled with the sea? Euen so shalt thou also be dronken, and hyde thy selfe, & seke some helpe againste C thyne enemy. Therfore, as truely as I liue (sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell) Moab shalbe as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dyre thorne hedges, salt pittes, and a perpetual wildernesse: The residue of my folke shall spoyle them, the remnaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. * This shal happen vnto them for theyr pryde, because they haue dealt so shamefully with the Lord of hoostes people, and magnyfyed themselues aboue them. The Lord shalbe grimme vpon them, * and destroy all the goddes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heathen shall worshyp him, euery manne in hys place.

Ye Mozians also shal perysshe with my swerde: yea, he shal stretche out his hande ouer the north, and destroy Assur. * Is for Ninive, he shall make it desolate, dyre and waste. Her Prophetes are lyghte persones, and vnfaythful men: her priestes vnhalowe the Sanctuary, and doo wrong vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lord that doeth no vnright, was among them euery morenyng, shewing them hys law clearely, and ceassed not. But the vngodly will not learne to bee ashamed. Therfore will I roote out thys people, and destroye theyr towers: yea, and make theyr streates so voyde that no manne shall goe therein. Theyr cities shal bee broken downe, so that no bodye shal bee lefte nor dwell there any more

I said vnto the: O feare me, ỹ bee content to be reformed. That their dwelling should not be destroyed, ỹ ỹ there should happe vnto them none of these thinges, wherwith I shal visite them. But neuertheles, they stand vp early, to folow the fylthynes of their owne ymaginacyons.

Therfore

Therfore ye shal wayte vpon me (saith ỹ lord) tyll ỹ time ỹ I stand vp: for I am determined to gather the people, and to bring the kingdomes together, ỹ I may powre out mine ãger, yea all my wrathful displeasure vpon them. For all the world shalbe consumed with the fyre of my ielousy. And thẽ will I clẽse ỹ lippes of ỹ people, ỹ they may euerychone call vpon ỹ name of ỹ lord, & serue him with one shoulder. Such as I haue subdued, & my children also whome I haue scattered abrode, shal bring me presẽtes beyond ỹ waters of Ethiopia. In that time shalt thou no more be cõfoũded, because of al thy imaginations, wher thorow ỹ hadst offended me: for I will take away ỹ proude boasters of thyne honor from the, so ỹ thou shalt no more triumph, because of my holy hill. In thee also will I leaue a smal poore simple people, which shal trust in ỹ name of ỹ Lord. The remnant of Israel shal do no wickednes, nor speake lies, neither shal there any disceatful tong be found in their mouthes. For they shalbe fed, & take their rest, & no man shal make thẽ afrayde. Geue thankes, O daughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce & be glad from thy whole heart, O daughter Ierusalem, for ỹ lord hath takẽ away thy punishment, & turned backe thine enemies. The king of Israel, euen ỹ lord himself is with the: so that thou needest no more to feare any misfortune. In that tyme it shal be sayde to Ierusalem, feare not: & to Sion, let not thyne handes be slacke, for ỹ lord thy god is with the. It is he that hath power to saue: he hath a special pleasure in the, & a marueilous loue toward the: yea, he reioyseth ouer the with gladnes. Such as haue bene in bruines, will I gather together, and take out of thy congregacions: for ỹ shame & reproue that hath bene layd vpon thee, it shalbe farre from thee. And loe, in that time will I destroy al those that vexe the. I will helpe ỹ lame, and gather vp the castaway: yea, I will get them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue bene put to shame. At the same tyme will I bring you in, and at the same tyme will I gather you. I will get you a name and a good report among all people of the earth, when I turne backe your captiuitie before your eyes, sayeth the Lord.

The booke of the Prophete Aggeus.

The first Chapter.

The time of the prophecy of Aggeus. An exhortation to builde the temple againe.

In the seconde yere of kyng Darius, in the .vi. moneth, the first day of the moneth, came the woord of the lord (by the Prophet Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda, and to Jesua ỹ sonne of Josedech the hye priest, saying: Thus speaketh the Lorde of hostes, and sayth. This people doeth say: The tyme is not yet come to builde vp the lordes house. Then spake ỹ lord by ỹ prophet Aggeus, and sayd. Ye your selues can fynd tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall thys house lye waste? Considre now your own wayes in your hearte (sayeth the lorde of hostes.) Ye sowe much, but ye bring little in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke your selues, but ye be not warme: and he that earneth anye wages, putteth it in a broken purse. Thus sayeth the lorde of hostes. Considre your owne wayes in your heartes, get you vp to ỹ mountayn, fetche wood, & builde vp the house, ỹ it may bee acceptable vnto me, and that I may shew myne honour, sayeth the lord. Ye looked for much, and loe, it is come to little: and thoughe ye bring it home, yet doe I blow it away. And why so, sayeth the Lord of hostes? Euen because that my house lyeth so waste, & yet runne euery manne vnto hys owne house. Wherfore the heauen is forbydden to geue you any dewe, and the earth is forbidden to geue you increse. I haue called for a drouth both vpon the land and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thing that the grounde bringeth furth, vpon men & vpon cattel, yea, & vpon al handy labour. Now whẽ Zorobabel ỹ sonne of Salathiel, & Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye priest with the remnaunte of the people, hearde the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, and the woordes of the prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde theyr God had sent hym) the people dyd feare the Lorde. Then

Aggeus

Aggeus the Lordes aungell sayed in the lordes message vnto ꝑ people: I am with you saith the lord. * So the lord waked vp the spirit of zorobabel the prince of Juda, and the spirite of Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye priest, and the spirite of ꝑ remnaunt of al the people: ꝑ they came & labored in ꝑ house of ꝑ lord of hostes their god.

The.ii. Chapter.

He sheweth that the goodlynes of the seconde temple shall exceade the fyrste, because of the comming of Christe.

In the .xxiiii. day of the syxte moneth, in the.ii. yeare of kyng Darius, the .xxi. day of the .vii. moneth, came the woorde of the lord by ꝑ prophet Aggeus, saying: speake to zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, prince of Juda, & to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye priest, and to the residue of the people, and saye: * Who is left amonge you, ꝑ sawe this house in her firste bewtye? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not i your eyes, euen as though it were nothing? Neuertheles, bee of good chere, O zorobabell (sayeth the lord) * be of good coumfort, O Jesua thou sonne of Josedech, the hye priest: take good heartes vnto you also, al ye people of the lande, sayeth the lorde of hoostes, and do according to the word (* for I am with you, sayeth the lorde of hoostes) lyke as I agreed with you, when ye came oute of the land of Egipt: and my spirit shalbee amonge you, feare ye not. For thus sayeth the lorde of hostes: * Yet once more wil I shake heauen and earth, the sea, and the dry lande; yea, & I wil moue al heathen, and the comfort of al heathen shal come, and so wil I fyl this house with honor, sayth the lord of hoostes. * The siluer is mine, & the gold is mine, saith the lord of hostes. Thus the glory of the last house shalbee greater then the fyrst, saieth the lorde of hoostes: and in this place wil I gene peace, sayth the lord of hostes. The .xxiiii. day of the.ix. moneth, in the seconde yeare of king Darius, came the word of ꝑ lord vnto the prophet Aggeus, saying: Thus saith the lord god of hostes. Aske the priestes concernyng the lawe, and saye: * yf one beare holy flesshe in his coate lap, and with his lap do touche the breade, potage, wine, oyle, or any other meat, shal he be holy also? The priestes answered and sayde: No. Then sayde Aggeus: Nowe yf one beyng defiled with a dead carcase touch any of these: shall it also be vncleane? The priestes gaue answere, and sayde: * yea, it shall be vncleane. Then Aggeus answered and said: euē so is this people and this nacion before me, saith the lord: and so are all the workes of their handes, yea, and all ꝑ they offer, is vncleane. And now (I praye you) consider frō this day forth, and howe it hathe gone wyth you afore or euer there was layde one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: that when ye came to a corne heape of .xx. bushelles, there were scarce ten: * and ꝑ when ye came to ꝑ wine * Agg. 1.a presse for to power out .l. pottes of wine, there wer scarce .xx. For I smote you with heate, blasting and hayle stones, in all the labours of your hādes: yet was ther none of you, that would turne vnto me, saith the lorde. Consider then from this daye forth and afore: namely, from the .xxiiii. daye of the .ix. moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it wel, * is not ꝑ sede yet in ꝑ barne? * Zach. 8.b haue not the vines, the figtrees, the pomgranates, and oliue trees ben yet vnfruitful? but from this daye forth, I shal make them to prosper. Moreouer the .xxiiii. daye of the moneth came the word of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, saying: Speake to zorobabell the prince of Juda, and saye: I wil shake both heauen and yearth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kingdoms, yea, and destroy the mighty kingdom of ꝑ heathen: I wil ouerthrow ꝑ charettes, & those that sit vpon them, so that bothe horse and man shal fal down, euery man through his neighbors sworde: and as for thee, O zorobabel (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiell my seruaunte: I wil take the (sayeth the lord) at the same time, and make the as a seale, for I haue chosen thee, sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes.

The

The booke of the Prophete zacharye.

The fyrste Chapter.

He moueth the people to returne to the Lorde, and to eschew the wickednes of their fathers. He prophesyeth Christe and hys Apostles.

A IN the eyght moneth of the seconde yeare of kyng Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto *zachary the sone of Barachias, the sonne of Iddo, ỹ Prophete, saying: The lord hath bene sore displeased at youre forefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne ye vnto me (saith the lord of hooستes) and I wyl turne me vnto you, sayth the lorde of hostes. * Bee ye not lyke youre forefathers, vnto whome the Prophetes cried aforetime saying: Thus saith the lord god of hostes: * Turne you from your euil wayes, and from your wicked ymaginacyons. ‡But they would not heare nor regarde me, sayeth the lorde. What is nowe become of your forefathers, and the prophetes? are they yet styl aliue? But did not my wordes and statutes (which I cõmaunded by my seruauntes ỹ prophetes) touche youre forefathers? Upon this they gaue answere, and sayde: lyke as the lord of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, according to our owne wayes and imaginacions, euen so hath he delt with vs. Upon ỹ .xxiiii day of the .xi. moneth, which is the moneth Sebat, in ỹ seconde yere of Darius, came the woorde of the lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sõne of Iddo, the prophete, saying: I sawe by night, and lo, there sat one vpon a red horse, and stoode styll among the myrte trees that were beneth vpon the grounde, and behynde hym were there red, speckled, and white horses. Then sayd I: O my lorde, what are these?

C And the angell that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe thee what these bee. And the man that stode amonge the myrte trees answered and sayde: These are they whome the lorde hath sente to go through the world. And they answered the angel of the lord, that stode among the myrte trees, and said: We haue gone through ỹ world: and beholde, all the worlde dwell at ease, and are careles.

Then the lordes aungell gaue answere, and sayde: O lorde of hooستes, howe longe wylt thou bee vnmercifull to Jerusalem, and to the cities of Juda? * with whome thou hast bene displeased nowe these three score and ten yeares. So the Lorde gaue a loning and a coumfortable answer vnto the angell that talked with me. And the angel ỹ comoned with me, sayd vnto me: Crye thou, and speake: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. I am exceding gelous ouer Jerusalem and Sion, and sore displeased at the careles heathen: for wher as I was but a litle angry, they did their beste ỹ I might destroye them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: * I wyll turne me againe in mercy toward Jerusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, sayth the lorde of hooستes: yea and the plummet shall be layde abrode in Jerusalem, saieth the Lord of hooستes.

D Crye also, and speake, thus saith the Lorde of hostes: My cities shalbe in good prosperitie agayne: the lorde shall yet comforte Syon, and chose Jerusalem. The lift I vp mine eyes and sawe, and beholde .iiii. hornes. And I sayd vnto ỹ angel that talked with me: what be these? he aunswered me. * These are the hornes whiche haue scattered Juda, Israell, and Jerusalem abrode. And the lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayde I: what will these do?

He aunswered and sayde. Those are the hornes whiche haue so strowed Juda abrode, that no man durst lift vp his head: But these are come to fraye them awaye, & to cast out the hornes of the gentiles: which lyft vp their horne ouer the land of Juda, to scater it abrode.

The .ii. Chapter.

The renewyng of Jerusalem and Juda.

A LYft vp mine eyes agayne, and I loked: and behold, * a man with a measure line in his hand. Then sayd I: whither goest thou? he said vnto me: To measure Jerusalem, that I maye see howe longe and howe brode it is. And beholde, the angel that talked with me, wente his waye forth. Then wente there out another aungel to mete hym, and sayde vnto hym: Runne, speake to thys young man, and saye: Jerusalem shalbe inhabited without anye wall, for the verye multitude of people and cattell that shalbe therein: * Yea, I my selfe (sayeth the lorde) will bee vnto her a wall of fyre rounde about, and will be honoured in her. O gette you forth, O flie from the land of ỹ north, sayeth the lorde, ye * whome I haue scattered into the foure wyndes vnder heauen, sayth the Lord. Saue thy selfe, O Syon, thou thou that dwelleste wyth the daughter of Babilon, for thus saith the lord of hostes. After ỳ glorious power hathe he sente me out to ỳ heathen, which spoiled you, * for whoso toucheth you, shal touche ỳ apple of his own eye. Behold, I will lift vp my hãd ouer them: so that they shal be spoyled of those, which afore serued them: and ye shal know wr ỳ the lorde of hostes hath sent me.

C Be glad, & reioyce, O daughter of Sion: for lo, * I am come to dwell in the middest of the, saith the lorde: at the same time there shal many heathen cleaue to the lord, & shal bee my people. This wyll I dwell in the middest of thee, and thou shalt know that D ỳ lord of hostes hath sent me vnto the. The Lorde shal haue Iuda in possession for his parte in the holye grounde, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. * Let all flesche bee still before the lorde, for he is rysen oute of hys holy place.

The .iii. Chapter.

Of the lawes & tyme estate of Christe vnder the figure of Iesua the priest. A prophecye of Christe.

I AND he shewed me Iesua the hie priest standyng before the angell of the lorde: and Satan stode at hys right hand to resist him. And ỳ lord said vnto Satan: The lord reproue the (thou Satan) yea, the lorde that hathe chosen Ierusalem, reproue thee. Is not this a brande taken out of the fyre? Nowe B Iesua was clothed in vncleane raymente, and stode before the angel, which answered and sayde vnto those that stode before him: take away ỳ foule clothes from hym. And vnto hym he sayde: Behold, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyll decke the with chaunge of raymente. He sayde moreouer, sette a fayre myter vpon his heade. So they sette a fayre myter vpõ his head, and put on clothes vpõ him, and the angel of the lorde stode there. Then the C aungell of the lorde testifyed vnto Iesua, and spake: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll geue the place among these that stand here. Heare (O Iesua) thou hye preyste, thou & thy frendes that dwel before thee, for they D are wonderous people. Behold, I wyll bryng forth * the braunche of my seruaũt: for loe, the stone that I haue layed before Iesua: vpon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Behold I wyll hewe hym out (sayeth the lorde of hostes) and take awaye the synne of the lande in one daye. Then shall euerye man call for hys neighboure vnder the vine & vnder the figtree, saith the lord of hostes.

The .iiii. Chapter.

The vision of the golden candlestyche and the exposition therof.

AND the angell that talked with me, came againe and waked me vp, as a man that is rayse out of his slepe, and sayde vnto me: what seest thou? And I said: I haue loked, and beholde a candlestiche all of golde with a boule vpon it, and his seuẽ lampes therin: and vpon euery lampe seuen stalkes. And * two olyue trees therby, one vpon the ryght side of the boule, & the other vpõ the lefte syde. So I aunswered, and spake to the angell that talked with me, sayinge: O my Lord, what are these? the angel that talked with me, answered and sayde vnto B me: knowest thou not what these be? and I sayd: No my lord. He answered and said vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde vnto Zorobabel, saying: * Nether through an hoste of men, nor through strength, but through my spirit, saith the lord of hostes. What art thou thou greate mountain before Zorobabell? thou must be made euen. And he shall bryng vp the fyrst * stone, so ỳ C men shall crye vnto him: good lucke, good lucke. Moreouer, the woorde of the lorde came vnto me, saying. * The handes of Zorobabell haue layde the foundacion of this house: his handes shall also finishe it, * that ye maye knowe howe that the lorde of hostes hath sente me vnto you. For he that hathe bene despysed a lytle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weyghte in Zorobabels hande.

The seuen eyes are the lordes whiche goe through the whole worlde. Then aunswered I, and saide vnto hym: what are these D two olyue trees vpõ the right and left syde of the candlestycke? I spake moreouer, and saide vnto hym: what bee these two olyue braunches, (whiche through the two golden pipes) empty themselues into the golde? He answered me, and sayde: knowest thou not what these be? And I said: no my lord. Then sayde he: * These are the two olyue braunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The .v. Chapter

The vysyon of the flyenge booke, sygnifyenge the curse of theues, and suche as abuse the name of God: by the vysyon of the measure is sygnifyed ỳ bringyng of Iuda to Babylon.

A SO I turned me, lifting vppe mine eyes, and looked: and beholde, a flyynge boke. And he said vnto me: what seeste thou? I answered: I see a flying boke of .xx. cubites longe, and .x. cubites brode. Thē saide he vnto me: This is ꝑ curse ꝑ goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for al theues shalbe iudged after this boke, B & all swearers shalbe iudged according to the same: & I wil bring it forth (saith ꝑ lord of hostes,) to that it shal come to ꝑ house of the theefe, and to the house of him that falsly sweareth by my name: & shal remain in his house and consume it, with the timber and stones thereof. Thē the Angel that talked with me went forth, and said vnto me: lyft vp thine eyes, and se what is this that goeth forth. And I sayd: what is it? He answerd: this is a measure goynge oute. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwel vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon: And beholde, there was lyft vp a talente of leade: and loe, a woman sate in the middest of the measure. And he said: this is vngodlines. So he cast her into the middest of ꝑ measure, and threw the lompe of leade into the mouth of the measure. Then lift I vp myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, there came out two women, and the winde was in theyr wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a Storke) and they lift vp the measure betwyxt the earth and the heauē. Then spake I to the angel that talked with me: whither wyll these beare the measure? *gen.10.b And he said vnto me: into the land of *Synear to buylde them an house, whiche whē it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The. vi. Chapter.

Ye the four charettes he betokeneth the prosperitye of foure kingdomes.

A MOreouer, I turned me liftynge vp mine eyes, and loked: and beheld, there came four charettes out from betwixte two hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse. In the fyrste charet were *redd horses, in the seconde charet were blacke horses, in the thyrde charet were white horses, in the fourth charet were horses of diuers colours, and strong. Thē spake I, and sayde vnto the Angel that talked with me: O lord, what are these? The B Angel answered, and sayde vnto me: *zach.1.b Apo.6.a * These are the .iiii. windes of the heauen, Jere.4.b whiche bee come forth to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with the blacke horse wente into the lande of the north, and the white followed them: & the spekled horses went forth toward ꝑ south. These horses were very strong, & went out, & sought to go and take their iourney ouer ꝑ whole earth. And he saide: get you hence and goe throughe the worlde. So they wente throughout the world. Then cryed he vpon me, & spake vnto me, sayinge: beholde, these C that goe toward the north, shall stylle my wrath in the north country. And ꝑ worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Take of the prisoners that are come from Babilō: namelye, Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and goe into the house of Josiah, the sonne of Sophony. Then take gold & siluer, and make crownes thereof, and sette them vpon the heade of Jesua, the sonne of Josedech, the hie priest, and speake vnto hym. Thus sayeth ꝑ lord of hostes: Beholde, the man whose name is *the braunche: and he that shall spryng vp *zach.3.b after hym, *shall buylde vp the temple of ꝑ *zach.6.a Lorde, yea, euen he shal buylde vp the temple of the Lorde. *He shal beare the praise, *zach.6.a he shall sit vpon the Lordes trone, & haue D the dominion. * A priest shall he be also vpon his trone, and a peaceable counsel shal *zach.6.b be betwixte them bothe. And the crownes shalbe in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaiah, and Hen, the sonne of Sophony, and suche as be far of, shall come and buyld the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe how that the lorde of hostes hath sente me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the lorde youre God.

The. vii. Chapter.

The estimacyon of fastyng without mercie. the despysyng of charitye, and the obstinacy of the people.

IT happened also in ꝑ fourth yere of kyng Darius, that ꝑ A worde of the lord came vnto Zacharie in the fourth daye of the ninth moneth, whiche is called, Cassue: what time as Saracar and Rogomelech & the men ꝑ were wyth them, sente vnto Bethell for to praye before the lorde, and that they shoulde saye vnto the priestes, which were in the house of the lord of hooستes, and to the prophetes: Should I wepe in the *fyfth moneth, and abstaine *4.reg.25 as I haue done now certain yeares? And the word of the lord of hooſtes came vnto me, ſaying: thus ſaith the Lord of hooſtes: The faſte of the fourth moneth, the faſte of the fyfth, the faſt of the ſeuenthe, and the faſt of the tenth, ſhall be ioye and gladneſſe, and proſperous hye feaſtes vnto the houſe of Juda: onely loue the truth and peace.

Thus ſayeth the lorde of hooſtes: In that tyme ſhall ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of hys garmente, and ſay: we wil go with you, for we haue heard that God is amonge you.

The.ix. Chapter.

The conuerſion of the Gentiles. The comming of Chriſt ſyttyng on an aſſe.

THe worde of the lorde ſhal be receiued at Adrach, and Damaſcus ſhall bee hys offeryng: for the eyes of al menne & of the trybes of Iſrael, ſhal loke vp vnto the lorde. The borders of Hemath ſhall be harde there by: Tirus alſo and Sydon, for Joel.3.a they are very wyſe.* Tyrus ſhall make her ſelfe ſtronge, heape vp ſyluer as the ſande, & golde as the claye of the ſtreates. Beholde, the lorde ſhall take her in, and haue her in *Ezec.26.c poſſeſſiō: he ſhal ſmyte down her power into the ſea, & ſhe ſhalbe conſumed with fyre: Jere.47.a Thys ſhall Aſcalon ſee, and be afrayed. Amos.1.b Gaza ſhalbe very ſory, ſo ſhal Accaron alſo, becauſe her hope is come to confuſion. For the kyng of Gaza ſhall perysche: and at Aſcalon ſhall no man dwel. Straungers ſhal dwell at Aſdod, and as for the pryde of the Jere.25.d Philiſtynes, I ſhall roote it oute. *Theyr 1.Cor.5.a and.10.c bloud wil I take away from theyr mouth, & their abhommnacios fro among their teethe. Thus they ſhall bee lefte for oure God: yea, they ſhalbee as a prynce in Juda, and Accaron lyke as a Jebuſyte. And ſo wyll I compaſſe my houſe rounde aboute wyth my menne of warre, goyng to and fro: that no oppreſſoure come vpon them any more, For that haue I ſene nowe with myne eyes. *Eſa.62.c *Reioyſe thou greately, O daughter Syō, Zach.9.a be glad O daughter Jeruſalē. For lo, thy Joha.12.b kyng commeth vnto thee, euen þ tyghtous & Sauiour: lowly and ſimple is he, he rideth vpon an aſſe and vpon the foale of an aſſe.

C I wil rote out the charetes from Ephraim, and the horſe from Jeruſalem, the battaile bowes ſhalbe deſtroyed. He ſhall gyue the pſa.72.b doctrine of peace vnto the Heathen, and his dominion ſhalbe from the one ſea to the other, and from the floudes to the endes of the worlde. Thou alſo thorow the bloud of Eſai.42.a thy couenaunt, ſhalt let * thy priſoners out Apoc.9.a 1.Rom.8.c of the pitte wherein is no water. Tourne you nowe to the ſtronge holde ye that be in priſon and long ſore to be deliuered. And this daye I bryng thee worde, that I will rewarde thee double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy ſonnes O Syō, will I rayſe vp agaynſte the Grekes, and make the as a grauntes ſwerde: the Lorde God ſhalbe ſene aboue the, and his dartes ſhall go forth as the lyghtnynge. The lord God ſhall blowe the trompette, and ſhall come forthe as a ſtorme out of the ſouth.

The Lorde of hooſtes ſhall defend them, D they ſhall cōſume and deuoure, and ſubdue them with* ſlyng ſtones. They ſhall drynke Zach.9.a and rage as it were thorowe wyne. They 1.Esd.4.f ſhalbe fylled lyke þ baſens, & as þ hornes of the aulter. The Lorde their God ſhall deliuer them in the day, as the flocke of his people. For as precious ſtones of a diademe they ſhall be ſet vp ouer his lande. O howe proſperous and goodly a thyng ſhall that be? The corne ſhall make the yong mē cherfull, and the newe wyne the maydens.

The.x. Chapter.

The people is moued to require the doctrine of truthe of the Lord: The lord promiſeth to vyſit and comforte the houſe of Iſrael.

PRay the Lorde then betymes to I gyue you þ latter rayne: *ſo ſhal Deu.11 the lord make bryghte cloudes, and gyue you rayne ynough for al the encreaſe of the fielde. For vaine is the anſwere of ydols. The ſothſayers ſee lyes, and tell but vayne dreames, the cōfort that they gyue is nothynge worth. Therfore go they aſtraye lyke a flocke of ſhepe, and are troubled, becauſe they haue no ſhepeherde. Ezec.34 My wrathfull diſpleaſure is moued at the B ſhepherdes, and I will vyſyte the goates. For the lorde of hooſtes will graciouſly viſite his flocke, the houſe of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horſe in þ battaile. * Out of Juda ſhall come the helmet & the *gen.49 naple, the battaylbowe, and all the princes Eſai.28 together. They ſhalbe as the giaūtes, which in the battaile treade downe the mire vpon the ſtretes. They ſhall fyghte, for the lorde ſhal be with the, ſo that the horſemen ſhalbe confounded. I will comfort the houſe of C Juda, and preſerue the houſe of Joſeph. I will turne them alſo, for I pute them, and they ſhalbe like as they were, when I had not caſt them of. For I the Lorde am their God, and will heare them. Ephraim ſhalbe as a giaunt, and their heart ſhall be cheareful as thorowe wyne: yea, theyr children ſhall ſe it, and be glad: and their herte ſhall reioyſe in the Lorde. I will blowe for them and gather them together: for I wil redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe them among the people, that they maye thynke vpon me in farre countreys: they shal lyue with theyr children, and turne agayne. I wyl bringe the againe also from the lande of Egipt, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyll cary them into ꝑ lande of Galaad, and to Libanus, and they shall want nothynge. He shall go vpon the sea of trouble, and smyte the sea wawes, so ꝑ al the depe floudes shall be dryed vp. The proude boastinge of Assur shalbe cast downe, and ꝑ scepter of *Egipt shal be taken away. I wyll comforte them in the Lord, that they maye walke in hys name, sayeth the Lorde.

and

The .xi. Chapter.

The destruccion of the temple. The care of the faythfull is committed to Christ by the father. A grieuous vysyon agaynst Jerusalem and Juda.

OPen thy dores O Libanus, that the fire maye consume thy Cedre trees. Houle ye fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen: yea al the proude are wasted awaye. Houle (O ye okettrees of Baasan) for the myghty strong wood is cut downe. Men maye heare the shepherdes mourne, for theyr glorye is destroyed. Men maye heare the lyons whelpes roare, for the pryde of Jordan is wasted awaye.

Thus sayth ꝑ lord my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, whyche shall be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them, saye: The lord be thanked, I am riche: yea, theyr owne shepeherdes spare them not. Therefore wyll I nomore spare those ꝑ dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lord:) but lo, I wyl delyuer the people, euerye man into hys neyghbours hande, and into the hande of his kynge, that they maye smyte the lande: and out of theyr handes I wyll not delyuer them.

I my selfe fedde ꝑ slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues, the one is called louynge mekenesse, ꝑ other is called destroyer, and so kepte the shepe.

Thre shepherdes I put out of office in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with the, neither had they any delyte in me. The saide I: I wyll fede you nomore, *the thyng that dyeth, let it dye: and that that wyll perysshe, let it perysshe: and let the remnaunte eate, euerye one the flesshe of hys neyghboure.

I toke also my louynge meke staffe and brake it, that I myght disanull the *couenaunt whyche I made wyth all people.

And so it was broken in that day. Then the poore symple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe thereby that it was the worde of the lorde. And I sayed vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, bryng hyther my price: yf no, then leaue. *So they weyed downe thirtye syluer pens, the value that I was prised at. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: caste it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valued at of them:) and I toke the .xxx. syluer pens and cast them to the potter, in ꝑ house of the Lorde. Then brake I myne other staffe also, (namelye destroyer:) ꝑ I mighte leuse the brotherhead betwyxte Juda and Israel. And the Lord sayde vnto me: Take thee also the staffe of a foolysh shepherd: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, whyche shall not sette after the thynges that be lost, nor care for suche as go astraye: he shal not heale ꝑ wounded, he shal not norish the thyng that is whole: but he shal eate the flesshe of suche as be fat, and teare theyr clawes in peces. O ydols shepeherde that leaueth the flocke: The swerde shall come vpon his arme and vpon hys ryghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dryed vp, and hys ryght eye shalbe sore blynded.

The .xii. Chapter.

Of the destruccyon and buyldynge agaynst of Jerusalem.

THe heuye burthen which ꝑ Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde * whyche spred the heauens abrode, layed the foundacion of the earth, and gyueth man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I wyll make Jerusalem a cuppe or surkette, vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her. *Yea Juda hym selfe also shalbe in the siege agaynste Jerusalem. At the same tyme wyll I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for all people, so ꝑ al such as lift it vp shalbe torne and rente: and all the people of the earthe shal be gathered togyther agaynste it.

*In that day, sayth the Lorde: I wyl make all horses abasshed and those that ryde vpō them to be out of theyr wyttes. I wil open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda, & smite all the horses of the people wyth blyndnesse. And the princes of Juda shal saye in theyr hertes: The inhabytours of Jerusalem shal gyue me consolacion in the lorde of hoostes theyr God. In ꝑ tyme wil I make ꝑ princes of Juda lyke an hote burnynge ouen wyth wood, and lyke a cressel of fyre amonge the strawe, so that they shall consume all the people round about them both vpō the right hande and ꝓ left. Jerusalem also shal be inhabyted agayne: namely in the same place where Jerusalem standeth. The lorde C shall preserue the tentes of Juda lyke as a fore tyme: so that the glorye of the house of Dauid, and the glorye of the citizens of Jerusalem shalbe but litle regarded, in comparyson of the glory of Juda. In ꝑ day shal the lorde defende the cytizens of Jerusalem, so ꝑ the weakest then among them shalbe as 1.reg.17.f *Dauid: & the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as Gods house & as the Aungel of the lorde before thē. At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroy al suche people as come against Jerusalem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the cytizens of Jerusalē, Exec.36.d *wyll I poure out the spyryte of grace and Joel.2.f compassion, so that they shal loke vpon me, Luce.23.b whom they haue pearsed: and they shal be- Joh.19.b wepe him as men mourne for theyr only begotten sonne: yea and be sorye for hym as D Luke.23.c men are sorye for theyr fyrst chylde. *Then shal there be a great mourning at Jerusalē: Apoc.15.c lyke as the lamentacyon at Adremmon in the fielde of Maggadon. And the land shal bewayle euery kynred by them selues. The kynred of ꝑ house of Dauid thē selues alone, and theyr wyues by themselues. The kynred Gene.21.a. of the house of *Nathan them selues alone & theyr wyues by themselues. The kynred of the house of Leui them selues alone & theyr wyues by thē selues. The kynred of ꝑ house of Semei thē selues alone & theyr wyues by thē selues. In lyke maner al the other generacyons euery one by them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues.

The.xiii. Chapter.

Of the well of grace and truthe. Of the cleane ryghteousnes of ꝓclamyng: and of false prophetes.

A IN that tyme shal the house of Dauid & Exec.47.a the cytizens of Jerusalem haue an open Zech.14.b *well to wash of sinne and vnclennesse. Job.19.d. And then (sayth the lord of hoostes) I will Esai.2.c destroye the names of the ydolles out of the Exec.30.c lande, so that they shal nomore be put in remembraunce. *Is for the false prophetes Jere.14.c also and the vnclcane spyryte, I shall take thē out of the lande: So that yf any of them Deu.13.b. propherye anye more, *hys owne father and mother that begat him shal saye vnto hym. Thou shalt die, for thou speakest lies vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, hys owne father and mother ꝑ begat hym shal wounde him, B when he propheryeth. And then shal those propheres be confounded, euery one of hys vysion when he propheryeth: neyther shall they weare sackeclothes any more to disceaue men wythall. But he shal be fayne to saye: *I am no prophete: I am an husband mā, *Jere.28.c for so am I taught by *Adam fro my youth *gene.3.d vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: how came these woundes then in thine handes? he shal answere. Thus am I wounded in the house C of mine owne frendes. Aryse, O thou swerde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the pryncc of my people sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. *Smyte the shepherd, and the shepe shalbe *Mat.26.c scattred abrode: and so wyll I tourne myne Mar.14.d hande to the lytle ones. And it shal come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in al the lande, *Jere.15.b two partes shal be rooted out, *but ꝑ thyrde *Joel.2.d parte shal remaine therin. & And ꝑ same third Esa.44.d parte wil I bryngc thorowe the fyre, and Psal.17.d wyl clense them as the syluer is clensed: yea 26.d.44.d & try them like as golde is tryed. *Thē shal 1.pet.1.d they call vpon my name, and I wyll heare *Sym.2.d them: I wyll saye: it is my people. And they Num.12.d shall saye: Lorde my God.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

The vnsayng of the churche vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

BEholde, the daye of the Lord commeth that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed, I for I wyll gather together al the heathen to fyghte agaynste Jerusalem, so that the cytie shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, & the wemē defiled. The halfe of the citie shall go awaye into captiuitie, & the residue of the people shal not be caried out of ꝑ citie. After that shal the lord go forth to fyght against those heathē as men vse to fyght in ꝑ day of battel. Then shall his fete stande vpon the B mount Oliuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuete shall cleaue in two, east ward & westwarde, so that there shalbe a greate valeye and the halfe mount shall remoue toward ꝑ north, & ꝑ other toward ꝑ south. And ye shal flee vnto the valey of my hylles, for the valeye of the hilles shal reache vnto Asal. Yea, ye shal ye *like as ye fled for ꝑ earthquake in ꝑ dayes Amos.1.d of Osiah kynge of Juda. And the lorde my God shal come, and al sayntes with him. In that day shal it not be light, either cleare or dymme. *Thys shall be that special daye Ps.44.d whych is knowen vnto the lord, neither day nor nyght, but about the euenynge tyme it shall be lyghte. *In ꝑ same shall there waters of life runne Zach.14.d out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them Apoc.22.d towarde the east sea, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost sea, and shall continue bothe

C At that tyme shal there be one Lorde only, & hys name shall be but one. Men shall go aboute the whole earthe, as vpon a fielde, from Gibia to Rennon, & from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, & inhabited in her place: from Ben Jamins porte, vnto the place of the fyrste porte, and vnto the Jer.31.f vnto the kynges wyne pressles.

There shal mẽ dwel, & there shalbe nomore cursyng, but Jerusalẽ shalbe safely inhabyted. Thys shall be the plage, wherwyth the lorde wyl smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Jerusalem. Namely, theyr flesshe shal consume away, though they stande vpõ theyr feete, theyr eyes shalbe corrupt in theyr holes, and theyr tong shal consume in theyr mouth. In that daye shall the Lord make a great seditiõ among them, so that one man shall take another by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neighbour.
Zach.14.a * Juda shal fyght also against Jerusalem, and the goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered together rounde about: gold and syluer, & a very greate multitude of clothes.
And so shall thys plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and al the beastes that shall be in the hoost, lyke as ponder plage was. Euery one that remayneth then of al ꝑ people, whyche came agaynste Jerusalem, shall go vp yeareiye, to worshyp the kynge (euen the Lord of hoostes) * and to kepe the

D Thys shall be the plage wherewyth ꝑ lorde wyl smyte all the Heathen, that come not vp to kepe ꝑ feast of tabernacles: yea, this shal be the synne plage of Egypt, and the synne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe ꝑ feast of tabernacles. At that tyme shall the tydyng gere of the horses be holy vnto the lord, and ꝑ kettels in the lordes house shalbe lyke the basens before the aulter: yea, all the kettels in Jerusalẽ and Juda, shall be holy vnto the lord of hoostes, & all they that slaye offrynges, shall come and take of them, and dyght thẽ therein. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Canaanites in the house of the Lorde of hoostes.

C The ende of the prophecye of zachary,

The booke of the prophete Malachye,

The fyrst Chapter.

A complaynte agaynst Israel and her prestes.

THe heuye burthen whych the lord sheweth against Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you sayth the lord, and yet ye say: Wherin hast thou loued vs? * Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the lorde? * yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: * yea, I haue made hys hylles wast, and hys herytage a wildernesse for dragons. And thoughe Edom sayd: well, we are destroyed, we wyll go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayth ꝑ Lord of hoostes) * what they buylded, that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people whom ꝑ lord hath euer bene angry with all.
B Your eyes haue sene it, and ye youre selues must confesse, that ꝑ Lord hath brought the land of Israel to great honoure. * Should not a sonne honour his father, and a seruaũt hys master? * If I be now a father, where is mine honour? Yf I be the lord, where am I feared, sayth the Lorde of hoostes.
Now to you prestes that despise my name. And yf ye say: wherein haue we despised thy name? In thys, that ye offre vncleane bread vpon myne aulter. And yf ye wyl say: wherin haue we offred any vncleane thinge vnto the? In thys that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. Yf ye offer the blynde, is not that euell? And yf ye offer the C lame and syeke, is not that euell? * Yea, offer it vnto thy prynce, shall he be contente wyth the, or accepte thy person, sayth the Lord of hoostes? And nowe make youre prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shal he regarde youre persones thynke ye sayth the lorde of hoostes? Yea, what is he amonge you, that wyll do so muche as to shut the doores, or to kindle ꝑ fyre vpon myne aulter for nought?
* I haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lorde of hoostes: * and as for the meatoffrynge, I wyll not accepte it at youre handes.
D * For from the rising vp of ꝑ sunne vnto ꝑ goyng downe of the same, my name is great among ꝑ Gẽtils: yea, in euery place shal there sacrifice be done, and cleane meatoffering offred vp vnto my name: for my name is great amonge merg the Heathe, saieth the lord of hooſtes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye: ꝑ aulter of the lorde is not to be regarded, and the thyng that is set there vpon no worthye to be eaten. Now saye ye: It is but labour and trauayle, and thus haue ye thoughte scorne at it, (saieth the Lorde of hooſtes) offringe robbery, yea, the lame and the sicke. Ye haue broughte me in a meate offerynge: ſhoulde I accepte it of youre hande, saieth ꝑ Lorde? Curſed be the dyſſembler, whyche hath in his flocke one that is a male, & when he maketh a vowe offereth a ſpotted one vnto the lorde. For I am a greate kynge (saieth the lord of hooſtes) and my name is fearful amonge the Heathen.

The. ii. Chapter.

Threatenynges agaynſt the prieſtes, beynge ſeducers of the people.

AND nowe (O ye prieſtes) this commaũdemente toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, nor regarde it, to gyue ꝑ glorye vnto my name, saieth the Lorde of hooſtes: * I wyll sende a curſe vpon you, & wyll curſe youre bleſſynges: yea, curſe them wyll I, yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I ſhall corrupte youre ſede, and caſte donge in youre faces, euē the donge of youre ſolemne feaſtes, and it ſhal cleaue faſt vpō you. And ye ſhall knowe, that I haue ſente thys cōmaundement vnto you: ꝑ my * couenaũte whyche I made wyth Leui, myghte ſtande, saieth the Lorde of hooſtes.

I made a couenaunt of lyfe and peace with hym: thys I gaue hym, that he might ſtand in awe of me: and ſo he dyd feare me, and hadde my name in reuerence. The lawe of truth was in hys mouth, and there was no wickednesſe found in his lippes. He walked wyth me in peace and equitie, and did turne manye one awaye from theyr ſynnes. * For in the prieſtes lyppes ſhould be ſure knowlege, that men maye ſeke the lawe at hys mouth, for he is a meſſenger of the Lord of hooſtes. But as for you, ye are gone clene out of the waye, & haue cauſed ꝑ multitude to be offended at the lawe: * ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, saieth the Lorde of hooſtes. Therfore wyll I alſo make you to be deſpiſed & to be of no reputacyon among al the people: becauſe ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene partiall in the lawe.

* Haue we not all one father? Hath not one God made vs? * why doth euery one of vs then deſpyſe hys owne brother, and ſo breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Nowe hath Juda offended: yea, the abomynacion is done in Iſraell and in Jeruſalem, * for Juda hath defyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, whyche he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a ſtraunge God. But the lorde ſhall deſtroye the man that doth thys, (yea, bothe the maiſter and the ſcholer) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, wyth hym that offreth vp meat offerynge vnto the lord of hooſtes. Nowe haue ye broughte it to thys poynte agaune, that the aulter of the lord is couered wyth teares, weping and mournynge: ſo ꝑ I wyl nomore regarde the meate offerynge, neyther wyl I receaue or accepte any thyng at youre handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euen becauſe that where as the lorde made a couenaunte betwyxte the & the wyfe of thy youth, thou haſt deſpyſed. * Yet is ſhe thyne owne companyon and maryed wyfe.

So did not the one, and yet had he an excellent ſpyrite. What did the? the one? he ſought the ſeed promyſed of God. Therefore loke well to your ſpyrite, and let no man deſpyſe the wyfe of hys youth. Yf thou hateſt her, * put her awaye saieth the Lorde God of Iſrael, and geue her clothing for the ſcorne, saieth the Lorde of hooſtes. Loke well then to your ſpyrite, and deſpiſe her not. Ye greue the Lorde wyth your wordes, and yet ye saye: wherewythal haue we greued hym? In this that ye ſaye. All that do euell are good in the ſyght of God, and ſuche pleaſe hym. Or els where is the God that punyſhethe

The. iii. Chapter.

Of the meſſenger of the Lord, Iohn Baptyſt. Of the daye of the Lorde, and of Elias.

BEholde, * I wyl sende my meſſaũger, whyche ſhall prepare the wy before me: and the Lord whom ye would haue, ſhal ſoone come to hys temple, yea, euen the meſſenger of the couenaunt whom ye long for. Behold, he cōmeth saieth the lorde of hooſtes. But who maye abyde the day of hys commyng? Who ſhal be able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldſmythes fyre, & lyke waſhers ſope. He ſhall ſet hym downe to trye and to clenſe the ſyluer, he ſhall purge the chyldren of Leui, & purifye them lyke as gold & ſiluer: ꝑ they may bring meatofferinges vnto the Lord in ryghteouſnes. Then ſhall the offring of Juda & Jeruſalem be acceptable vnto the lord, lyke as from the begynnyng and in the yeares afore tyme. I wyll come & punyſhe you, and I my ſelfe wyll bee a ſwyfte wytneſſe agaynſte the wytches, agaynſte the aduouterers, agaynſte falſe ſweareres swearers: yea, & against those that wrongeously kepe backe ỹ hyrelynges dewty: which vexe the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger, & feare not me, saieth the Lorde of hooستes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, and ye (O children of Jacob) wil not leaue of: * ye are gone away from myne ordinaunces, and sence the tyme of youre forefathers haue ye not kept them.

* Turne ye now vnto me, and I will turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hooستes: ye saye: wherin shall we turne? Shoulde a mã vse falshed and discett with God, as ye vse falshed & discette with me? yet ye say, wherin vse we discepte with the? * In Tythes and heaue offerynges. * Therfore are ye cursed with penury, because ye dissemble with me, all ỹ sorte of you. * Bring euery Tythe into my barne, that there maye be meate in my house: and proue me withal (sayeth the lord of hooستes) yf I will not open ỹ wyndowes of heauen vnto you, and poure you out a blessynge with plenteousnesse. Yea, I shall reproue the consumer for your sakes, so that he shal not eate vp the fruite of your ground, neyther shall the vyneyarde be baren in the feld, sayeth the lorde of hooستes: In so much that all people shall saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shalbe a pleasaunt lande, saieth the lord of hooستes. Ye speake harde wordes against me, sayeth the lorde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken against the? Ye haue sayd: It is but lost laboure, to serue God.

* What profite haue we for keppynge hys commaundementes, and for walkynge hũble before the lorde of hooستes? * Therfore maye we saye, that the proude are happye, & that they whiche deale with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, & yet escape. But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: The Lorde considereth & heareth it. Yea, it is before hym a memoriall booke wrytten for such as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in the daye that I will make (sayeth the lorde of hooستes) they shalbe myne owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, like as a man fauoureth hys owne sonne, that doeth him seruice. Turne you therfore, and consydre what difference is betwirte the ryghteous and vngodly, betwyxte him that serueth God, and hym that serueth hym not.

The.iiii. Chapter.

* Or marke, the daye commeth ỹ shall burne as an ouen: and al the proude, yea, and al such as do wickednes, shalbe strawe: and the day that is for to come, shal burne thẽ vp (sayeth the lorde of hooستes) so that it shal leaue thẽ neyther roote nor braunche. But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sunne of ryghteousnesse aryse, and health shalbe vnder his wynges: ye shall go forth, and multiplie as the fat calues, ye shall treade down the vngodly: * for they shalbe lyke ỹ asshes vnder the soles of your fete, in the day that I shall make, sayeth the Lorde of hooستes. Remember the law of Moses my seruaunt, * whiche I cõmytted vnto him in Oreb for all Israel, with the statutes and ordynaunces. Beholde, I will sende you * Elias the prophet, before the commynge of the day of the great and fearfull lorde. * He shall turne the hertes of the fathers to their children, and the hertes of the children to their fathers, that I come not and smite the earth wyth curssynge.

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Josias holdeth Passeouer. After hys death is Jechonias hys sonne made kynge in his steade: whō the kynge of Egypte putteth out, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed. and Sedechias is taken.

AND * Josias held the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the LORDE and slewe ẏ Passeouer the.xiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth. He set the preastes also in order (accordyng to theyr daylye curses) be ynge arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the LORD. And he spake vnto the Leuites ẏ holye ministers of Israel that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the LORD, to set the holy Arke of ẏ LORDE in the house ẏ kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had builded, & sayde: ye shall nomore beare the Arke vpō youre shulders. Nowe serue your LORDE & take ẏ charge of his people of Israel, after your villages & your tribes accordinge as kynge Dauid ẏ kynge of Israel hath ordeyned, and accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: yee, loke ẏ ye al do seruice in ẏ temple accordynge to theyr ordrynge & distribution of the principall men whych are appointed out of the tribes, to do seruice for the chyldren of Israel. Exod.12.d *kyll ẏ Passeouer, and prepare offringes for youre brethren, & do accordyng to the commaundemente of ẏ LORDE, whyche was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto ẏ people ẏ was founde Josias gaue, rrr. thousande of shepe, lambes, kydes, & goates, & thre thousand orē. These ẏ kynge (of hys kyngly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, accordyng as he had promised: & to ẏ prestes for ẏ Passeouer, he gaue two thousāde shepe, & an hundred orē. Moreouer Jechonias, & Semeias, and Nathanael his brethrē, and Halabias, Jehiel, & Jolabab gaue them to the passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

B And whē these thinges were brought to passe, the preastes & the Leuites stode goodly in theyr ordre, and had ẏ vnleuened bread thoroweout the tribes. And after the ordrynge of ẏ principall men in the tribes, they offered vnto ẏ LORDE in the syghte of the people accordynge * as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe as accordinge was. As for the thanckeoffrynges and the other, they dight in the kettelles and pottes, & set them before the people wyth good wyl, and afterwarde before thē selues and the preastes. For the preastes offerede ẏ fat vntyl the tyme was expired, but the Leuites prepareth for them selues & for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also, the chyldrē of Asaph stode in theyr order, accordinge as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph, Zachary, and Jeduthū, which were appointed by the kynge. Moreouer ẏ porters & dore kepers stode by the doores and that diligently, so ẏ none went out of hys stādynge and seruice: for theyr brethrē (the Leuites) prepared for thē. Thus were all thinges perfourmed, ẏ belonged to the offeringe of the LORD. In that daye they helde the Passeouer and offered thanckeoffrynges beside the sacrifice of the LORD accordinge to the commaundement of kyng Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel whiche were thē present, helde an honorable Passeouer, and the feaste of swete breade seuen dayes longe. yee, suche a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel from the tyme of the Prophete Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as thys, whych kinge Josias held, and the preastes, the Leuites the Jewes, and all Israel, & al them that were at Jerusalem. And in the eyghttene yeare of the raigne of Josias, was this Passeouer kepte. And wyth a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias order all his workes before the LORD, and ẏ thinges ẏ were wrytte of hym in times paste, concernyng those ẏ synned and were vngodly agaynst ẏ LORD before al ẏ people: & that sought not the worde of the LORD vpon Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao ẏ kynge of Egypt wēt vp & came toward Carchamin by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the kyng of Egypt to Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the, kyng of Juda: I am not sēt of ẏ LORD to fight

And immediatly his ſeruantes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then ſat he vp vpon the ſeconde charet, came to Jeruſalem, dyed and was buryed in hys fathe3s ſepulchre. The ij. Chapter.

¶ Cyrus geueth licence to the Jewes to retourne to Jerusalem, and restoreth the the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sente to Artaxerxes: whyche accuse the Jewes for buyldyng of the citie: and so to the buyldynge dryuen of vntyl the seconde yeare of Darius.

a.Per.36.d

NOw *when kyng Cyrus rayg ned ouer the Persians, & when the LORD wolde perfourme the woꝛde that he had promised by the mouthe of the prophet Jeremy: the LORDE rayſed vp the ſpꝛeite of Cyrus, the kyng of the Persians: ſo that he cauſed his wꝛitynge to be proclamed thoꝛow out hys whole realme, ſaying: Thus ſayth the kynge of Persians: The LORD of Israel that hye LORD hath made me kyng of the lande, and cõmaunded me to buyld hym an houſe at Jeruſalem in Jewry. yf ther be any nowe of your peple the LORDE be wyth hym, & go vp wt him to Jeruſalem. And all they that dwel rounde aboute the place ſhal helpe them, whether it be wt gold wyth ſyluer, with gyftes, wt hoꝛſes and neceſſary catel, & al other thynges that are bꝛought wt a fre wyl to the houſe of the LORD at Jeruſalẽ.

B Then the principal men out of the trybes & vyllages of Juda & Ben Jamin ſtode vp: ſo dyd the preaſtes alſo and the Leuites (whome the LORD had moued) to go vp, & to buyld the houſe of the LORDE at Jeruſalẽ. And they that were about thẽ helped them wt all maner of gold, & ſyluer, and catel alſo, & with many liberall gyfts, & thys dyd many one, whoſe mynde was ſtered vp therto. a.Eſd.1.c. Cyrus alſo bꝛought foꝛth the veſſels, & oꝛnamentes, that were halowed vnto the LORD, which Nabuchodonoſoꝛ the kynge of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jeruſalẽ and cõſecrated them to hys Idol & image, and delyuered them to Mythꝛidatus, hys treaſurer, & by hym they were delyuered to Salamanaſar the debite in Jewry. Theſe were nombꝛed vnto Salamana ſar, to them that were come agayne wyth him to Jeruſalem out of the captiuite of Babylon. Nowe in the tyme of kynge Artaxerxes the kyng of Perſia theſe mẽ: Baleus and Mythꝛidatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the ſcribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria and in other places vnder the dominion therof, wꝛote a letter vnto kyng Artaxerxes, wherin they cõplayned vnto the kynge of them in Jewry & Jeruſalẽ. The letter was made after thys maner. Syꝛ thy ſeruauntes Rathimus, the ſtoꝛy wꝛyter, Sabellius the ſcribe, & other iudges of the courte in Celoſyria, & Phenices. Be it knowen & manifeſt to our loꝛde the kynge, that the Jewes whyche are come vp frõ you vnto vs into the rebellious & wycked citie, begynne to buyld it agayne, & the walles about it, and to ſet vp the temple a newe. Nowe yf this citie & the walles there of be ſet vp agayne they ſhal not onely refuſe to geue trybutes & tares, but alſo rebel vtterly agaynſt the king. And for ſo moche as they take this in hãde nowe a boute the tẽple, we thoughte it reaſõ, to thincke no ſcoꝛne of it but to ſhewe it vnto our loꝛde the kynge, and to certifie hym therof: to the intente that yf it pleaſe the kynge, he maye cauſe it to be ſought te in the bookes of olde: & thou ſhalte fynde ſuch warnynge wꝛyten, and ſhalt vnderſtãde that thys citie hath alwaye ben rebellious and diſobediente, that it hath ſubdued kynges and cities, & that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue ben a rebellious, obſtinate vnfaythful, and fyghtynge people, foꝛ the whyche cauſe thys citie is waſted. Wherfoꝛe nowe we certifie oure loꝛde the kyng, that yf thys citie be buylded & occupyed agayne, and the walles therof ſet vp a newe, thou canſt haue no paſſage into Celoſyria and Phenices.

Then wꝛote the kynge to Rathimus the ſtoꝛy wꝛyter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius, the ſcrybe and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria, & Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the epiſtle whyche thou ſenteſt vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent ſearche, and haue found, that the citie hath euer reſiſted kynges, that the ſame people are diſobediẽt, & haue cauſed muche warre, & that myghtye kynges haue raygned in Jeruſalẽ, whyche alſo haue rayſed vp vp tares of Syria, & Phenices. Wher fore I haue commaunded those people, ꝑ they shal not buyld ꝑ citie, they make nomore in it, and that they proceed no forther with the buyldyng, for so much as it myghte be the cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathymus and Sabellius the scribe & the rulers in the lande had red the wrytynge of kyng Artarerres, they gat them togeather, and came in all the haste to Ierusalem wyth an hoost of horsemen, and wyth much people of foote, and forbade thē to buyld. And so they left of from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre yonge men, of the whych the fyrst is declared.

1 KYng Darius made a great feast vnto hys seruantes, vnto al hys courte, and to al ꝑ officers of Medea and Persia, yee to al the debites and rulers ꝑ were vnder hym, frō India vnto Ethopia, an hundred and xxvij. countrees. So whē they had eaten and dronken, beynge satisfyed, and were gone home agayn. Darius the kynge went into his chambre, layde hym downe to slepe, & so awaked.

2 Then the thre yonge mē that kepte ꝑ kynges person, and watched hys body, commoned amonge thē selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thyng, & loke whose sentēce is wyser & more excellēt then ꝑ other, vnto hi shal kyng Darius geue great gyftes, & cloth hym wt purple, he shal geue hym vessels of golde to drynck in, clothes of golde & couerynges, he shal make him a costly charet & bridle of gold, he shal geue hym a bonet of whyte sylke, & a chayne of gold about his necke: yee, he shalbe the seconde and principall nert vnto king Darius, and ꝑ because of his wysdom, & shalbe called ꝑ kynges kinsmā.

C So euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it & layde it vnder the kynges pelowe, & sayde: when the kynge aryseth, we wyl geue hym our wrytynges, and loke whose worde the kyng & hys chefe Lordes iudge to be the moost wyselye spokē, the same shall haue the victorie. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thynge The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The third wrote: Womē haue yet more strengthe, but aboue al thynges ꝑ truth beareth a waye the victorie. Nowe whē ꝑ kyng was rysen vp, they toke theyr wrytynges & delyuered thē vnto hym, & so he red thē. Then sent he forth to call al his chefe Lordes, & al the debites & rulers of ꝑ countrees of Medea & Persia. And whē they were set downe in the counsayle, the wrytinges were red before thē. And he commaunded to call for the yonge mē ꝑ they myght declare theyr meanynges thē selues by mouth: So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto thē, shewe vs and make vs vnderstāde what the thynges are ꝑ ye haue wrytten. Then begā the D fyrst (whyche had spoken of the strēgth of wyne) and sayde. O ye men *wyne is Pro. 10. A. meruelous stroge, & ouercommeth thē ꝑ drynche it: it deceaueth the mynde & bryngeth bothe ꝑ poore mā & the kynge to dotage & nanite. Thus doth it also wt the bondmā & wt the fre, with the pore & ryche, it taketh a way theyr vnderstandyng, & maketh thē careles & mery, so ꝑ none of thē remembreth any heuinesse, or det, or dutye. It causeth a man to thynche also, ꝑ the thyng that he doth is honest & good, and remembreth not ꝑ he is a kyng, nor that he is in autoritye and that he ought not to do suche thynges. Moreouer when mē are drynckynge, they forget al frēdeship, al brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as sone as they are dronkē, they drawe out the swerd & wil fyghte: & whē they are layde downe frō ꝑ wyne, & rysen vp agayne, they cā not tel what they dyd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne ꝑ strongest: For who wold els take in hāde to do such thiges: And whē he had spokē this, he held his tōg.

The iiij. Chapter.

¶ The declaration of the two laste sentences of the yonge mē, propounded in the Chapter before, of why the the laste is, that verite beareth the victorie in all thynges and is moeste cōmended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnd hym, that they shoulde ayde Zorobabel, to the buyldyng of Ierusalem.

THen the secōd (whych had sayde: that the kynge was stronger) begā to speake. O ye men are not they the strongest and moste excellent that cōquere the land & the see, and al that is in the see and in ꝑ earth: Now is ꝑ king Lord of al thes thynges, & hathe dominion of them all, and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. yf he send his men forth a warfare, they go & breake downe hylles, walles, and toweres. They are slayne, and (slaye other men) them selues, & ouerpasse not the kinges worde. yf they get the victorie, they bringe the kyng al the spoyle. Lykewise the other that medle not wt warres and fyghtyng, but tyll ỹ grounde: whē they reape they bryng tribute vnto the king. And yf ỹ king alone do but cōmaūd to kyl, they kyl: yf he cō maūd to forgeue: they forgeue: yf he cō maunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he cōmaund to buyld, they buyld: yf he cōmaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he cōmaūd to plāt, they plāt.

B The comen people and the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in ỹ meane seasō sytteth hym downe, eateth and drynketh and taketh his reste: thē kepe they watch round about the kynge, and not one of thē dare get him oute of the waye, to do hys owne busynes, but must be obedient vnto ỹ kyng at a worde. Judge ye nowe, O ye mē howe should not he go farre aboue, vnto whō mē are thus obediēt: And when he had spoken thus, he held hys tōge. The thyrde, whose name is Zorobabel, whyche had spoken of wemen, and of trueth begane to saye after this maner: Oye men, it is not the great kynge, it is not the multitude of mē, neyther is it wyne that excelleth: who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer them: Haue not wemen borne the kynge, and all the people that rule those thynges: Haue not wemen borne them and brought them vp, that plante the vines, where oute ỹ wyne commeth: They make garmētes for all men, they geue honoure vnto al men and without wemen can not men lyue. yf they gather golde and syluer and all precious thynges, and se a wel fauored woman, they leaue altogether & turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue more desire vnto her, then vnto the syluer and golde, or any maner of precious thynge.

C * A man leaueth hys father ỹ broughte hym vp, leaueth his owne natural cōtrce, and cleaueth vnto the woman, yee, he iopardeth his lyfe wyth the woman & remembreth neyther father, nor mother, nor countrye. By thys thē ye must nedes knowe that wemen haue dominion ouer you.

Gene 2.d. Matth 19.c. 1.Cor.6.d. Ephe.5.b.

Doth it not greue you: A man taketh hys swearde & goeth his waye, to steale, to kyl, to murther, to sayle on the see, and seyth a Lion, and goeth in the darcknes: & when he hath stolen, dysceaued & robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a mā loueth his wyfe better thē father or mother: yee, many one ther be, that run out of theyr wyttes & become bōdmen for theyr wyues sakes many one also hath perished, haue ben slayne, & haue synned because of wemē.

And nowe beleue me I knowe a kynge, wyche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of hym, & no man dare laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd I se, that Apame, (the doughter of the great kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubine, sat beside the kyng vpon the ryght hand, and toke of his crowne from his head, and set it vpō hyr owne head, and smote the kyng wyth her left hād. Moreouer the kynge loked vpon her wyth open mouth yf she laughed vpō hym, he laughed also, but yf she toke any displeasure with hym, the kyng was fayne to flatter her, and geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

Oye men, are not wemen then stronger: Great is the earth, & hye is ỹ heauen. Who doth these thinges: Then ỹ king & ỹ princes loked one vpō another So he begāne to speake of the truth: O ye men: are not wemē stroger: Great is the earth, hie is thē heauen, swyft is the course of the sunne, * he compasseth the heauē rounde aboute, and fetcheth his course againe to his owne place in one day. Is he not excellent that doth this: yee, great is the truth, & stronger then all thynges. Al the earth calleth vpon ỹ truth, the heauē prayseth it, al workes shake and tremble at it, and wyth it is no vnryghteous thynge. Wyne is vnryghteous: the kynge is vnryghteous: wemen are vnryghteous: all the chyldrē of mē are vnryghteous: ye, al theyr workes are vnryghteous, and there is no truth in thē: in theyr vnryghteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perysche. As for the truth * it endureth, & is alwaye stroge: it lyueth & coquereth for euer more: worlde wythout ende.

The truth accepteth no persons: it putteth no difference betwirte ryche or poore, betwirte the myghtie or symple, but doth ryght vnto euerye man, whether they be euel or good, & al mē are lo uyngly dealt withall in ỳ worckes of it. In the iudgement of it, there is no vnryghteous thyng but strength, kyngdome power, and maiestie for euermore. Blessed be the GOD of truth. And wyth ỳ he helde his tonge, & al ỳ people cryed & sayd: Great is ỳ truth, and aboue al. Thē sayd ỳ kyng vnto hym: Aske what thou wylt more then is appoynted in the wrytynge and I shall geue it ỳ, for thou art founde wyser then thy companyons, thou shalt syt next me, and be my kynsman. Thē sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promise & bowe, whych thou hast bowed and promised (in the daye when thou cammest to thy kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all ỳ vessels and Jewels that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: whyche Cyrus sepaȝated, when he offred in Babylon, and wolde sende thē agayne. And thy mynde was to buyld vp the temple, which ỳ Edomites brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Chaldees. Thys onely (O kyng) is the thige that I require, this is thy maiestye, whych I desire and aske of the, that thou performe the bowe, which thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heauen:

f Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kyssed hym, * & wrote a letter vnto all ỳ debites & shreues, to al ỳ Lordes and nobles, that they shuld conuey hym for the, and all them ỳ wolde go vp wt hym. He wrote a letter also vnto al the shreues that were in Celosyria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, ỳ they shulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buyld ỳ citie wythall. Moreouer, he wrot vnto al the Jewes ỳ were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, ỳ no officer nor ruler, nor shreue, shuld come to theyr dores, & ỳ al theyr lande whych they had conquered, shuld be fre & not tributarie, and ỳ Edomites shuld geue ouer ỳ cities & villages of ỳ Jewes, whyche they had taken in: yee, and ỳ they shuld yearely geue twentye talentes to the buyldyng of the temple, vntyl the tyme that it were finished, & to the dayly halowynge of the brentofferynges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And ỳ al they which came frō Babylon to buyld ỳ citie, shuld haue fre libertie: they & theyr chyldren, and al ỳ preastes

He wrote the greatnes also and commaunded that ỳ holye garmēts shulde be geuen them wherin they ministred: & wrote that cōmaundementes shuld be geuen to the Leuites, vntyl the daye ỳ the house were finished, and Jerusalem builded vp, & commaūded ỳ al they that watched ỳ citie shulde haue theyr porcions & wages. He gaue ouer al the vessels that Cyrus had separated frō Babylon, and al that Cyrus had geuen in commaundemēt, ỳ same charged he also, ỳ it shulde be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Nowe when thys yonge man G was gone forthe, he turned his face towarde Jerusalem, & praysed ỳ kynge of heauē, & sayd: * Of the cōmeth ỳ victorie Eccles. 4. of the cōmeth wysdom & clearenes, & I am thy seruaūt. Blessed art thou whyche hast geuē wysedō: the wyll I prayse O LORDE, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon. And when he cam there he tolde this vnto al his brethren that were at Babylon, and they praysed the GOD of theyr fathers, that he had geuē thē refreshynge & libertie to go vp and to buyld Jerusalem & the temple (wherein ỳ name of the LORDE is called vpō) and they reioyced wyth instrumentes and gladnes seuen dayes longe.

Of the prestes that executed þ office of the presthode, & were not foūde: The sonnes of Obia, the sōnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whych mayred one of þ daughters of Pharlegen, and were named after hym. The wrytyng of the same kynred was songht in þ register of theyr gene racion, but it was not found, & therfo re were they forbidden to execute þ offi ce of the preasthode. Unto thē sayd Nehemias and Athsharas, that they shulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuary, tyll there rose vp an hye Preast, that were wel instructed in the playn clearenesse and truth. Of al Israel (beyd seruaun tes and maydens) there were xlii. M. ij C. & xl. Nowe were there of seruaūtes & maydens vij. M. iij. C. & xxxvj. Of syn gynge men and syngyng women there were two hundred and lxv. Four hun dred and xxxv Camels. Seuen thousan de and xxxvj. horses. Two hūdred. M. xlv. Mules. Fyue M. and. xxv. Asses.

E Theyr heades also & the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wold buylde and set vp þ temple of GOD agayn in hys place, they gaue (af ter theyr habilite) vnto þ temple, to the treasure, and to the seruice of the San ctuary. xij. And so dweite þ preas stes and the Leuites & the people that went out to Jerusalem, and in the coun trye there about, the syngers also & the porters, euery one of Israel in hys own lande.

1.Esd.3.d. *So when the seuenth moneth came & when þ chyldrē of Israel were euery mā at hys busynesse, they came al wyth one assente in to the courte whych was before the eastdore. And there stode Je sua the sonne of Josedec, & hys brethrē the prestes, and zorobabell, the sonne of Salathyel, and hys brethrē, settyng vp an aulter, to ofre burntsacrifices vpon it, as it is wrytte in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other coun tries and the Heathen out of al landes to set vp the aulter in hys place, & offred sacrifices & burntofferynges vnto the LORDE in the morynng. And so they hel de the feast of tabernacles, *as it is com maūded in þ law. And dayly ofred they as accordyng was, and made the sacri fices appoynted, the offerynges also of the Sabothes, and of þ newe Moones and all holye seastes. Leui. 23.f. Num. 29.b 2.Mach.1.c

* And al they that bowed offeringes vnto the LORDE, begāne at þ new Moo ne of þ seuēth moneth to ofre vnto GOD for the tēple of the LORDE was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto þ masons and carpenters, mony, meat, & drynck with chearfulnesse, vnto them of Sydō also and Tyre, they gaue carres, þ they shuld cary Cedre trees from Lybanus to be ioystes, and beames and that they shulde make shyppes in þ hauen of Jop pe, accordyng as it was appointed and ordeyned by Cyrus kyng of þ Persiās. 1.Esdr.3.b.

And in the secōde yeat, they came in F to the temple of GOD, at Jerusalē. * In the second moneth began zorobabel the sonn of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, & their brethren the prestes & Leuites: and al they that were come vnto Jerusalē out of þ captiuite of Ba bylon, & layed the foūdacion of the tem ple, in the newe Mone of the secōde mo neth in the secōd yere, þ they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem. And they apo ynted the Leuites (that were aboue xx. yere old) vnto the seruice of the LORDE so, Jesua and hys sonnes, & hys brethrē al the Leuites stode together, and per fourmed the law and ordinaunce in the house of the LORDE. Ecc. 29.b.c

And the prestes stode, and had theyr garmentes and trompettes, and the Le uites, þ sonnes of Asaph, had cymbales geuyng thankes and prayses vnto the LORDE, accordyng *as Dauid the kyn ge of Israel had ordeyned. 1.Par.16.b

And þ songe that they dyd syng vnto þ LORD, was after this maner. * O syn ge vnto the LORD, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpō Israel endureth for euer. And al the people blewe out with trōpettes, and sange wyth loud voyce prayslnge the LORD together, in the rea rynge vp of the house of þ LORD * Ther came also frome amonge the preastes and Leuites the rulers & elders accor dinge to the trybes and kynredes (such as had sene the house afore) to the buyl dynge of this tēple wt great mournyge, Psal.135.d. many also w trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the tropettes myght not wel beherde for the wepinge and mournynge. For the commune people blewe goodly vpon the trompettes,

1.Esdr.4.a. * Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamin, to knowe what that trompettynge and noyce of shawmes myght be. And they perceyued that it was they whych were come agayne out of captiuite, & wolde buyld the tẽple vp a newe vnto ỳ LORD GOD of Israel. So they wẽt to Zorobabel, & Jesua, and the rulers of the villages, & sayd vnto them. Shal we buyld w you also? For we likewise haue heard your LORD, & we walke after ỳ same maner from the dayes of Azbalareth the kyng of Assyria, which brought vs hyther. Thẽ Zorobabel and Jesua, & the rulers of the villages of Israel, sayd vnto thẽ: It is not mete, that ye shulde buylde ỳ temple of our GOD with vs, we our selues alone wyl buylde vnto the LORDE,

1.Esd.1.4. lyke* as Cyrus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the Heathen in ỳ land layde them selues agaynst those ỳ were in Jewry, held vp the buildynge from them, layed wayte vpon thẽ preuelye, stopped suche as brought any thynge to them, forbad them to buylde, and hyndred those that made them passage, that the buyldyng shulde not be finished: and thys continued so longe as kynge Cyrus lived: and so they put of the buyldinge for the space of two yeares, vntyll the raygne of kynge Darius.

The vj. Chapter.

¶ Aggeus and Zacharyy prophecied. They buylde the temple wyth out let or hynderawnce: by the commaundement of Darius.

1.Esdr.5.c. A NOt withstanding: in the seeõd yeare of the raygne of Darius. * Aggeus, and Zacharie ỳ sonne of Addo, propheried vpon them in Jewry, and Jerusalem, in ỳ name of the GOD of Israel: * Then Zorobabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua, the sonne of Josedec stode vp & begãne to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, when the prophetes of the LORD helped thẽ. At ỳ same time came Sisẽnes ỳ vndershreue in Syria, and Phenices, with the lanlordes and hys companions, & sayde vnto them, Who hathe bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house to make the roofe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the worcke men: that buyld thẽ? Neuertheles, the elders of ỳ Jewes had suche grace of ỳ LORD, that they wold not be lette (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styl vntyl the tyme ỳ kynge Darius were certified thereof, & an answere receaued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius was after thys maner.

Sisennes the vndershreue in Cyria, & Phenices and the lanlordes w theyr B companyons, whych are hed rulers in Syria, and Phenices, send theyr salutacion vnto Darius ỳ kyng. We certifie the Lord the kynge, that we came in to the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem where we found them buylding the great house of GOD, and the tẽple, wyth greate costly freestone, & wyth goodly tymber for ỳ walles: yee, they make grete haste wyth the worcke, & helpe one another, and it goeth forthe prosperously in theyr handes, and with great diligence & worshyp it is made. Thẽ asked we the elders who had cõmaunded thẽ to make vp the house and ỳ buyldynge, and thys we dyd to the entẽte that we mighte certifie the perfectly, and wryte vnto the the names of those that were the rulers of the worcke. So they gaue vs thys answere: we are the seruaũtes of the LORD, whych made heauen and earth, & as for thys house, * it hath ben 1.Kyng.6.a

that kynge Cyrus raigned at Babylõ Cyrus the kynge wrote and commaũded to buyld vp the house agayne, and al the ornamẽtes that Nabuchodonosor caryed away from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto hys owne tẽple, these brought Cyrus forth agayne, and delyuerd them to Zorobabel and to Salmanasar, the vndershreue: commaundynge them, ỳ they shulde bryng those same ornamentes agayne

Salmanaser laide the fundacion of the kest it good, let it be sought in the libra councell and consente of kynge Cyrus, and yf our lorde the king be so minded,

C *Then commaunded kynge Darius be deliuered vnto Zorobabel ỳ officer that he there wythall, may ordayn orē,

The vij. Chapter

¶ The temple is finished and dedicated. and the fe

A Then Sisennes the vnderchreue in Celysyria, and Phenices, & ỳ other landlordes wyth theyr cōpanyons, obeyed ỳ thinges that kynge Darius had ordeined, and were diligent in ỳ holi worckes, and were se lowhelpers with ỳ olde rulers of ỳ Je-wes, And so the worke of the Sanctua rie went forth and prospered, when Ag geus & Zachari prophecyed. And they perfourmed all thinges thorowe the cō maundemēt of the LORD GOD of Israe el, and after the decree of Cyrus, Darius, and Artarerres, kynges of Persia.

And thus was oure house finished un to the xxiij. daye of the moneth Adar in B the .vj. yeare of kynge Darius And the chyldren of Israel, the preestes and Le-uites, & the other ỳ were come out of captiuite: & such as were ioyned vnto them, did according as it is wrītten in the booke of Moses. And in ỳ dedicacō of ỳ tēple, they offered an. C. Orē, two hundred rammes. iiij. C. lābes, and .vj. goates, for the synnes of Israel, after ỳ nomber of the tribe of Israel. The preastes also and the Leuites stode arayed in theyr preastly garmēts, after the tri bes, ouer all the worckes of the LORD GOD of Israel, according vnto the boke of Moses, and ỳ porters by all ỳ dores.

And the chyldren of Israel (wyth tho se that were come out of captiuite) held C the passeouer the fourtene daye of ỳ fyrst moneth, when the preastes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that ca me oute of captiuite were not all sanctī fied together. But the Leuites were sanctified together, and so all they that came out of captiuite, kylled the Easter lambe for their brethren for the preastes, and for them selues. And the chil-

children of Israel, that came out of cap D tiuitie and escaped from all the abomi-nacions of the Heathen, sought ꝑ LOR DE, and kepte the feast of the vnleuened breade seuen dayes longe, eating and drynckyng and were mery before the LORDE, that the LORD had turned the deuyce of the king of Assyria, and comforted theyre handes to the workes of the LORDE GOD of Israel.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come together: And then redeth them the lawe. They kepe the feast of the tabernacle.

I 1.Esdr.7.d. And after hym* when Artarxerxes the kyng of the Parsiās raygned there went vnto him Esdras the sone of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Hel-chiach, the sonne of Sallum ꝑ sonne of Sadduch, the sonne of Achitob, the son ne of Amarias, the sone of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sone of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazer, the sonne of Aaron ꝑ fyrst preast. Thys Esdras wente vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstādynge in the lawe of Moses that was geuen of the LORDE GOD of Israel, to be taught and done in dede) And the kyng fauoured him, and dyd hym great worshyp and honoure, after al hys desires. There wente vp w hym also certayne of the chyldren of Is rael, of the preastes, of the Leuites, of the syngers, porters, and ministers of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yeare of the raygne of kynge Artarerres, in ꝑ .v. moneth, that is in the .vij. yeare of the raygne, they went frome Babylon in the new mone of the .v. moneth and came the hye way to Jerusalem after hys commaundeme-mente, lyke as the LORDE hath prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruccion, that he shuld leaue none of the thinges be hynde, whych are in the lawe and commaundements of GOD. And he taught hole Israell all ryghteousnes and iudgementes.

B Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artarerres, & deliuered the writtynges (that were come from Artarerres the kyng) to Esdras the preast and rea der of the lawe of the LORD. And thys is the copie of ꝑ letter. Kyng Artarer-xes sendeth hys gretyng vnto Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of the LORDE. Of frendeshyp and good wyll, I haue ordayned and charged, if there be any of the Jewes, of the preastes & Leuites in my realme, whych desireth and is content to go wyth the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therfore, yf any be mynded to beare the company,

Then sayde Esdras the wryter. Blest sed be the GOD of our fathers, ꝑ hath ge uen so good a mynde and wyll into the herte of the kynge to magnifie hys hou se that is at Ierusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his councel, of his frendes & of his nobles, & so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordynge as ꝑ LORD my GOD helped me, & chose men out of Israel to go with me.* And these are the heades (after theyr kynreds and houses of the yr fathers) that went vp wyth me from Babylon out of the kyngedome of Artarerres. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Ecerlom, and Mahnam, & Malabam and Enaathā, and Hamea, & Iozibimathā, Eunagā, Zachary, Mololamun (these were the eiders and mē of experience) and I sēt them worde that they shuld come vnto Loddus, wyich was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddus and to hys brethren, & to those ꝑ were in the treasurye, to sende vs such mē, as might execute the preastes office in the hou se of the LORDE our GOD, and wyth ꝑ myghtye hande of oure LORD GOD thei brought vnto vs men of good experien ce, from amonge the sonnes of Mooly us, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Isra el, Sebeiam, and the sōnes and his bre thren Asbin, & Anin, of whom there were. xviij. * Then commaūded I a fastynge vn C to the yonge men before the LORDE, ꝑ I.Esdr.viij. I myght desire of hym a prosperus to urni, & a good way for vs: yee, for vs: for oure chyldren and for the Catell, becau se of the layinges awayte, and I durst not require of the kynge men of horse and of foote: to conuei vs safely against our enemies, for we had saide vnto the kynge, that the power of the LORD our GOD shulde be with thē that seke him wt theyr hole herte. And therefore, we so ughte GOD oure LORDE earnestly be cause of these thynges, and he was mer cifull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer, And I seperated from among the ru lers of the people, and from the prea stes of the temple. xij. men and Sebeia, and Asania, and. x. men of theyr brethrē wyth them. And weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the preastly or namentes of the house of our GOD, whiche the kynge and his councel: and hys princes and whole Israell had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an. Be diligente nowe, and kepe it, vntyl the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem and in the chamber of the house of our God.

1.Esd.8.d. *So the preastes & Leuites whych receaued of me the golde, & syluer, and the vessell, brought it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the LORD. And from the ryuer of Thia we brake vp the twelue daye of the fyrst moneth, tyl we came to Jerusalem. And when ỳ thyrde daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the LORDE the fourth daye vnto Marimoth, the soune of Joz the preast, and wyth hym was Eleazar the sõne of Phineas, and wyth them were Josabdus the sonnes of Jasuet: Medias, and the sõne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites, to the nomber & to the weyght: and ỳ weyght of them was writtẽ vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuite, they offered sacrifice vnto ỳ LORDE the GOD of Israel: euen twelue orẽ for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes. lxxij. shepe. xij. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thaũcke offering, al to the sacrifice of the LORD. And the kinges commission deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kynge, and to the vnder shreues in Celocyria, and Phenices.

1.Esdr.9.d. *Nowe when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacion of Israel, the princes, the preastes and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande haue not put a waye theyre vnclenesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, from the Moabites, Egyptians, & Idumites. For both they and theyr sõnes haue mingled them selues with the daughters of them, and the holy seede is mixte wyth the outlandysshe Heathẽ and synce the begining of theyr raygne haue the rulers and heades ben partakers of theyr wikednes.

1.Esdr.9.d. *As sone as I had herde these thynges, immediatly I rent my holye garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my heade and my beарde, and sate me downe sorofull and heuy. So al they ỳ were moued thorowe the wrohe of the GOD of Israel, came vnto me, and sat styl: full of heuynes, vntyl the eueuynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp frõ fastyng, hauing rent clothes and the holy garmẽte, kneled downe vpon my knees, held vp my handes vnto ỳ LORD, & sayde: O LORD I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for oure sinnes are become many vpõ our heades: and our wyckednesses are exalte vnto the heuen, for synce the tyme of oure fathers, we are in greate sinne vnto thys daye. And for ỳ synnes of vs and oure fathers, we with our brethrẽ and wyth our preastes haue ben deliuered vnto the kinges of ỳ erath: into the swerd and into captiuite and became a spoyle wyth cõfusion and shame vnto thys day. And nowe O LORDE GOD, howe greate is thy mercye that we haue gotten of the, in that thou hast lefte vs a name and aroot in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the LORDE oure GOD, and haste geuen vs meate at all tymes of oure ministracio. And whẽ we were in captiuitie we were not forsaken of the Lorde our GOD, but he made the kynges of Persia gratious, & fauorable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs vitayles, and meate: yee, and leaue to buylde vp the temple of our Lord GOD agayne, to repaire the wasted places of Sion: & to dwel in Jewrye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lorde what shal we saie, hauynge all these thinges in possession? For we haue broken thy commaundemẽtes: which thou gauest vnto vs bythy handes of thy seruaũtes the prophetes: saying. The land that ye go vnto, and that is geuen you for an herytage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclenesse & filthynesse of the Heathen and with their abominacion haue they poluted it altogether. Therfore shal ye not ioyne youre daughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor marye youre sõnes vnto theyr daughters. Moreouer ye shal not seke to make peace wyth them that ye maye encrese, and eat the best in the land, and that ye maie deuide the enheritaũce of the lãd vnto youre chyldrẽ for euer more. As for ỳ thing that nowe happened vnto vs, it cõmeth all for our wycked worckes and greate sinnes iet hast thou geuen vs such a roote that we are come agayne into oure lande, and we are so wyked that we haue broken thy statutes & commaundementes agayne: and myngled oure selues with the vnclenes of the outlandish Heathen.

O Lor-

O LORD, art thou angry with vs: wilte thou roote vs cleane out ẏ our roote & name remayne nomore: O LORD: GOD of Israel thou art true, for our rote ēdureth yet vnto this pręsēt day. And behold, now are we before thē in oure sines, nowe cā we not stāde before the in thē.

*And when Esdras wyth his prayer 10.c. hadde knowledged the synne, wepinge and lying flat vpon the ground before the tēple, there gathered vnto hym frō Jerusalem agreate multitude of men and wemen, of yong men, and maydēs for there was a very great weppnge, and mournynge in the congregacion. So when Jechonias the sonne of Jehely one of the childzen of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Esdras: we haue synned against ẏ LORDE, because we haue maryed outlandische wemen of the Heathē Now art thou ouer all Israel. We wil sware an oth therefore vnto the LORDE that we shal put away all our wyues whych we haue taken of the Heathen, wyth theyr chyldrē, lyke as it is appointed the by our fore elders. Stād vp thē open thou it playnli vnto vs, accordīg to the lawe of the LORD, for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we wyl helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers, of the prcastes, and of the Leuites and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

The ix. Chapter

¶ After Esdras had red the lawe, the people put a waye theyr straunge wyues, and then returned euery man merelye vnto his owne dwellinge.

I Then Esdras stode vp from the courte of the temple wythout, and went into the chamber of Jonathas the sonne of Nabasus, and remayned there & dyd eat no meat, nor dronk drynke: for the multide of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamation in all Jewry and at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem oute of captiuitie, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or thre daies (accordynge to the iudgemente of the old Lordes of the councel) his goodes shuld be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacion of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of ẏ tribe of Juda & Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twētie daye of the ix. moneth. And the whole multitude sat trymblynge in the courte of the temple for it was wynter. So Esdras rose vp, and sayde vnto them, ye haue done vnryghtously in ẏ ye haue taken outlandysh wyues to maryage, & so to encrease the sinnes of Israel. And nowe knowledge the same, & geue prayse vnto the LORDE GOD of our fathers, & perfourme hys wyl, departinge from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandysh wyues. Then cryed ẏ hole multitude wyth a loud voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spokē, so wil we do: but forsomuche as ẏ people are many, and the wynter heare, we maye not stonde without the house: Agayne this worke ys not a thyng that cā be fynished in a day or two. For we be many ẏ haue sinned in these thiges. Ordayne therfore ẏ the rulers of the multitude, & they ẏ dwel wt vs, and as many as haue outlandysche wyues that ẏ prestes also and iuges of euery place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage ẏ wrath of the LORDE in thys busines.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezely, & Ezias & Thecā receaued the charge of this matter, & Leius, & Bozozanus and Sabatheus helped thē thereto. After thys all they stode vp ẏ were come oute of captiuite. And Esdras the preast chose vnto hym the principall men from among the fathers accordyng to theyr names, & in ẏ newe mone of ẏ. i. moneth they sat together, to examine this matter And so ẏ matter was a determinynge (concerninge the men that had outlandysche wyues) vntil the newe mone of the first moneth. And of the prestes that had mixte them selues wyth outlandische wyues there were foūd. * Of the sonnes of Jesu, the sonnes of Josedec, and hys brethren Mazeas, Eleazer, Joryb, & Joadeus, whych offered them selues to put a waye theyr wyues and to offer a rame for their ignorance 1.Esd.10.f.

¶ The people is reproued for theyr vnfaythfulnes God wyll fynde another people if these wyll not be reformed.

*And the worde of the LORD came vnto me sayinge: go thy way and shewe my people their synful dedes, and theyr chyldren theyr wyckednesses, whych they haue done agaynste me, ꝑ they may tell theyr chyldres childrē ꝑ same: for the synnes of theyr fathers are increasede in thē. And why: they haue forgotten me, and haue ofred vnto straūge gods. Am not I euen he ꝑ broughte thē out of ꝑ lande of Egypte from ꝑ house of bōdage: But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, & dispised my cōsels. It is a people wythout learnyng & nourtoure. Howe longe shall I forbeare thē vnto whōe I haue done so moche good: *Manye kynges haue I destroyed for theyr sakes. & Pharao with hys seruaūtes & al his powre haue I smytten downe & slayne: Al ꝑ nations haue I destroyed & rooted out before them: & in the Caste haue I broughte two landes and people to naught, euen Tyre & Sidon, & haue slayne al theyr enemies. Speake thow therfore vnto thē, sayinge: Thus sayeth the LORD: *I led you thorowe the see, & haue geuen you sure stretes, sonce the beginnynge. & I gaue you Moses to be youre captayne, & Aaron to be ꝑ Preaste: *I gaue you lyghte in a pyller of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the almyghtye LORD: I gaue you quayles to eate and tentes for youre succoure Neuertheles ye murmered, & ascribed not ꝑ victorie of your enemies vnto my name: yee, this same day do ye yet murmure. Where are the benefites that I haue done for you: When ye were hongrye in ꝑ wyldernesse, *did ye not cry vnto me: Why, haste thou broughte vs into thys wyldernes to kyll vs: It had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egyptians, then to dye in thys wildernesse. Thus sayeth the Almyghtie LORD: haue I not prayed you, as a father hys sonnes, as a mother her doughters, & as a nurse her yong babes ꝑ ye wolde be my people, & I shuld be youre GOD: ꝑ ye wold be my chyldren, & I shulde be youre owne father: *I gathered you together as an Henne gathereth her chekens vnder her wynges. ¶ The Synagog fyndeth faute wyth her owne chyldren. The gentyles are called.

As for me, O father, I call vpon ꝑ for a witnes ouer the mother of these children which wolde not kepe my couenaunt, ꝑ thou bryngest them to confusion, and theyr mother to a spoyle ꝑ she bear nomore. Let theyr names be scattered abroad amonge the Heathē. Let them be put out of ꝑ earthe, for they haue thoughte scorne of my couenaunte.

Thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE vnto Esdras: tell my people, ꝑ I wyl geue thē ꝑ the kyngedome of Jerusalē, which I wolde haue geuē vnto Israel. Theyr glorie also wil I take vnto me, & geue thē ꝑ euerlastig tabernacles, whyche I had prepared for those.

The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge oyntmente: they shal nether labour nor be wery. Go ye youre waye, and ye shal receaue it. Praye for youre selues a fewe daies, that they B

Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche. Take heauen and earth to wytnes, for I haue brokē the euel in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayeth the LORDE. Mother embrace thy chyldrē, and bryngе them vp wyth gladnesse: make theyr fete as faste as a piller, for I haue chosen the sayeth the LORDE.

And those that be dead wyll I rayse vp agayne from theyr places, & bryngе them oute of ꝑ graues, for I haue knowne my name in in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the childrē for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruauntes Esay & Jeremy, after whose counsel I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees wᵗ diuers frutes & as many welles flowinge with mylke & honye, and seuen mountaynes, where vpō there growe Roses & Lilies, wherin I wyl fyll my chyldren wyth ioye. Execute iustice for the wyddowe: be iudge for the fatherles: geue to the poore: defend ꝑ comfortlesse: cloth the naked: heale ꝑ wounded & sicke, laugh not a lame man to scorne: defende the crepell, & let the blynd come into ꝑ lyghte of my clearnes: * where so euer thou findest Tobit.

For when the daye of trouble & heuynes cōmeth, other shall wepe & be sorowefull, but thou shalte be mery & plenteous. The Heathen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothig agaynste the, sayeth ꝑ LORD. My hādes shal couer ꝓ, so that thy chyldren shall not se ꝓ fyre euerlastyng. Be ioyful O thou mother with thy chyldrē, for I wyl deliuer the, sayth ꝓ LORD. Remember thy deade chyldren, for I shal bringe thē out of the earth, & shewe mercy vnto thē: for I am merciful, sayeth ꝓ LORD Almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren, vntyl I come & shewe mercye vnto thē, for my welles runne ouer, & my grace shal not fayle.

I Esdras receaued a charge of the LORDE vpon ꝓ mounte Oreb, ꝓ I shulde go vnto Israel. But whē I came vnto Israel they set me at naughte, & dispised the cōmaundemente of ꝓ LORDE And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye Heathen that heare & vnderstande. Loke for youre reparde, he shal geue you euerlastynge reste, for he is nyat hande ꝓ shal come in the ende of the worlde: Beredy to the rewarde of ꝓ kyngdome, for ꝓ euerlastyuge lyghte shall shyne vpō you fore euermore. Flie the shadowe of thys worlde, receaue the ioyfullnes of youre glorye, I testifie my sauioure openly: O receaue the gyfte that is geuen you, and be glad, geuynge thankes vnto hym, that hathe called you to the heauenlye kyngedome.

Aryse vp, and stande faste: beholde ꝓ nombre of those that be sealed in ꝓ feast of the LORDE, whyche are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, & haue receaued glorious garmētes of ꝓ LORDE. Take thy nombre O Sion, & shut vp the purified, which haue fulfilled ꝓ lawe of the LORD. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longest for, is fulfylled: beseche the powre of the LORD, that ꝓ people whiche haue bene called from ꝓ begynninge, maye be halowed.

Psal. 7.6. Tobie.

*I Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Syon a great people, whome I coulde not nombre, and they al praysed ꝓ LORDE with songes of thanckes geuynge. And in the middest of them there was a pōge man of an hye stature, more excellent thē all they, & vpon euery one of theyr heades he set garlādes, and was euer higher and hygher, which I meruyled at greatlye. So I asked the angel, and sayde: Syr, what are these? He aunswered & sayde vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortal clothynge, and put on the immortal, and haue testified and knowleged the name of GOD Nowe are they crowned, and receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angel: what pōge persone is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the Palmes in theyr handes? So he answered, & sayde vnto me: it is the sonne of GOD, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to commend them, that stode so stysly for the name of ꝓ LORD. And so the angel sayd vnto me: Go thy way, and tell my people, what maner of thynges: and howe greate wonders of the LORDE thy GOD, thou haste sene.

The iij. Chapter.

The wonderous worckes whiche God dyd for the people. Esdras marueleth that God suffereth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are synners also.

IN the thyrtye yeare of the fall of the citie, I was at Babylon and laye troubled vpō my bed, & my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacion of Sion, and the plenteous wealth of thē that dweite at Babylon, and my spirite was sore moued, so that I begane to speake fearful wordes to ꝓ most hyest, and sayde O LORDE LORDE thou spakest at ꝓ begynning when thou plātest the earth (& that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the ople. for when thou hadst geuen to Adam (wiche was a creature of thy one handes) an vnsensible bodi, and haste brethed in hym ꝓ breth of lyfe ād so he lyued before the, thou leddest hym into Paradise, which gardē of pleasure thy tryghte hand had planted, or euer ꝓ *earth was made. And vnto hi thou gauest cōmaūdement to loue thy waye which he trāsgressed, & imediatlye thou appointedst death in hi, & in hys generacions. Of hi came nacions, tribes, people, & kynredes, oute of nōbre. * And euery people walcked after theyr owne wyll, & dyd nyce thiges before ꝓ: & as for thy cōmaūdemētes they dispised thē.

I can not perceaue howe thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon better, then they of Syon? Or is there anye other people, þ knoweth the, saue þ people of Israel? Or what generation hath so beleued thy couenaūtes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appereth not, & theyr labour hath no frute. Weye thou therfore our wyckednesse nowe in þ balaunce, & theyrs also that dwel in þ worlde, and so shall thy name be no where foūde but in Israel? Or where is there a people vpon earthe, þ hath not synned before þ? Or what people hathe so kepte thy cōmaūdementes? Thou shalte finde þ Israel by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ The Angel reproueth Esdras, because he seued to enter into the profunde iudgementes of God.

AND þ Angell þ was sent vn I to me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me aunswere, & sayd: thy hert hath taken to muche vpō it in this worlde, & thou thinkest to comprehende þ waye of þ hyeste. Then sayde I: yee, my LORDE. And he aunswered me, & sayd: I am sente to shewe þ thre wayes, & to set forth þ similitudes before þ: where of yf thou canste declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, þ thou desirest to se: And I shall shewe the from whence þ wycked herte cōmeth. And I sayde: Tell on my LORDE. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me þ blaste of þ wynde, or call me

me agayne the daye that is paste. Thē aunswered I & sayde: What man bozne is hable to do that: why requirest thou suche of me: And he sayd vnto me: yf I shuld aske ꝑ howe depe dwellynges are in the see: Or howe great waterspzynges are vpon the firmamēte: Oz howe greate waterspzynges are in ꝑ begynnynge of the depe: Oz whych are ꝑ out goynges of Paradyse: Parauenture thou woldeste saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe oz hell, neyther dyd I euer clyme vp to heauē. Neuertheiesse nowe haue I asked ꝑ but onely of fyze, and wynde, and of the day, where thozowe thou haste trauayled, and frome the whych thou canst not be seperated: and yet canst thou geue me none aunswere of them.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, & suche as are growen vp with the, cāst thou not know: howe should thy vessel thē be hable to compze hende the waye of the heyest, and nowe outewardely in ꝑ cozzupte wozlde, to vnderstande the cozrupcion that is euident in my syghte: Then sayde I vnto him: It were better ꝑ we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wickednes, and to suffre, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me & sayde: I wente
B in a wood, and * the trees toke such a deuice, and sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst the see, that it maye departe a waye befoze vs, & that we maye make vs yet moze woddes.

The floudes of ꝑ see also in lyke maner toke thys deuice, & sayd: Come let vs go vp, and fyght agaynste the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and deuice of the wood was but vayne & nothyng wozth, foz the fyze came and cōsumed the woode: The thoughte of the floudes of the see: came lykewyse to noughte also, foz the lāde stode vp and stopped them.

yf thou were iudge nowe betwirt these two whō woldest thou iustifie, oz whō woldest thou condēpne: I answered & sayd: Verely it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuysed. Foz the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, and the see also hath hys place to beare hys floudes. Thē answered he me, & sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe: Foz lyke as ꝑ grounde is geuē vnto ꝑ wood & the see to his floudes, euen so *they ꝑ dwell vpon earthe maye vnderstande nothing, but ꝑ whiche is vpon earth: & he ꝑ dwelleth a boue the heuens, maye onlye vnderstand ꝑ thynges ꝑ are aboue the heuēs. Then answered I, & sayd: I beseech ꝑ, O LORD let me haue vnderstādig: foz it was not my mīn to be curious of thy hye thinges, but of such as we dayly medle withal, namely wherfore ꝑ Israel is blasphemed of ꝑ Heathē, & foz what cause the people (whō thou haste euer loued) is geuē ouer, to be punished of vngodly nacions: & why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to nought and the wrytten couenauntes come to none effecte, and passe awaye out of the wozlde as the gresshoppers, and oure life is a very feare, and we are not wozthye to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto hys name, whyche is called vpon ouer vs: Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, & sayde: The C moze thou searchest, ꝑ moze thou shalt maruell, foz ꝑ wozld hasteth fast to passe away, & cannot cōprehende the thynges that are promised foz ꝑ ryghteous in tyme to come: foz * thys wozlde is 1.Ioan.5.b. full of vnryghteousnes and weakenes.

But as concernynge ꝑ thynges whereof thou askeste me, I wyll tell ꝑ. The euell is sowen, but the destruccion thereof is not yet come. yf the euell nowe, that is sowē, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euell is sowen, passe not away, then cannot the thynge come that is sowen with good. Foz the cozne of euell sede hath bene sowen in the hert of man from ꝑ beginnyng, & howe muche vngodlynes hath be brought vp vnto thys tyme: & howe much shall he yet bringe forth, vntyl he come into the barne.

Pondze now by thy selfe whē ꝑ cozne of euel sede is cut downe, howe greate a barne shal it fyll: I answered & sayde: Howe & when shall these thinges come to passe: Wherfoze are our yeres few & euel: And he answered me, saing: Haste not thou to muche vpon ꝑ hyest, foz thy hastynes to be aboue him, is but vaine: thou makest to moche a do. Dyd not ꝑ soules also of ꝑ ryghteous aske questiō of these thynges in their holynesse, sayinge: *Howe lōge shal I hoope of thys Apoc.6.b fashion: when commeth ꝑ frute of my barne and my rewarde: And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangel gaue them aunswere, & sayde: Euen when the nombre of the seedes is fylled in you, for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure and nombre hath he measured the time, and moueth it not vntill ꝑ same measure be fulfylled. Thē aūswered J & sayde, O LORDE LORDE, now are we ful of synne, & for oure sake paraduēture it is not, ꝑ the barne of ꝑ ryghteous shal not be fylled, but because of ꝑ synne of them ꝑ dwell vpō earth.

So he aunswered me & sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chyld, & aske of her, whē she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her chylded may kepe the byrth aday longer wythin her. Then sayde J: No LORDE that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell ꝑ secret places of soules are lyke the preuye chambre of a womon that trauayleth, and maketh haste, whē the tyme and necessite of the byrth is at hand: Euen so doth she haste to deliuer it that is committed vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnynge. Then aunswered J, & sayde: yf J haue foūde grace in thy sighte: & if it be possible, or yf J be mete therfore, shewe me thē, whether there be mo to come, then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, J knowe, but what is for to come, J knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stād vp vpō the right syde, & J shal expounde ꝑ similitude vnto ꝑ. So J stode & beholde an whote burnynge ouen wēt ouer before me: & it happened ꝑ when ꝑ flame was gone by, the smoke had ꝑ vpperhande, After thys, there wēt ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much raine w a storme & ꝑ when stormy rayne was past ꝑ dropes remained styl. Thē sayde he vnto me: lyke as ꝑ rayne is more thē ꝑ droppes, & as fyer exceadet ꝑ smoke, euen so the thinges ꝑ are past hath the vpper hand. Then went ꝑ droppes & ꝑ smoke aboue: & J prayde & sayde: maye J lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll ꝑ tyme: Or what shal happē in those dayes: He aunswered me, & sayde: As for ꝑ tokens wherof thou askest me, J maye tell the a parte: but as touchige thy lyfe, J maye not shewe the, for J am not sent therfore.

The v. Chapter.

¶ Esdras and the Angell commen together.

NEuertheleſſe, as concernige ꝑ tokens, marcke thys: Beholde ꝑ dayes shal come that they whiche dwel vpō earth, shalbe takē in a greate nōbre, & ꝑ waye of ꝑ truthe shalbe hyd, & the lande shalbe barre frō sayth: but * iniquitie shal haue ꝑ vpper hād, like as thou hast sene nowe, & as thou hast hearde tōge ago. And ꝑ lande ꝑ thou seyste nowe to haue rule, shalte thou shortlye se waste. But yf GOD graūt ꝑ to lyue, thou shalt se after ꝑ thyrde trōpet ꝑ the sūne shal sodēly shine agayne in the nyght, & ꝑ mone iij times in ꝑ daye, & bloude shall drop out of the wood, & ꝑ stone shal geue hys voyce, & ꝑ people shalbe vnquyet: & euē he shal rule, whōe they hope not ꝑ dwel vpō earth, and the soules shal flyt, and the Sodomitish see shal cast out his fishe, and make a noyse in the nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof. Matt. 24

There shalbe a cōfusion also in many places, & ꝑ fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, & ꝑ wyld beastes shal go theyr way & mōsterous wemē shal beare mōstres, & salte waters shalbe founde in ꝑ swete: one frende shall fyght agaynst another: thē shal wyt & vnderstādyng be hyd & put aside into theyr secret places, & shalbe sought of many, & yet not be found: thē shal vnryghteousnes & volupteousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shal aske another, & saye: Is righteousnes gone thorowe ꝑ: And it shal saye: Noo. At ꝑ same time shal mē hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal labour, but theyr waies shal not prosper

To shewe ꝑ such tokēs J haue leue & yf thou wylt praye agayne, & wepe as nowe, & faste seuē dayes, thou shalt here yet greater thiges. Then J awaked, & a fearfulnes wēt thorowe al my bodie, & my mide was feble & careful, so ꝑ J almost sowned wythall. So ꝑ Angel ꝑ was come to talke w me, holde me, cōforted me, & set me vp vpō my fete

And in the secōde nyght it happened, that Salathyel the captayne of ꝑ people came vnto me, sayinge: Where hast thou ben: & why is thy countinaunce so heuy: knowest thou not that Israel is committed vnto the in ꝑ lande

of theyr

of theyr captiuitie: Up then and eate, & forsake vs not, as the sheperde that leaueth his flocke in ỳ handes of ỳ wicked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy wayes from me & come not ny me: and he herde it, & as I sayde, so went he his waye fro me. And I fasted seuē dayes mournynge & weppynge, lyke as Uryell ỳ Angel commaunded me. And after seuē daies it happened ỳ the thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me agayne, & my soule receaued ỳ spirite of vnderstandynge, and I began to talke with the moost Hyghest agayne & sayde: O LORDE LORDE, of euerie woode of ỳ earth & of al ỳ trees therof, thou haste chosen ỳ one only vineyarde: and of al lādes of ỳ whole worlde, thou hast chosen ỳ one pit, & of floures of ỳ grounde, thou hast chosē ỳ one lylye: and of al the depthes of the see: thou haste fylled ỳ one ryuer: & of al buylded cities thou haste halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: & of al ỳ soules ỳ are created, thou hast named the one doue, & of al the cattel ỳ are made thou hast prouided ỳ one shepe: & amōge al the multitude of folkes: thou haste gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And nowe, O LORD. why hast thou geuē thys one people ouer into manye: And vpō thy owne roote thou haste prepared other, and why hast thou scatered thy oūe onely people amōgie many whyche treade them downe: yer, which haue euer wythstāde thy promises, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And thoughe thou were enemie vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punish thē wyth thine owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these wordes, the Angel ỳ came to me the nyght afore, was sente vnto me, & sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I saye, & I shal tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my LORDE. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou arte sore vered and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made them? And I sayde: No LORD: but of very grefe and compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost Hyghest, and to seke out parte of hys iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me, that thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore LORD? Where vnto was I borne thē: or why was not mi mothers childebed then my graue? So had I not sene ỳ miserie and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Nombre the thynges ỳ are not yet come: gather me together the droppes that are scatered abrode: make me ỳ floures grene agayne, that are wythered: open me ỳ thyng that is closed, and bryng me forth the windes, that are shut vp: shewe me the image of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynge, ỳ thou laboreste to knowe. And I sayde: O LORDE LORDE, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not hys dwellynge with mē. As for me, I am vnwyse, howe maye I then speake of these thynges whereof thou askest me?

Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thinges ỳ I haue spokē of, euē so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement: or in the ende, the loue that I haue promised vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde, O LORDE yet arte thou nye vnto them ỳ haue no ende: and what shall they doo ỳ haue ben before me, or we that be nowe, or they ỳ shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgemente vnto a ryngc. Lyke as there is no slackenesse of the laste, euen so is there no swiftenesse of the fyrste. So I aunswered and sayde: couldeste thou not make those ỳ haue ben made, and be nowe, and that are for to come at once, ỳ thou myghtest shewe thy iudgemente the sooner? Then aunswered he me, & sayde: The creature maye not hasten a doue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou liuig maker, hast made the creature lyuyng at once, and the creature bare it: euē so myghte it nowe also beare thē ỳ be present at once. And he sayd vnto me: Aske ỳ childede of a womā, & say vnto her: yf thu bringest forthe childrē, why doest thou it not together, but one after another: Praye her therfore to brige forth x. children at once. And I sayde she cannot, but must do it one after another. Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earth: for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yōge chylde may not bryngе forth the thynges that be longe to the aged: euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde whych I made.

And I asked, & sayde: Seynge thou hast nowe geuē me awaye, I wyl speake before the: for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet yōge, & nowe she draweth ny vnto age. He aunswered me & sayde: Aske a womā ꝑ beareth chyldren, & she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whome thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke those ꝑ were before ꝑ: but lesse of stature: And she shal aunswere ꝑ: They ꝑ be borne in the youth of strength, are of one fashion, & they that are borne in ꝑ tyme of age, (when ꝑ chyldbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consider nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures whych nowe begin to be olde, and haue passed ouer ꝑ strengthe of youthe. Thē sayde I: LORDE I beseche the, yf I haue funde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou vyset thy creature:

The vj. Chapter.

¶ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, and geueth hym aunswere to hys questions.

AND he sayde vnto me: In the beginnynge when ꝑ grounde was made, before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blewe, before it thondred and lightened, or euer the fundations of Paradyse were layd, before the fayre floures were sene or euer the moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, or euer the hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of ꝑ firmamēt were named, or euer ꝑ chymneis in Syō were hote, or thes ꝑsent yeares were sought out, & or euer ꝑ mu̇cions of them that nowe sinne, were put aside, before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consider & ponder al these thynges, & all they were made thorowe me, & thorowe none other: by me also they be ended, & by none other. Then answered I, and sayde: whych shalbe the parting asunder of the tymes? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrste, and the beginnynge of it ꝑ foloweth And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac (when Jacob and Esau were borne of hym) Jacobs hāde helde fyrste the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacobe is the beginninge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwyxt the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then & sayd: O LORDE LORDE, yf I haue funde fauoure in thy syght, I beseech the shewe thy seruaunte the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewedst me parte the last nyghte So he answered and sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & sounde. There shal come a greate mocion, but the place wher thou standest shall not be moued And therfore whē thou hearest the wordes be not afrayed, for of the ende shal the worde and fundacion of the earth be vnderstande. And why: ꝑ worde therof trēbleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at ꝑ end. And it happened, that when I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete: and herkened. And beholde, there was a voyce ꝑ spake & the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Behold, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to draweny, and to vyset them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquisicion of them, what they be that haue burnt equite wyth vnryghteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shalbe fulfilled: and when the worlde, that shal vanishe away shalbe ouerseled, then wil I do these tokēs.

The bookes shalbe opened before the firmament, & they shall seall together, and the chyldren of a yeare olde shall speake wyth theyr voyces: the wemen with chylde shal brynge forth vntymely, chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde: and they shall lyue, and berayed vp: and sodenly shall the sowen places appere as the vnsowen, the full store houses shal sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompete shall geue a sounde, whyche whē euerye man heareth, they shalbe hastely afrayde. * At that tyme shall frendes fyghte one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shal stande in feare wyth them.

The springes of the wells shal stand styl,and in.iij.houres they shal not renne.Whosouer remayneth from al these thinges that I haue tolde ỳ:shal escape and se my saluacion,& the ende of youre worlde. And the men that haue receaned,shal see it,they that haue not tasted death from theyr byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaunged,and turned to another meanyng, for euel shalbe put out:& dysceate shalbe quenched. As for fayth, it shall florish, corruption shalbe ouer come, and ỳ truth, which hath bene so lõg with out frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talcked wt me, that I loked demuerly vpõ him before whom I stode,& these wordes saide he vnto me: I am come to shewe ỳ,ỳ time of ỳ night for to come.

¶ yf thou wylte prayе yet moare,& faste seuen dayes agayne, I shal tell the moare thynges, & greater then before:for thy voyce is harde before ỳ Hyghest: for why: the myghtye hath sene thy ryghteous dealynge,he hathe sene also thy castitie, whych thou hast had euer sence thy youthe:and therfore hathe he sente me to shewe the all these thynges, and to saye vnto ỳ.Be of good cõforte, & feare not,& haste not wt the tymes ỳ are paste,to thincke vaine thynges,and make not haste of the latter tymes.

And yt happened after thys, that I wepte agayne,& fasted seuẽ dayes in lyke maner, ỳ I myght fulfyl ỳ thre wekes which he tolde me. In ỳ.viii. nyght was my hert vered with in me agayne. And I began to speake before ỳ Hyest: for my spirite was greatly set on fyer, & my soule was in distresse : & I sayde: O LORD thou spakest vnto thy creature from ỳ beginnyng(euẽ ỳ first daye)& saydst:* Let Heauen and earth be made,and thy word was a perfect worke Gen.1.d.

And then was there ỳ spirite,and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde,& silence:there was no mans voyce as from the . Then commaundest thou a sayre lyghte to come forth oute of thy treasures,that thy worke mighte appeare and be sene.

Upon the second day thou madest the spirite of ỳ firmamente,and commaundest it to part a sunder,& to make a diuision betwyxt ỳ waters, ỳ the one parte myght remayne aboue,& ỳ other beneth.Upon ỳ iii day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the. vij. part of the earth. vj. partes hast thou dried vp and kepte them, to thyntente that men moghte sow & occupy husbandry therin. As sone as thy word went forth, ỳ worcke was made. For immediatly there was great & innumerable frute & many diuerse pleasures & desires of temptacion: floures of changeable coloure and smell, and thys was done the.iij.daye.

Upon ỳ.iiij.daye thou commaudest that the sune shulde geue hys shyne, & the moone her lyght:the starres dydst thou set in ordre & gauest thẽ acharge, to do seruice euen vnto man ỳ was for to be made. Upon the.v. day thou saydst vnto the.vij.parte*(wher ỳ waters were gathered) ỳ they shulde brig forth diuers beastes, foules & fysches. And so it came to passe, that the dome waters & without soule,brought forth liuyng beastes at the commaundemẽt of GOD. that all people mighte prayse thy wonderouse worckes. Then dydst thou preserue two soulles ỳ onne thou caldst Enoch:and the other Leuiathã. & dydst separate the one from the other: for ỳ vij.parte(namelye where ỳ water was gathered together) myght not hold the both. Unto Enoch thou gauest one part,which was dryed vp ỳ iij.daye, ỳ he shuld dwell in ỳ same parte,wherin are,a.M. hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest ỳvii.parte,namely ỳ moist: & hast kept hym to deuore what thou wylt and when. Upon the. vj.day thou gauest commaundemẽt vnto the earth, that before ỳ,it shuld bryng forth beastes, cattell,and al ỳ crepe:and (besyds thys) Adam also, whome thou madst LORD of al thy creatures. Of hym come we al,& the people also whome thou haste chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myghte shewe howe ỳ the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people whyche also come of Adam thou haste sayde that they are nothynge, but be lyke a spyttle,and hast lykened the abundaunce of them vnto a drop ỳ falleth from the rose of ỳ house.

And nowe, O LORDE: the Heathen whiche haue euer ben reputed as nothing, haue be gon to be LORDE ouer vs, & to deuour vs:but we thy people whome thou haste called ỳ fyrste borne, thy only begotten,& thy feruent louer)

*The Angel shweth Esdras many thyngs to come.

AND it happened after that I had spoken oute these

And I sayde speake on LORD my GOD Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a wyde place that it myghte be dea pe and greate, but the entraunce is na rowe and small lyke a riuer.

For who wolde go into the see, to loo ke vpon it and to rule it: yf he went not thorowe ỹ narowe, howe myghte he co me into the brode:

Item an other: A citie is buylded and set vpon a broade felde, and is full of al goodnesse the entraunce is narrowe and sodayne lyke as yf there were a fy re at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at the lefte, and as it were oneli one strait pathe betwirte them both, so sma le, ỹ there coulde but one man go there.

yf thys citie nowe were geuen vnto an heyre, and he neuer wente thorowe the parlous waye, howe wold he recea ue his inheritaunce. And I sayde: It is so LORDE. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porciō. And why: for thez sakes haue I made the wozlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of ỹ wozlde made narowe, full of sozowe & trauayle. They are but fewe and euell, full of parelles and laboure. For the en traunces of the foze wozld were wyde & sure, and brought immortall fruyte.

yf they nowe whyche are entred into thys wozld, maye not cōprehend these strayt and vayne thynges, much lesse may they comprehend and vnderstand ỹ secret thiges. Why dysquieteſt thou thy selfe then, seing thou arte but a coz ruptible man: And what woldest thou knowe where as thou art but moztall:
And why hast thou not, receaued into thyne herte the thynge ỹ is foz to come, but that is present.

Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, * B
thou haste ordyned in thy lawe, that ỹ Deu. 14. ryghteous shulde inheret these thyn-ges, but that the vnfayethfull and vngodlye shulde perishe. Neuertheleſſe, the ryghteous shall suffer the strayte and hope foz ỹ wide: foz they that haue lyued vngodlye & hath suffered ỹ stra yte, shal not see the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There ys no iudge aboue GOD, and none that hath se the lawe of GOD ỹ is set before them.

foz GOD hath geuē strayt commaūdem what they do, and howe they shulde ly-not be punished.

Neuertheleſſe, they were not obedient vnto hym. but spake against hym: Ima gined vayne thynges: and purposed to sinne: and saide moreouer, ỹ there was no GOD, and that GOD regarded it not Hys waies haue thei not knowen, his lawe haue they dispised, and denied his promises: in hys statutes and ordinances haue they not ben faythfull and ste adfast, and hathe not perfourmed hys worꝛkes.

And therfore Esdras: vnto the full, plentie, and to the ēptie, emptinesse. Be holde, the tyme shall come, that these to kens whych I haue told the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shal apere, and ỹ earth that nowe passeth awaye, shalbe shewed: and whosoeuer is deliuered from ỹ eueles shall see my wōders, For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared with those that be with hym, and they that remayne shalbe mery in fouer hun dred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my son ne Christ, dye, and all men that haue ly fe: and the wozlde shalbe turned into ỹ olde silence seuen dayes, lyke as in the foze iudgementes, so that no mā shall remayne. And after seuen dayes, the wozlde that yet awaked not, shalbe rai sed vp, and shal dye corꝛupt. And the earth, shal restoze those that haue slept in her: and so shall the dust, those, that dwell in silence, and the secret places shall deliuer those that be commytted vnto them.

And

And the mooſt hyghest ſhalbe openly declared vpon the ſeate of Judgemente, and all miſerie ſhall vanyſh awaye and longe ſufferynge ſhalbe gathered together. But the Judgement ſhall cõtinue, the truth ſhall remayne, and fayth ſhal ware ſtrong, & worke ſhal folowe, & reward ſhalbe ſhewen: & ryghteouſnes ſhall wache, and the vnryghteouſnes ſhall beare no rule.

Then ſayde I.* Abraham prayed fyrſt for the Sodomites, ‡ & Moſes for ſathers that ſynned in ſ wyldeꝛneſſe, and he that came after hym for Iſrael, in ſ tyme of Achas, and Samuel: and* Dauid for ſ deſtruction ‡ & Salomon for them that came into the ſanctuarie *‡ Helias for thoſe that receaued rayne, and for ſ dead ſ he myghte lyue, ād Ezechias, for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuerſe other in lyke maner, whych haue prayed for many.

Euẽ ſo nowe, ſeyng ſ corrupt is growẽ vp, & wyckednes increaſed, and the ryghteous haue prayed for ſ vngodly, wherfore ſhall it not be ſo nowe alſo?

He annſwered me, and ſayd: Thys preſent worlde is not the ende, there remayneth muche honure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But ſ daye of dome ſhall be ſ ende of thys tyme, and ſ begynnyng of the immortalitie for to come, wherin all corrupcion is vaniſhed, all voluptouſnes is lowſed all miſbeleue taken away, righteouſnes growen, & ſ verite ſprong vp. Thẽ ſhal no man be able to ſaue hym that is deſtroyed, nor oppreſſe hym ſ hath gotten ſ victorie. I aunſwered then, & ſayde: This is mi firſt and laſt ſaying: ſ it had bene better, not to haue geuẽ the earth vnto Adam, or els when it was geuen him, to kepte him ſ he ſhulde not ſynne For what profyt is it for men nowe in thys preſente tyme, to lyue in heuineſſe and after death to loke for puniſhemente: O thou Adam, what haſte thou done: For though it was thou that ſined, thou art not fallen alone, but we all ſ come of the. For what profyt is it vn, to vs, yf there be promiſed an immortall tyme: where as we meddle wyth deadly workes: And ſ there is promiſed vs an euerlaſting hope, where as oure ſelues are euell and vaine, & that there are layde vp for vs dwellynges of helthe and fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, and that the worſhipe of the Hyeſt is kepte to defende them wyche haue led a paciente lyfe, where as we haue walked in ſ moſte wicked wayes of all: And that there ſhalbe ſhewed a Paradiſe, whoſe fruite indureth for euer, wherein is fredome and medicine, where as we ſhall not goo in, for we haue walcked in vnpleaſaunte places: And that the faces of them whych haue abſtayned, ſhall ſhyne aboue the ſtarres, where as oure faces ſhall be blacke and darke: For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteouſly, we conſidred not, that we ſhulde ſuffre deathe.

D Then aunſwered he me, and ſayde: Thys is the conſideration and thoughte of the battayle, whyche man hathe vpon earthe: that yf he be ouer come, he ſhall ſuffre as thou haſte ſayde. But yf he get the victorie, he ſhall receaue the thynge that I ſaye. For thys is the lyfe, whereof Moſes ſpake vnto the people whyl he lyued, ſayinge: * Chuſe the lyfe that thou mayeſte lyue: Neuertheleſſe, they beleued hym not, neyther the Prophetes after hym. I aunſwered then and ſayde: I knowe LORDE, that the Hyeſt is mercyfull, in that he hath mercye vpon them, whyche are not yet in the worlde, and vpon thoſe alſo ſ walcke in hys lawe: and that * he is paciente and longe ſufferynge towarde thoſe that haue ſynned in theyr workes, and that he is liberall to geue where as it requireth: & that he is of greate mercy, for he multiplied hys louynge kyndneſſe towarde thoſe that are preſente, and ſ are paſt, and to them wych are for to come. Rom. 2. d.

For if he multiply not hys mercyes, ſ worlde ſhall not be made lyuynge, wt thoſe that dwel therin. He geueth alſo: for yf he gaue not of his goodnes, ſ thei whych haue done euell, myghte be eaſed from theyr wyckednes: ſ ten thouſand part of men ſhuld not be made lyuyng. And yf ſ Judge forgaue not thoſe ſ be healed wt hys worde, and yf he wold deſtroy the multitude ſ ſtryueth, there ſhud be very fewe left in an vnnumerable multitude.

The .viii. Capter.

¶ Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys owne mercye, then vpon the synnes of the people.

AND he answered me saynge: the mooste hyghest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I will tell the a simylitude Esdras: As when thou askeste the erathe, it shall saye vnto the that it geueth muche moulde wherof earthen vesselles are made, but lytle of it, that gold commeth of. Euen so is it Matt.22.b. wyth the worke of thys worlde.* There be many created, but fewe shalbe preserued. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp wytte (thou soule) and deuoute vnderstandyng, for thou arte agreed to herken & to geue care, & wylyng to prophecy: for thou haste no longer space geuen the, but onelye to lyue O LORDE, wylt thou not geue thy seruaunte leaue, that he may praye before the, and that thou mayste geue seed vnto oure herte, and buylde oure vnderstandynge that there maye come fruyte of it: and that euerye one wyche is corrupte, & beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue:

For thou art alone, & we all are one workemanshyp of thy handes, lyke as thou haste sayde, & lyke as the body is facioned nowe in the mothers wombe, & geuest the membres, & thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: & nyne moonethes doth thy worke suffer thy creature wych is facioned in her: but the thynge that preserueth, & it that is preserued shall both be kept together: and when tyme is, the wombe delyuereth þ thyng that is kepte & growen in her.

For thou haste commaunded the brestes to geue milke vnto the frute, that the thyng whych is created and facioned, maye be norisshed for a tyme: when thou dysposest & ordrest it wyth thy mercye, bryngest it vp wyth thy ryghteousnesse: nurtureste it in thy lawe, and reformest it with thy vnderstandyng, mortifiest it as thy creature, & makest it lyuyng as thy worke. Seing then þ thou destroyest hym, wich with so great labours is created & facioned thorowe thy commaundement, thou couldest lyghtly ordayne also þ the thyng whych is made, myght be preserued.

And thys I spake nowe of all men in generall, as thou knoweste: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: & of thyne inheritaunce for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whō I am woful: & for Jacob: for whose sake I am greued: therfore begyn I to praye before þ for my selfe and for thē: for I se the fal of vs: euen of vs, þ dwell vpon erth: but I haue herd the swiftnes of þ iudge which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, & vnderstande my wordes: & I shall speake before the. B

Thys is the begynnyng of þ wordes of Esdras, before he was receaued. O LORDE thou that dwellest in euerlastingnesse, whose eyes beholdith the heauens & the ayre, whose stoole is ercreadyng hye, whose glorye and mageste may not be cōprehendyd, before whome þ angels of Heauen stāde trēblyng (whose keping is in wynde & fyre,) whose word is true, whose talkynge is steadfast, whose commaundemente is strōge, whose ordinaunce is fearful, whose lookes dryeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melte awaye, & whose trueth beareth witnesse. O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marcke wyth thyne eares the petycion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll speake, & so longe as I haue vnderstādinge, I wyll aunswere. O looke not vpō the synnes of thy people whych serue in the trueth Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studies of the Heathen, but to the desire of those that hath kepte thy testimonies wyth sorowes. Thyncke not vpon those that doe walked faynedlye before the but vpon thē, whych do feare the.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them which haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpō thē that haue clearli taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, whych are worse then beastes: but loue thē, þ alwy haue put their trust in thy ryghteousnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue all þ same sycknes & disease, but because of our sinnes thou shalt becalled mercyful.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of righteousnes, for þ ryghteous which haue layde vp manye good workes to gether, shall out of their dedes receaue reward. For what is man, that thou shuldest take dyspica- C sure at hym: Or wate is ꝑ corruptible & mortale generacion, ꝑ thou shuldest be so rough toward hym.

For of a truth there is no man among them ꝑ be borne, but he hath dealt wyckedly: and among the faythfull there is none whych hath not done amysse. For in thys (O LORDE) thy ryghteousnesse and thy goodnesse shalbe praysed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, wych are not rych in good workes.

Then aunswered he me, & sayd: Some thynges hast thou spoken a ryght and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wyll not verely consider the workes of them, whych haue synned before the death, before ꝑ iudgement, before destruccion: but * I wyll reioyse ouer the worcke & thought of ꝑ righteous. I wyll remembre also theyr pilgremage, preseruacio & reward. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe, so shal it come to passe. For as the husbādman soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet al waye ꝑ thinge that is sowen or planted is not all kept safe, neyther doth it al take roote: Euen so is it of thē that are sowen in ꝑ world, they shall not all be preserued.

I aunswered thē & sayde: yf I haue so gode grace, then let me speake. Lyke as ꝑ husbande manes seede perisheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due seasō, or yf there come to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth man also wych is created wyth thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges & lykened hym vnto the husbande mās seede. Be not wroth at vs O LORD, but spare the people and haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce O be merifull vnto thy creature.

Then aunswered he me, and sayde: Thynges present are for ꝑ present, and thiges to come for such as be to cō. For thou lackest yet moch, seing thou mayest loue my creature aboue me. I haue oftimes drawen ny vnto ꝑ, but neuer to ꝑ vnrighteous. In this also thou art maruelous before the hyest in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it be cōmeth ꝑ, & haste not regarded thyne owne selfe ꝑ thou arte had in suche honoure amonge ꝑ ryghteous. Therfore shal greate wretchednesse and miserie come vpon thē ꝑ in ꝑ latter tyme shall dwel in ꝑ world, because they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke oute glorie for such as be lyke ther: for vnto you is paradise opened: ꝑ tree of lyue is planted, ꝑ time to come is prepared, plēteousnesse made readye, a citie is builded for you, and rest is prepared: yee, perfecte goodnesse & wisedome The roote of euel is marcked from you ꝑ weakenesse and moth is hyd frō you, & into hel flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnesse. Sorowes are vanyshed away & in ꝑ end is shewed ꝑ treasur of immortalitie. And therfore aske thou no more questions cōserning ꝑ multitude of them ꝑ perish. For they haue takē liberty, despised ꝑ hiest, thought scorne of his law, & forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys ryghteous, & * sayde in theyr herte, that there is no GOD: yea, & knouige ꝑ thei shal dye. For lyke as ꝑ thynge ꝑ I haue spokē of, is made ready for you Euen so is thyrste and payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyl ꝑ men shuld come to naughte: but they wich be created, haue defyled ꝑ name of hym that made them, and are vnthanckeful vnto hym, whyche prepared lyfe for thē And therfore is my iudgemente nowe at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto al mē, but vnto fewe: namelye vnto the, & suche as be lyke the. Psal. 14.

Then answered I & sayde: Behold O LORDE nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt begyn tn do at ꝑ laste: but at what tyme & when, thou hast not shewed me.

The .ix. Capter.

¶ Esdras hath visions shewed vnto hym.

Se aunswered me then, & sayde: Measure thou ꝑ tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest ꝑ one parte of the tokēs come to passe, whyche I haue tolde ꝑ before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same time wherin ꝑ hyeste wyll begynne to viset ꝑ worlde, whych he made. And when there shalbe sene an erthquake & vprore of the people in ꝑ world, then shalt thou wel vnderstād that the moste hyeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnyng.

For

For lyke as all that is made in ỳ worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so the times also of the Hyest haue plaine begynnynges in wonders, and signes, and the ende in worckynge and in tokens. And euerye one that shalbe saued, and shalbe able to escape by his workes & by fauth (whe rin ye haue beleued), shal be preserued from the sayde perils and shal se my sal uation in my lande, and with in my bor ders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefullnesse, whyche nowe haue abused my waies, and they that haue caste thē oute dispitefully, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefites, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my la we (whyle they had yet fredome, & whē they had yet open leysure of amende mēte & conuertion, and vnderstode not but dispised it) the same muste knoue it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefulle howe the vngod ly shalbe punished, and how the ryghte ous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is: and when it is. Then answered I: and saide: * I haue talked before, & B nowe: I speake & wyl speake also here
4 Esd. 4. after, that there be many mo of them
Matt. 20. c. wyche perishe, then shalbe saued, lyke as ỳ floude is greater then ỳ dropes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as ỳ flou res be, so are the coloures: suche as the worckemau is, suche is the worcke: ād as the husbandman is hym selfe, so is hys husbandry also, for it was the ty me of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was ma de, wherein they shulde dwell, thē was there no man that withstode me. Nowe when euery one was, and the maker al so in the worlde which is nowe prepa red, and the moneth that ceaseth not, & the lawe whyche is vnsaytheable: the yr maners were corrupte. So I consi dered the worlde, & beholde, there was peril, because of the thoughtes, that were come into it. And I sawe, and spa red them greately, and haue kepte me a wyneberye of the grapes, & a plante from amoge many generacions. Let the multitude perishe then, wych are growē, vp in vayne: and let my grape & wyneberye bekepte: euen mi plante: for w̄ great labour haue I made it vp.

Neuertheless, yf thou wylte take vp pon the yet seuen daies mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) go thy way thē into ỳ feld of floures, where no house is buylded: and eate only of the floures of the felde, tast no flesh, drincke no wyne, but eate. Praye vnto the Hyeste cōtinu aly: so wyll I come, & talke w̄ the.

So I wente my waye and came into the felde wyche is called Ardath (lyke C as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, and dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and themeate of ỳ same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, & my herte was be red wythin me, lyke as afore: & I ope ned my mouth and began to talke befo re the hyeste, and sayde O LORD, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou Exod. 3. haste declared & opened thy selfe vnto Deut. 4. our fathers, in the wylderneſſe, in a pla ce were nomā dwelleth, in a barren pla ce when they came oute of Egypte, and thou spakest saying: Heare me O Isra el, and marke my wordes thou seede of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you & it shall bring frute in you, & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fa thers wych receaued the lawe kepte it not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, and the frute of thy law was not declared: for it might not: for why: it was thine * For they ỳ receaued it, perished because they kepte not Deu. 8. the thynge that was sowen in them.

It is a custome when ỳ ground receaueth seed, or the see a shyp, a vessel mea te & drincke, that whē it perisheth or is broken, wherin a thing is sowen, or whe rin any thynge is put: the thynges also perishe and are broken: which are sow en or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not hapened so, for we that haue receaued the lawe, perishe in synne: and oure herte whyche also receaued the lawe: Esa. 40. notwythstādynge * the lawe perisheth 2. And when I considered these thyn ges in my herte after thys maner, I lo ked aboute me wyth myne eyes, and b 4. Esd. 4. pon the ryghte syde, I sawe a womā, wyche mourned sooze, made greate la mentacion, and wepte wyth lowde voy ce: her clothes were rente in peaces, & she had asshes vpon her heade.

Then

Then let I my thoughtes go ẏ I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayde: wherfore wepest thou? why arte thou so sory and discomforted? And she saide vnto me: Syr, let me be wayle my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and broughte ve rye lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to the? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfruytfull and barē, and haue had an husdande thyrtye yeares. And these thyrtye yeares I doo nothynge elles daye and nyghte, and all houres: but make my prayer to the hyest. After thirtye yeares GOD herde me thy hādmayden, and loked vpon my miserie, considered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne and I was glad of hym, so was my husband also and all my neyghbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto ẏ myghtye. And I nourysshed him with greate trauayle. So when he grewe vp and came to the tyme that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

The.x. Capter.

¶ Esdras and the woman that appereth vnto him/ commene togethe̅r.

AND it happened, that whē my sonne went into hys chambre, he fell downe, and dyed: then ouer threwe we all the lyghtes, & all my neyghboures rose vp to comforte me.

Then toke I my reste vntyll the secō de day at nyght: & when they had al rested, ẏ myght comforte me, I rested: and also rose vp by nyghte, & fled: & am come hether into thys felde as thou sest, & am purposed not to come in ẏ citie, but remayne here: & nether to eate nor drynke, but continualy to mourne and faste vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fall that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou folysshe womam: seest thou not our heuynesse and mourninge, and what happeneth vnto vs: howe Sion oure mother is all wofull & sory: how she is cleane brought downe & i miserie: seest not hou we be al nowe in heuynesse & make oure mone as the wyche ar full of sorow: shuldest thou also be wayle thy one sōne: Demande ẏ earth and she shal tell the ẏ it is she whyche oughte (by reason) to mourne, for ẏ fal of so many ẏ growe vpō her

For, from the begynnynge al men are borne of her, & other shall come: and behold they walcke almoste all into destrucciō, & many of thē shalbe rote oute

Who shulde then (by reason) make moare mournynge then she, that hath loste so greate a multitude: & not thou whyche arte sory but for one. But yf thou wodlest saye vnto me: My mournyng is not lyke the mournynge of ẏ earthe: for I haue loste the frnyte of mi bodye, whiche I bare wyth heuynesse: but the earthe is accordyng to ẏ maner of the earth, and ẏ presente multitude goeth agayne into her, as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto ẏ: lyke as thou haste borne wyth trauayle and sorowe euen so the earth also from ẏ beginnynge geueth her frnyte vnto man, for him that made her. And therfore wt holde thy sorowe & heauinesse by thy self, * & loke what happeneth vnto the, bare it strongly. For if thou iudgest the marke and ende of GOD, to be rightеous and good, and receaueste hys counsayle in tyme thou shalte be commended therin So thy waye then into the citie to thy husbande. Heb.12.d

And she sayde vnto me, that wyll I not do: I wyll not go into the citie: but here wyl I dye. So I communed more wyth her, and sayde: do not so, but be counsayled, & folowe me, for howe manye falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seest ẏ oure Sanctuarie is layed waste, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, our playinge of instrumētes and singing layd downe the thanckesgeuynge put to *silence, oure myrth is vanysshed a waye, ẏ lyghte of oure cā delsticke is quenched, ẏ Arcke of ẏ couenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holye thynges are defyled, & ẏ name ẏ is called vpon ouer vs, is dyshonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame oure prcastes are brente: oure Leuites are caryed awaye into captiuitie: oure virgins are defyled, & oure wiues rauished oure ryghteous men spoyled: and our chyldren destroyed: our ponge men are broughte in bondage, & oure stronge worthyes are become weake: & Sion whyche seale is ẏ greatest of all is loosed vp frō her worthyppe: for she is delivered into ẏ handes of them ẏ hate vs. Tob.10.d.

And

And therefore shake of thy greate he aunesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto the: and that the hyest maye geue the reste from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, ꝑ when I was talkynge wyth her, her face dyd shyne and glysster, so that I was a frayed of her, and mused what it myghte be. And immediatly she cast out a great voyce, very fearfull, so that ꝑ earthe shoke at the noyse of the woman: & I lo ked. And beholde, the woman appered vnto me nomore: but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and fundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed, w
C loude voyce, and saide: Where is Uriel 4.Esd.4.4. the Angell * wyche came to me at the fyrst: For he hath caused me to come in many consideracions & hygh thoughtes, and mine ende is turned into corrupcion: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me: and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstandynge was altered, ād he toke me by the ryghte hande, and cō forted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth ꝑ: and why is thine vnderstandynge vexed: and the vnderstandynge of thy herte: and wher fore arte thou sorye: And I sayde: Because thou haste forsaken me: and I 4.Esd.9.4. haue done * accordynge vnto thy wor-des, I wente into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not ab le to expresse. He sayde vnto me Stan-de vp, and be manlye, and I shall geue the erhorcion.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my LORDE, forsake me not, lest I dye in va yne: for I haue sene, that I do not knowe. O shall my vnderstandynge be dy-sceaued, and my mynde? But nowe I beseche the, that thou wylte shewe thy seruaunte of thys wondre. He aunswe red me then, and sayd heare me, and I shall tell the wherfore thouarte afrayed, for ꝑ hyest hathe opened manye se cret thynges vnto the.

He hathe sene ꝑ thy wayes are rygh te, and that thou takeste sorowe contin-uallye for thy people: and makest greate lamentacion for Sion: and therefo re vnderstande the vision, wheych thou sawest a litle whyle a go after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mournyng and thou haste comforted her. Neuere theiesse nowe seest thou the lykenesse of that woman nomoare, but thou tho ughtest there was a citie buylded:
and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so is this the annswere.
The woman whome thou sawest is Sion: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtye yeares vnfruptefull and barren, those are the thyrtye yeares wherin there was no offeringe made in her. D

But after thyrtye yeares Salomon buylded her and offerd, and then bare the barren a sonne. And where as she tolde the: that she norished hym wyth laboure, that was the dwellynge of Je rusalem. But where as she tolde that her sonne died when she came into her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalem.
And thou sawest her lykenes howe she mourned for her sonne: & what els hap pened vnto her, I haue shewed ꝑ. And nowe GOD seeth, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest from thy hert for her, & so hathe he shewed the her cle arenesse, & the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde where no house is buylded.
For I knewe that the hyeste wolde she we thys vnto the: therefore I comma-unded the to go into the felde, where no fundacion nor buylding is. For in ꝑ place where the hyest wyll shewe hys citie, there shalbe no mans buyldynge.
And therfore feare not, and let not thy ne herte be afrayed, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious fayre buyldynge and howe greate it is and howe great thou thinckest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, & then shalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares may comprehēd For thou arte blessed aboue many other and art called wyth the hyest amō gest the fewe. But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the hyest shewe the visions of hye thyn ges, whych he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the laste dayes.
So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

The. xi. Chapter.

¶ In thys chapter and in the two nexte ensuynge he intreateth of certayne visions, and the inter pretacions thereof.

A THen sawe I a dreame: and behold there came vp from ꝑ see an Aegle whiche had twelue wynges, & thre heades: And I sawe, and behold he spredde his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, & so they were put together agayne.

And I beheldе, and oute of hys fethers there grewe out other lytle contrarie fethers, the hedes rested, the heades in the myddeste was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth ꝑ residue.

Moreouer I sawe, that the Aegle flewe wyth hys wynges, and raygned vpon earthe and ouer al them ꝑ dweite vpon the earthe: And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynste hym: no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes, & gaue a sounde wyth hys feathers, & a voyce sayinge after thys maner: watche not all to geather, slepe euery man in hys owne place, & watch for a time, but let ꝑ heades be preserued at the laste. Neuertheleſſe, I sawe, that the voyce went not oute of hys heades, but frō the myddeste of hys bodye. And I nombred hys contrarye fethers, and behold, there were. viij. of them. And I loked. And beholde vpon the ryght side there arose one fether, & raygned ouer all the earth: And it happened, ꝑ when it raygned, the end of it came, & the place therof appered nomore. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, & raygned & had a greate tyme: & it happened, ꝑ when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrste, so that it appered nomore.

B Then there came a voyce vnto it, & sayde Heare thou that haste kepte in ꝑ earth so long. Thys I saye vnto the: before thou begynneste to appeare nomore. There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde & raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So wente it wyth all the residue one after another, so that euerye one raygned, & then appered nomore. Then I loked, & behold in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryghte syde, ꝑ they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but wythin a whyle they appered no moare: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After thys I loked. And behold the twelue fethers appered nomore nor the two winges, & there was nomoare vpon the Aegles body but two heades that rested, and syre fethers. Then sawe I also that the syre fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder ꝑ heade, that was vpon the righte syde, for ꝑ foure contynued in theyr place. So I loked, & beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to set vp thē selues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, & the seconde was soner awaye then the fyrste. And I beheld, and loo, ꝑ two thought also by them selues to raygne, & when they so thought, beholde, there awaked one of the heades that were at rest: namelye, it that was in ꝑ myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were sylled wyth hym, and the heade was turned wyth them, and were by hym, and dyd eate vp the two vnder wynges that wold haue raigned.

C But thys heade put the hole earth in feare, and bare rule in yt, ouer all those that dweit vpon earth wyth muche labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the soules that haue bene. After thys I loked, & beholde ꝑ head that was in ꝑ myddest, sodaynely appered no more, lyke as ꝑ wynges thē came the two heades, whych ruled vpō earth, & ouer those that dweite therin. And I beheldе, and lo, the heade vpon ꝑ ryghte syde deuoured that was vpō the lefte syde. And I hearde a voice, whyche sayde vnto me: loke before the, and considre the thynge that thou seeste. Then I sawe, & beholde, as it were a Lion ꝑ roareth, rennynge hastelye oute of the woode, and he sente oute a mans voyce vnto the Aegle, and sayde: Heare thou: I wil talke wyth the, and the hiest shal saye vnto the: Is it not thou that haste the victorie of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpō earth and in my worlde, and that the ende of theyr tymes myght come thorow them:

D And the fourth came, and ouer ranne al the beastes ꝑ were past, & had powre ouer the worlde with great fearfulnesse, & ouer the hole compasse of the earth wyth the mooste wycked labour: and so longe tyme dweite he vpon the earth wyth dyscreate, and ꝑ earthe haste thou iudged not wyth truth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte the peaceable and quiet: thou haste loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forth fruyte, & haste cast downe the walles of suche as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongfull dealynge & blasphemye cum vp vnto the hyest: & thy pryde vnto the myghtie. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proude tymes: & beholde they are ended and theyr abominacions are fulfylled. And therfore appere nomoare thou Aegle, and thy horible winges, & thy wycked fethers, & thy vngracious heades, and thy synful clawes, and al thy vayne body, that the earth may be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe: when she is delyuered from thy violence: & that she maye hope for the iudgemente and mercie of hym that made her.

The xij. Chapter.

AND it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto ꝑ Aegle, I sawe, and beholde ꝑ heade that afore had the vpper hande, appered nomore: nether dyd the foure wynges appeare any more ꝑ came to hym and were set vp to raygne: and theyr kyngdome was smal and full of vprore. And I sawe and behold they appered nomore, and the whole bodye of the Aegle was brente, and the earth was in greate feare. Then I awaked oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spirite: Loo, thys hast thou geuē me in that thou searcheste oute the wayes of the hyest: loo, yet am I wery in my mynde, and verye weake in my spirite, and lytle strength is there in me, for ꝑ greate feare that I receyued thys nyght. Therfore nowe I wyll beseche the hyest, that he wyll comforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde LORDE LORDE, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustified wyth ꝑ before manye other, and yf my prayer become vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretacion and playne difference of thys horible syghte, that thou mayeste perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacion of thys syghte. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kingdome* whiche was seue in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto the. Beholde, ꝑ dayes come, that there shall rise vp a kyngedome vpō earth, and it shalbe feared aboue al kyngedomes that were before it. In ꝑ same kyngedome shall twelue kynges raygne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raygne and shall haue moare tyme then the other twelue: and thys do the twelue wynges signifie, whyche thou sawest: As for the voyce that spake, and ꝑ thou saweste not goo oute from the heades, but from ꝑ body: it betokeneth, that after the tyme of ꝑ kyngedome there shal aryse greate stryuynges, & it shal stande in paryl of fallynge. Neuertheless, it shal not yet fall, but shalbe set into hys begynnynge: And ꝑ eyghte vnder wynges whyche thou saweste hange vnto ꝑ wynges of hym, betoken, that in hym there shall aryse eyghte kynges, whose tyme shalbe but smal, and theyr yeares swyft, and two of them shal beare. But when the myddeste tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kepte for a tyme vntyll thyre tyme begynneth to come, that it maye be ended: but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades restynge: thys is ꝑ interpretacion. In hys laste, shall ꝑ hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, and call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the dominion of ꝑ earth, and of those that dwell therein wyth moche labour, aboue all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bringe forthe hys wyckednesse agayne, and that shall perfourme and finishe hys laste. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appered nomoare, it signifieth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys head, and yet wyth payne: & the two that remayne shalbe slayne wyth the swerd. For the swearde of the one shal deuour the other: but at the last, shal he fal thorowe ꝑ swearde him selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder winges vpon the heade, ꝑ is they, whome ꝑ hyeste hath kepte vnto their ende: thys is a small kyngdome and full of trouble.

trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawe-ste rysynge vp, oute of the woode, & ro-arynge & speakyng vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge hym for hys vnryghteous-nesse, is the wynde whyche the hyghest hath kepte for them & for theyr wycked nesse vnto ꝑ ende: he shal reproue them, & rente them asundre before them. For he shall set them syttynge in the Judge mente, and shall rebuke them ꝑ ar sautie: ꝑ residue of my people whiche shall escape vnto min endes shall he delyuer wyth trouble. And shall make thē ioye full, vntyl ꝑ cōmyng of the day of iudge ment: wherof I haue spoken vnto ꝑ frō the beginning. Thys is ꝑ dreame that thou sawest: and thys is the interpreta cion. Thou only hast ben mete to knowe the secret of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges ꝑ thou haste sene in a booke, & hyde them, & teache them the wyse in ꝑ people who se hertes thou knowest maye compre-hende & kepe these secrettes. But wayte thou heare thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo, ꝑ it maye be shewed ꝑ whatsoeuer yt pleaseth the hyghest to declare vnto the: & wyth that he wente hys waye.

And when al the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, & I not come againe into ꝑ citie, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto ꝑ mooste, & came vnto me, & sayde: what haue we offended the: and what euell haue we done agaynste the, that thou forsakest vs, and syttest here in thys pla ce: For of all the people, thou onely arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vine, and as a candle in a darcke place, & as an hauen & shipe preserued from ꝑ tempest. Haue we not els aduersitye ynough, but thou must forsake vs: Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brente with Sion: For we are not better then they that dyed there: & they wepte, wt loude voyce. Then aunswered I them, & sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, & be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hathe you in remembraunce, & the myghtye hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsakē you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to pra ye, because of the miserie of Israel, that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sanctuarie. And nowe go youre waye home euery man and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you: So the people went theyr waye into the ci tie, lyke as I commaūded them: but I remayned styl in the felde seuen dayes, as the Angel bad me, & dyd eate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The xiij. Chapter.

AND it happened after ꝑ seuen 1 dayes, that I dremed a dreme by nyght. And be holde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked and beholde, the man was strong, & increased wyth the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned hys countynaunce to consider, al the thyn-ges trymbled ꝑ were sene vnder hym: & when the voyce wēt out of hys mouth, all they brent that heard hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered to geather a multitude of men oute of nombre, from the fou re wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte a-gaynste the man that came out from ꝑ see. And I loked and behold, he graued hym selfe a great mountayne, and fle-we vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene the border or place, wher oute the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whyc-he came to fyght a gaynste hym, were sore afrayed and yet they durste fyght.
Neuertheless, when he sawe ꝑ fearcenesse and violence of ꝑ people he nether lyfte vp his hande nor helde a swearde nor any weapē: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of hys mouth as it had be ne a blaste of fyre & oute of his lyppes ꝑ wynde of ꝑ flame: & oute of his tong he caste out sparckes & stormes, & they we re all myrte together: ꝑ blaste of fyre, ꝑ wynde of the flammes, and the greate storme, & fell wyth a rushe vpon ꝑ people, whyche was prepared to fyght, & brent them vp euery chone, so that of ꝑ innumerable multitude there was no-thynge sene, but onely duste & smoke.
When I sawe thys, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man 2 come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people, and there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad, some were sorye, some of them were bonde, so that they were caryed and broughte forthe.

Then was I sycke thorowe greate feare, & I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunte all thy wonders from the begynning & haste counted me worthy, that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: sewe me now yet the interpretacion of thys dreame. For thus I considre in my vnderstandynge: wo vnto them that shalbe lefte in those dayes, and much more wo vnto them þ are not lefte behynde, for they that were not lefte were in heuynes:

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges þ are layed vp in the latter dayes, whiche shall happen vnto them, and to those þ are not lefte behide. Therfore are they come into great parylles and many necessities lyke as these dreames declare. yet is it easyer, that he whyche sufferth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and not to se the thynges that shall happen in the laste.

C Then aunswered he me, and sayde: The interpretacion of the syghte shall I shewe the, and I wyl open to the, the thynge þ thou hast required. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, & thys is the interpretacion. He that hath sufferid payne in þ tyme shal saue hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as geue worckes and faythe vnto the mooste myghtye. knowe thys therfore, that they whyche be lefte behynde are moare blessed then they that be deade. Thys is þ meanynge of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man commyng vp from the depe of þ see, the same is he whome GOD þ hyest hath kepte a great season: whyche by hys owne selfe shall delyuer hys creature & he shall ordre them that are left behynde. And where as thou saweste, þ oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynd, fyre and stormе: & howe that he lyft vp neyther sword nor weapon, but that the rushynge in of hym destroyed the hole multitude þ came to fyghte agaynst hym: it signifieth, that þ dayes come wherein GOD wyll delyuer them that are vpon earth, & in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon them þ dwel in þ earthe. And one shal vndertake to fyght agaynst another, one citie agaynst another, one place agaynst another, *and one people against another Mat.24.c. one realme agaynst an other. Whē this commeth to passe, then shal be seen that I shewed þ before: & then shal my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And whē all þ people heare hys voyce, euery man shall in theyr owne land leaue þ battaile þ they haue one against an other: and innumerable multitud shalbe gathered together as they that be wyllyng to come, & to ouercome hym by fyghtynge. But he shall stande vpon the toppe of þ mounte Sion. Neuertheles, Sion shal come, and shalbe shewed, beynge prepared & buylded for al men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth wythout any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people þ are come for theyr wyckednesse, and cuel imaginacions: in to the tempeste: and theyr paynes wherwyth they shal be punished, are lykened vnto the flame, and wythout any labour shalbe destroye them, euen by þ lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes whyche were caryed away presoners oute of theyr owne land, *in the time of Oseas the king, whom Salmanazar the kynge of Assyria toke presoner, and caryed them ouer the water, and so came they into an other lande. 4.Reg.

But they gaue them thys counsayle, that they shulde leaue the multitude of the Heathen and to goo forth in to a farther countrye, where neuer mankynde dweite: þ they myght there kepe theyr statutes, whych they neuer kepte in their owne lande. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Euphrates, and so GOD shewed tokēs for them, *and held styll the floud tyll they were passed ouer, for thorowe the countrye, there was a great way: namely of a year, & a halfe iourney for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vntyll þ latter tyme: & when they come forth agayne, the Hyghest shal hold styl the sprynges of the streame agayne, þ they may go thorowe: therefore sawest thou þ multitude wyth peace. And they þ be lefte behynd of thy people, are those þ be fonde with in my border. Nowe whē he destroyeth the multitude þ is gathered together, he shal defende hys people that remayne, & Exod.14.c. Iosu.3.d.

ne, & then shal he shewe great wöders.

Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, shewe me thys, wherfore haue I sene ꝑ man commynge vp from ꝑ deape of the see: And he sayd vnto me: Lyke as thou canst neyther seke out nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayst thou not se my sonne, or those that be wyth hym, but in the tyme of the daye. Thys is the interpretacion of the dreame which thou sawest, therfore thou onely arte lightened, for thou hast forsaken thyne owne law, & applyed thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe haste thou ordred in wysdome, and haste called vnderstandinge thy mother, and therefore haue I shewid the, the treasure of ꝑ Hyghest. After thre dayes, I wyl shewe the more and talke with the more at large: yea, heuy and wöderous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the feld, geuyng prayse and thanckes greatly vnto GOD, because of thes wonders whych he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

The xiiij. Chapter.

¶ GOD appereth to Esdras in the bus he and sheweth hym what he shal do.

I Vpon ꝑ thyrde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the busche and sayd: Esdras Esdras: And I sayde: heare am I LORDE, & stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * in the bush dyd I appere vnto Moses, and talked w̄ him when my people serued in Egypte. And sent hym, & led my people out of Egypt, & brought hym vpon the mount Sina, where I held hym by me a longe seasō, & tolde hym my wonderous worckes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, & commaunded him saying These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thyne herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions whych I haue shewed the, for thou shalte be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned, and remayne wyth my counsayle, and wyth such as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For ꝑ worlde hath lost hys youth, and the tymes begynne to ware olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alredy, and halfe of the tenth parte yet remayneth there, the whyche is after the haste of the tenthe parte.

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people: comfort suche of them as be in trouble: & tell nowe of the destruccion: let go from the, mortall thoughtes: caste awaye ꝑ burdens of man: put of the weake nature: laye a syde ꝑ thoughtes that are moost heuy vnto the, and haste ꝑ to flye from these tymes: for such euel and wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shall they do muche whorse. * For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is the more shal synne and wickednesse increase in them ꝑ dwell vpon earthe. For ꝑ truthe is fled farre away: iniquite is harde at hand. For now hasteth ꝑ vision to come, that thou haste sene.

Then aunswered I before the, and sayde: Beholde LORDE, I wyll goo as thou haste commaunded me, & reforme the people which are present. But they ꝑ shall be borne afterwarde, who wyl erhorte or rebuke them: Thus the worlde is set in darkenes: and they that dwell therin, are wythout lyghte, for thy lawe is brēte: wherefore nomā knoweth ꝑ thynges that are done of the, or ꝑ shalbe done. yf I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy goost into me and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde, syns the begynnynge whych was wrytten in thy lawe ꝑ men maye fynde the path, & that they which wyl lyue in the later dayes, may lyue.

And he aunswered me saying: Go thy way gather the people together, & say vnto them ꝑ they seeke the not for foure tye dayes, but loke thou haue many bore tables, and take wyth the Sarea, Dabria, Salemia, Echanus, and Asiel, these fyue, whych are redy to wryte swyftly, and come hether, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstādynge in thyne hert, whych shall not be put out tyll the thinges be perfourmed which thou shalt wryte. And them shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfect, and some thinges shalt thou shewe secretly vnto ꝑ wise. To morowe this houre shalt thou begine to wryte.

Then wente I forth as he commaūded me) and gathered all the people together and layd Heare these wordes, O Gen.47.a. Israel: *Oure fathers at ꝑ begynnyng were straungers in Egypt frō whence they were deliuered, and receaued Deut.4.d. the lawe of lyfe *whych they kepte not, whych ye also haue transgressed after them. And when this lande, & the lande of Sion was parted among you by lot, youre fathers and ye youre selues also, haue done vnrighteousnesse, and haue not kept the wayes whych the Hyest commaunded you. And for somoch as he is a ryghteous Judge, he toke from you in tyme the thynge that he had geuen you. And nowe are ye here & your brethren amōge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and reformme youre hert ye shal be kept alyue, & after death shal ye optayne mercy. For after death shall ꝑ iudgement come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shal the names of the ryghteous be manifest, & the worckes of the vngodly shalbe declared. Let no mā therfore come nowe vnto me, nor aske any questiō of me these fortye dates.

So I toke the fyue men (as he cōmaunded me) and we wente into ꝑ felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called me saying: Esdras* Ezech.3.a. open thy mouth, and drincke that I geApoc.10.b. ue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a ful cuppe why che was ful as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranck. And when I had dronck it, my hert had vnderstanding, and wisdome grewe in my brest: for my spirite was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened, and restrayned nomore. The Hyghest gaue vnderstandynge vnto the fyue men, ꝑ they wrote the hye thynges of the mighte, whyche they vnderstode not. But in the nyghte they dyd eate bread, as for me I spake in the daye, and helde not my tonge by nyghte. In fourtye dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfylled, that ꝑ Hyest spake, sayinge: The fyrste that thou haste written speake openly that the worthy and vnworthy maye reade it. But kepe the.lxx. last, that thou mayest shewe it onely to such as be wise among thy people. For in the, is the spryngе of vnderstandyng, the fontayne of wysdome, the streame of knowleg. And I did so.

The xv Chapter.

¶ The punysdement that euell people shall haue: whych GOD commaundeth Esdras to shewe vnto them.

Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecye, whych I wil put in thy mouth, saieth the LORDE: and cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Feare not the imaginacions agaynst the. Let not the vnfaythfulnesse of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in theyr vnfaythfulnesse. Behold, sayth ꝑ LORD I wyll bryngе plages vpon the worlde, ꝑ swearde, hunger, dearth, and destrucciō, for wyckednesse hath the vpperhande in all the earth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfylled.

Wherfore sayeth the LORDE: I wyl hold my tonge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, whyche they do so vngodly: neyther wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale wythal so wyckedly. Beholde, * the innocent bloud of the Apoc.6. ryghteous complayne continually, to and.11. me & therfore (sayth ꝑ LORDE) I will them auenge & receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

*Beholde, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayne. I wyll not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte but wyll bryngе them oute wyth a myghtye hand and a stretched out arme and smyte it wyth plages as afore. And wil destroye all the lande of it, Egypt shall mourne, and the fundacions of it shal be smitten wyth the plage and punishemente, that GOD shall bryngе vpon it. Isa.44. Ierem.51. 1 Cor.4.

They ꝑ tyl the grounde shal mourne, for theyr seedes shalbe destroyed, thorowe ꝑ blastig, hayle, & horyble starre falling. Wo worth ꝑ worlde & thē ꝑ dwell therin, for ꝑ swerd & theyr destruccion drawe hy, and one people shal stād vp to fyght agaynst an other, & swardes in theyr handes. For mē shalbe vnsteadefaste and some shall do violence vnto other: they shall not regard theyr kynge & princes, the wayes of theyr doinges & handlynges shalbe in theyr power. A man shal desire to go in to the citie & shall not be able. For thorowe theyr

pryd the cities shalbe brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shalbe afrayde: A man shall haue no pitie vpō hys neyghboure, but one shal prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle theyr goodes, because of the honger of breade, and because of the greate trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together
B all the kynges of the earth, whych are from the vp rysynge, from the South, from the East, and Lybanus to turne vnto them, and restore ẏ thynges that they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet thys daye vnto my chosen, so wyl I do also, & recompense them in theyr bosome. Thus sayeth ẏ LORD GOD: My ryghte hand shal not spare the sinners, & my sweard shall not cease ouer them ẏ shed innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyer is gone out frō hys wrathe, & hath consumed the fundactons of the earth, & the sinners like ẏ strawe ẏ is kindled. Wo worth them ẏ synne & kepe not my commaundementes sayth the LORD: I wyll not spare thē. Go your waye ye chyldren from violence, defyle not my Sanctuarie: for the LORDE knoweth all them ẏ synne agaynst hym, and ther fore deliuereth he them vnto death & destruccion: For nowe are ẏ plages come vpon the world, and ye shal remayne in them. For GOD shal not deliuer you because ye haue synned agaynste hym.

C Behold, an horrible vision commeth from the East, where generacions of Dragons shal come out, and the people of the Arabies wyth many charetes, & the multitude of them shalbe as ẏ wynde vpō the earth, that al they whych do heare thē raginge in theyr wrath maye feare & trimble. And as the wylde Boores oute of the woode, so shall they goo oute, and wyth greate power shal they come fightynge wyth thē: & shal waste D the porcion of the Assyrians Lande.

And then shall the Dragons haue ẏ vpper hande, and not remembre theyr byrth, and shall turne about swearing together in great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, and kepe silence at theyr power, and shall flee: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shalbe sege them & consume one of them, & in theyr hooste shalbe feare and drede, & stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North, vnto the South, and they are verye horrible to loke vpō, full of wrath and storme. They shall smyte one vpon another: and they shall smyte the great starre to the earthe and theyr one starre also: and the bloud (for the greate slaughter) shalbe as depe as frō the beye doune, and the fylth of man lyke vnto the Cameles lytter: And there shalbe great fearfulnes and trembling vpon erth, and they that see the wrath, shall be afrayde, and a trymblyng shall come vpon them.

And then there shal come great rayne from the South, & frō the North, and parte from the weste: & the wynde from the East shal be of great poure & shall shut them vp agayne and ẏ cloud whych was rayled vp in wrath, and ẏ starre to feare the Easte & west wynd, shalbe destroyed: and ẏ greate cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, & the myghtye cloudes ful of wrath and the starre: ẏ they maye make all the earth afrayed, and them ẏ dwel therin, & that they may poure out ouer all places an horrible starre fawllinge fyer and hayle flyinge, swerdes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers: & they shal breake downe the cities and walles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, woode, and the grasse of the medowes and all theyr frute. And they shal go stedfaste vnto Babylō, & make her afrayde: they shal come to her & besege her, the starre & al wrath shal they poure out vpō her.

Then shall the duste & smooke go vp G vnto the Heauen, and all they that be a boute her: shallbe wayle her: and they ẏ remaine vnder her shall do seruice vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon ẏ hope of Babylon, and arte a worshyppe of her persone: Wo be vnto ẏ thou wretch, because thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, & haste dect thy daughters in whordome, that they myght triumph and please thy louers, which haue alway desired to commit whordome wyth the: thou haste folowed the abominable cirie in al her workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayth GOD: I wil send plages vpon the wedowhod: pouerte, hunger, warres and pestilence, to waste thy houses vnto destruccion & death, & ẏ glorie of thy power shalbe dryed vp as a floure, when the heate risethe that is sente ouer the: Thou shalte be sycke as a poore wyfe that is plaged & beaten of wemen: so that the myghtye and louer shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I hate the sayth the LORDE: yf thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, eraltynge the stroke of thy handes, and sayd ouer theyr death when thou wast droncken: set forth the bewtye of thy countinaunce:

The rewarde of thy whordome shal- H be recompensed the in thy bosome.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my cho sen, sayeth the LORD, euē so shall GOD do vnto the, and shal delyuer the into a plage, Thy chyldren shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fal thorowe ꝑ swearde. Thy cities shalbe broken downe & all thyn wiche shall be in the feld shall perishe w the swearde also. They ꝑ be in the mountaynes shal dye of hunger, & eat theyr owne flesh, & dryncke theyr owne blonde for very hūger of breade & thrust of water. Thou vnhappy shalt come thorowe ꝑ see, and receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shal caste downe ꝑ slayne cities, & shal roote out one part of thy lāde, & consume ꝑ portion of thy glorye. Thow shal be vnto thē like stub ble, & they shal be vnto ꝑ like fyre, & shal consume the: thy cities & thy lande, thy woode & thy fruytful trees shall they burne w the fyre Thy chyldrē shal they carye awaye captiue, and looke what thou haste, they shall spoyle it and mar re the bewtye of thy face.

The. xvj. Chapter.

¶ The Heathen shalbe punished.

WO be vnto the Babylon & I Asia, wo be vnto ꝑ Egypte & Syria, girde youre selues w clothes of sake and heare, & mourne youre chyldren, beforȝ for youre destrucciō is at hande. A swe arde is set vpon you, & who wyll turne it backe: A fyre is kindled amonge you, & who wyl quench it: Plages are sente vnto you, & what is he ꝑ wyl dryue thē awaye: May any man dryue away an hongry Lyon in ꝑ woode: Or maye anye man quench the fyre in stubble when it hath begūne to burne Maye one turne agayne ꝑ arowe, ꝑ is shot of a strōge ar cher: The myghtye LORD sendeth, the plages, & what is he ꝑ wil dryue thē a- wayer The fyre is kyndled & gone forth in hys wrathe, & what is he ꝑ wil quen che it: He shal cast lyghteniges, & who shall quenche it: He shal thoder, & who shall not be afrayde: The LORD shall threaten, & who shal not vtterly be bea tē to pouder at hys presence. The earth quaketh, & the fundacions therof: ꝑ ire aryseth vp w waues from ꝑ depe, & the floudes of it are vnquiet and ꝑ fyshes therof also before the LORDE & before the glory of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hande ꝑ holdeth the bowe, hys arowes that he shoteth are sharpe and shall not mysse, whē they begynne to be shote into the endes of ꝑ worlde.

Beholde, the plages are sent & shall B not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyer is kyndled and shal not be put out, tyll it consume the fundaciōs of ꝑ earth. Like as an arowe wh ꝑ che is shote of a myghtye archar, retur neth not backeward: euē so the plages that shalbe sente vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who shall delyuer me in those dayes: There shall come vpon vs sorowes and great morninge, hunger, dathe, and war- res also and the powers shal stande in feare: And there shal come euels, & they shal tremble euery one. What shal I do in these thynges, when ꝑ plages come: Beholde, hunger, slaughter trouble, & angusche are sent, as scourges for a mēdemēt. But for all these thinges they shal not turne from theyr wyckednes, nor be alway mindfull of the scourges. C

Behold vytayles shalbe so good chea pe vpon earth, ꝑ they shal thincke them selues to be in good ease, and euen then shal mischefe growe vpon earth: war- res, dearth, & greate dysquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earthe shall perishe of hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the swear de destroye: and ꝑ deade shalbe cast out as donge: and there shalbe no man to consorte them. For the earth shalbe wa sted, and the cities shalbe cast downe: there shalbe no man lefte to tyl ꝑ earth & to sowe it. The trees shall gene frute, & who shal plucke them of & gather thē? The grapes shalbe rype, and who shal treade them: For all places shalbe de- solate of men, so ꝑ one man shal desire to se another, or to heare hys voice. For of ans

one whole citie there shalbe tyneleste, & two in the felde, whych shall hyde thē selues in the thycke bushes, & in þ clyfses of stones, lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vineyarde is gathered, there are leste some grapes of them that diligently soughte thorowe the vinearde.

Euen so so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure leste for them that searche theyr houses wyth the swearde. And the earth shalbe leste waste, & the feldes there of shall ware olde: and her wayes & all her pathes shall growe ful of thornes, because no man shall trauaile there thorowe.

The daughters shall mourne, hauynge no byrd gromes: the wemen shal make lamentacion, hauynge no husbandes, theyr daughters shall mourne hauinge no helpe of theyr bridegrome In þ warres shal they be destroied, & their husbandes shall perishe of hunger. O ye seruauntes of þ LORDE heare these thynges, and marcke them. Beholde, þ worde of the LORDE. O receaue it: behold the plages drawe nye, and are not slacke in taryinge. Lyke as a trauelynge woman whych after þ nyne moneth bringeth forth a sonne, whē þ houre of þ byrth is come, an houre, two, or thre, afore þ paynes come vppon her bodye, & when the childe commeth to the byrth, they tary not þ twynckynge of aneye. Euen so shall not the plages beslacke to come vpon earth, & the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shal come vpon it on euerysyde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you ready to þ batayle: and in all euel be euen as pylgremes vpon earth * He þ selleth, let him be as he þ flyeth hys waye: and he þ byeth as one þ wil lease: who so occupyeth marchaundise, as he þ wynneth not: & he þ buildeth, as he þ shal not dwel therin, he þ soweth, as one þ shall not reape: he þ trymmeth þ vineard. as he þ shall not gather the grapes, they þ mary, as they þ shall get no childrē, & they þ mary not as þ wyddowes, & therfore * they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straūgers shall reape theyr frutes, & spoile their goodes ouertrowe theyr houses, take their children captiuie, for in captiuite & hunger shal they get chyldren. And they þ occupy their marchaūdise wt robbery, howe long decke they theyr cities, theyr houses, theyr possessiōs, & persons? þ more wyl I punisch thē for their synnes, sayeth þ LORDE. Lyke as an whore enuyeth an honeste womā, so shal ryghteousnes hate iniquitie, whē she decketh her selfe, & shall accuse her to her face: when he cōmeth that defendeth, which shall make inquisicion for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be ye not lyke ther vnto, nor to the worckes therof: for or euer it belonge, iniquitie shalbe taken a waye out of the earth: & righte ousnes shal raigne among you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not sinned: for coles of fyer shall burne vpon his heade whyche sayeth before þ LORD GOD and hys glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the LORDE knoweth all þ worckes of men, theyr imaginacions, theyr thoughtes, & theyr hertes. * For he spake but þ worde: let þ earth bemade, & it was made: let the heauen be made: & it was made. In hys worde were starres made & he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the groūde of the deepe, and the treasures ther of he hath measured the see, & what it containeth. He hath shut the see, in the myddeste of the waters, and wyth hys worde hathe he hanged þ earth vpō þ waters. He spredeth out þ heauen lyke a bawte, vpon þ waters hath he found it. In þ deserte & drye wylderneste hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon þ toppe of þ mountaynes, that þ floudes moght poure downe from the stony rockes to water þ earth He made man, & put hys herte in the mydest of the bodye, and gaue hym breth, lyfe, & vnderstandynge, yee, and þ spirite, of þ Almyghtie GOD, whych made all thinges, and hath searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth youre imaginacions & inuencions, & what ye thyncke when ye synne and wolde hyde youre selues. Therfore hath the LORDE searched & soughte oute all youre worckes, & he shall bewrate you all. And whē youre synnes are brought forthe, ye shalbe a shamed before mē, & youre owne synnes shalbe youre accusers in þ daye. What wyll ye do (Or howe wyll ye hyde youre synnes before GOD, & his Angeles) Beholde, GOD hym selfe is the

Judge, feare hym, leane of from youre synnes, and forget youre vnrighteous nesses, & melde nomore wyth them: so shall GOD leade you forthe, and deliu-uer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greate multitude is kind led ouer you & they shall take away cer tayne of you, and fede the ydle wyth I dols, and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote.

For in all places, and in the nerte cities shalbe agreate insurrection, vpon those that feare the LORDE. They shal be lyke madmen, they shal spare no mā thei shal spoile & waste such as feare the LORDE, their goodes shal they take frō them, & shut them out of their houses. Thē, shal it beknowen who are my chosen, & they shalbe tried as ꝑ golde in ꝑ fyer. Heare, O ye my beloued, saith ꝑ LORDE: behold the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delyuer you frō the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispay re not, for GOD is oure captayne.

Who so kepeth my commaundemen-tes and precepte (sayeth the LORDE GOD) let not youre synnes waye you downe, and let not youre vnryghteous nesse be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes who ar ouer wheluid wt wickednesse: lyke as a felde is couerid with wood and bushes, & the path therof wyth thorues, ꝑ no man maye trauayle thorowe: & so is he taken, & cast in the fyer & brente.

He succoureth Gabel with monye. He and hys are fayne to flye / but after the death of Sennacherib they returne agayne.

TObias was of the tribe & citie of Nephthalim wich lyeth in the hye countries of Galile aboue Iser, the waye towarde the west hauyng ꝑ citie of Sephet vpon the lefte syde. Though he was taken prysoner in the dayes of Salmanasar kynge of the Assyrians, neuertheles beinge in captiuite, he forsoke not the waie of truthe. In so muche that what soeuer he mighte get he parted it dayly wyth hys felowe prisoners and brethren that were of hys kynred. And though he were yonger thē all the tribe of Nephthalim yet do not he behaue hym selfe childyshly in hys worckes. And when all the other wente to Baal the golden calue, which Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all theyr companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the LORDE, and there worshypped the LORDE GOD of Israel: faythfully offering all his fyrste frutes and tythes, so that in the thyrde yere he ministred all ꝑ tythes vnto straūgers & to suche as he thoughte good. These and such lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordynge to the lawe of GOD when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke out of hys owne tribe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whome he called Tobias after hys owne name, & taugh him from hys youth vp, to feare GOD, and to refrayne from al synne.

Nowe when he wyth hys wyfe, hys sonne and wyth all hys kynred was come into captiuite vnto the citie of Nineue, what tyme as they al dyd eate of the meates of the Heathen, he kept hys soule, and was neuer defyled in theyr meates. * And forsomuch as he was myndfull of the LORDE in all hys herte, GOD gaue hym fauoure in the syghte of Salmanasar ꝑ kynge, wbych gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he libertie to do whatsoeuer hym lyste.

So wente Tobias vnto all them ꝑ were in prysō, and comforted them, & gaue them wholsome exhortaciōs. And when he came to Rages, a citie of the Medes, hauinge ten talētes of syluer of the kynges gyfte and fawe a mōge a great company of people of his kenred any one Galleus which was of hys owne tribe beynge in necessitie he gaue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an hande wrytynge.

After a longe season when Salmana sar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib hys sonne reygned in hys steade which hated the childzen of Israel. Tobias went dayly thozoweoute all hys kynred, and comfozted them, and gaue his goodes to euerysone of thē, as much as he might. He fed the hungry, clothed ꝑ naked, and buryed the deade and slayne, and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Jewrye (what tyme as GOD punished hym foz blasphemie) in his wrath slew many of ꝑ cyldzē of Israel. And Tobias buried their bodies priuely. But when it was told the kynge, he cōmaunded to slaye him, & toke a waye all hys goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias wᵗ hys sonne and wᵗ hys wyfe fled hys waye in to mounte Itarath, foz there were many ꝑ loued him. But after. xlv. dayes ꝑ king was slayne of his owne sonnes. And when Sarchidonus (wiche did succide his father) had geuē Achiacarus Tobias brothers sonne many offices of honor: & had made hi his cupeberer, chefe stuorde, chefe Auditor, master of ꝑ signate & viceregerent to his one person Achiacarus spoke unto the kynge foz his vncle Tobias. Then came Tobias againe to hys house, and all hys goodes were restozed to hym.

The.ij. Capter.

¶ Tobias byddeth such of his frendes as feare God to a feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He becommeth blind by the permission and sufferaunce of GOD Hys kinsfolkes moke hym.

After those thynges vpon a solemne daye of the LORD Tobias made a goode feaste i his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Go thy way and bzyng hether some of oure tribe, suche as feare GOD, that they maye make mery wᵗ vs. And when he was gone, he came agayn, and tolde hys father, ꝑ one of ꝑ childzen of Israel lay slayne vpon ꝑ strete. And immediatly he leapte from his table, lefte ꝑ feast, came fasting to ꝑ dead coarse, toke hym & bare him pzeuily into hys house, that when ꝑ sūne was downe, he myghte safely bury hym. And when he had hyd ꝑ coarse, he dyd eate hys meate wᵗ mourning & feare, remembzing ꝑ wozdes, ꝑ the LORDE sayde by the Pzophete Amos: youre hie feastes shalbe turned to sozow and heuinesse.

But when the Sune was downe, he went hys waye & buryed him. Then all hys neyghboures repzoued hym, saynge: It is not longe sence it was cōmaunded to slaye the because of thys matter, and haste scarse escaped ꝑ daūger of death, & buriest thou ꝑ deade agayne: Neuertheless, Tobias fearinge GOD moare then ꝑ kynge, toke the bodies of the slayne, & hyd thē in hys house, & buryed them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buryed the deade, & was werye, came home, & layde hym downe by ꝑ wall ād slepte. And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes warme dunge oute of the swalowes neste, so ꝑ he was blynde. Thys temtacion did GOD suffer to happen vnto hi, ꝑ they whych came after, myghte haue an example of hys pacience lyke as of holye Job. Foz in so muche as he euer feared GOD frō hys youth vp, & kept hys commaundementes, he grudged not againste GOD that ꝑ plage of blindenes chaunsed vn to hym, but remayned steadfaste in the feare of GOD, and thanked GOD al the dayes of hys lyfe.

Foz lyke as blessed Job was had in diuision of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scozne of hys eldres and kynsfolkes, whyche sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, foz ꝑ whych thou haste done almes, and buryed the deade: But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Sai not so foz we are the chyldzen of holye men, & looke foz the lyfe, whyche GOD shall geue vnto them that neuer turne theyr beleue from hym. Anna hys wyfe wente daylye to the weauynge wozke: and looke what lyuyng she coulde get with the laboure of her handes, she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd and bzought it home.

And when her husbāde hearde it crye he saide: looke that it be not stolen, restoze it agayne to the owners: foz it is not lawfull foz vs to eate oz to touche anie thynge of theefte. Then was hys wyfe angrye and sayde: Nowe is they hoope Deu. 22.d.

hoope become vayne openlye, and thy almesse dedes are manifeste. Wyth these and suche lyke wordes dyd she caste hym in the tethe.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Tobi. Sara the daughter of Raguel is sclaundred of her fathers seruãte. The prayer and fastynge of Sara. And also the innocencye and chastytie of her. The prayers of Tobias and Sara are heard.

AThen Tobias toke yt heuily, & wyth teares: beganne to make hys prayer sayinge: O LORDE, thou arte ryghteous, and all thy iudgementes are true: yee, all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnesse & iudgemente. And nowe O LORDE be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nether remember my misdeades, nether ỳ mysdeades of my elders. For we haue not ben obediente vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, broughte into captiuite, into derision, and shame vnto all nacions, amnoge whome thou haste scattered vs. And nowe O LORD, thy iudgemẽtes are great for we haue not done accordynge to thy commaundementes, nether haue we walked inno cẽtlye before ỳ. And now O LORD, deale wyth me accordynge to thy wyl, ād commaunde my spirite to be receaued in peace, for more expediẽte were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

BAt the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a citie of ỳ Medes was sclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes: namelye, that she shulde haue had seuen husbandes, whych as sone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therefore, when she reproued the maiden for her faute, she aunswered her sayinge: GOD let vs neuer se sonne nor daughter of ỳ more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slai me also, as thou hast slaine seuẽ men: At thys boyce wẽte Sara into an hye chãber of her house, & thre dayes & thre nyghtes she neyther eate nor dranke, but contynued in prayer & besoughte GOD wt teares ỳ
C he wolde deliuer her frõ thys rebuke.

Upon the thyrde daye it chaunsed, ỳ when she had made an ende of prayer, she praysed the LORDE sayinge: Blessed be thy name, O GOD of oure fathers, whych when thou arte wroth, shewest mercy, and in tyme of trouble thou forgeuest the synnes of them, ỳ cal vpon the. Vnto the O LORDE turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes I beseche the O LORDE, lose me oute of ỳ bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me vtterlye awaye from the earth. Thou knowest LORDE that I neuer had desire vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenlye luste: I haue not kepte companie wt those that passe theyr time in sport, nether haue I made mi selfe partaker wt them that walke in light behauour Neuertheless an husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Nowe paraduenture ether haue I bene vnworthy of thẽ, or elles were they vnmete for me, for thou happely hast kept me to another husbande. For who: thy counsell is not in the power of man But whosoeuer loueth the and serueth the aryghte, is sure of thys, that yf hys lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryinge: and yf he endure in pacience, he shall haue a rewarde & be hyghlye crowned: and yf he be in trouble, GOD (no doubte) shall deliuer hym, ād yf hys lyfe be in chasteninge, he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercye.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dãnacion: and why: after a storme thou makest the wether fayer and styl: after wepinge and heuines thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O GOD of Israell be praised for euer. At the same tyme were bothe theyr prayers herde in the syght of the maiestye of the hyest GOD. And Raphael the holy Angel of the LORDE was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at onetyme together before GOD,

The. iiij. Chapter.

¶ Tobias thincking to dye, geueth a godly exhortacion and monicion to hys sonne.

SO whẽ Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he might dye he called vnto him hys sonne Tobias, and sayde vnto hym, My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & laye them in thine herte as a fundacion. When GOD taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my bodye: And honor they mother all the dayes of her of her lyfe. For thou oughteste to remẽber what & howe great pareis she suffred for the in her wombe. And when she hath also fulfilled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her beside me. Haue GOD in thy thought all ỳ dayes of thy lyfe, & beware *lest at any tyme thou consent vnto sinne, & lest thou let slyp the commaundementes of the LORDE our GOD.

* Geue almes of thy goodes, & turne neuer they face from the poore: & shall it come to passe ỳ the face of the LORDE shal not be turned a way from ỳ. * Be merciful after thy power. yf thou haue much, geue plẽteously, yf thou haue lytle, do thy diligence gladly to geue of ỳ lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in ỳ day of necessite. For mercy deliuereth frõ all synne & from death, & suffereth not the soule to come in darckenes. A greate comforte is mercie before the hyghe GOD, vnto all thẽ that shewe it.

My sonne, kepe the wel from al whordome and (beside thy wyfe) se ỳ no faute be founde in ỳ. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde, nor in thy worde: for in pryde beganne all destruccio. * Whosoeuer worcke anye thynge for the, immediatly geue hym hys hyre, & loke ỳ thy hyred seruauntes wages remayne not by ỳ ouer nyghte. * Loke ỳ thou neuer do vnto another man ỳ thynge, ỳ thou woldest not another man shulde do vnto ỳ. * Cate thy bearde wt ỳ hongrye & poore, & couer the naked wyth thy clothes. Set thy bread & wyne vpõ the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & dryncke thereof with the synners. Aske euer counsell at the wyse.

Be alwaye thanckefull vnto GOD, & beseche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that what soeuer thou deuyseste or takeste in hande, it maye remayne in hym. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou waste yet but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a citie of the Medes, and hys hand wrytynge haue I by me. And therefore seeke some meanes, howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer & geue him his hande wrytynge againe

My sonne, be not afrayed: truthe it is we leade heare a poore lyfe: but greate good shal we haue, if we feare GOD & departe from all sinne: & do well

¶ The obedience of yonge Tobias to hys father/ whych is sente to Rages. An Angell accompanyeth wyth hym in hys iourney.

THen answered Tobias hys father and sayde: father: all ỳ thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do & ỳ diligently. But howe I shall requite thys money I cã not tell. Nether doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What token shall I geue hym: And as for the waye thether I neuer knewe it. Then hys father aunswered hym, and sayde: I haue hys handewrytyng by me whych when thou shewest hym immediatly he shal paye the. But go thy waye nowe, and get the some faithfull man to go wyth the for an hyre, that thou mayeste receaue the monye, whyle I am yet lyuige. Then wẽt Tobias out, and in ỳ strete he founde a frayre younge man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angell of GOD, but saluted hym and sayde: From whẽce arte thou good yonge man He aunswered: Of ỳ chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye that leadeth vnto the countrie of the Medes: He aunswered, I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone ofttymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, ỳ dwelleth in Rages a citie of the Medes, whych lyeth vpon the mount Ecbathanis: Tobias sayde vnto hym: I pray the tary for me, tyll I haue told my father these thynges. Then wente Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the wiche hys father meruayled & prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym, Nowe when ỳ Angell came in, he salutid him, & sayde: Joye wt ỳ for euer moare. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue ỳ syt here in darckeneſſe, & se not ỳ lyght of hauen: The yonge mã sayde vnto him: Be of good chere, GOD shall helpe ỳ shortlye. And Tobias sayde vnto hi: Canste thou brynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto ỳ citie of Rages in Medea: And when thou cõmest againe I shall paye ỳ the hyre. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sõne & brynge him to ỳ againe. Thẽ Tobias sayde to hym: tel me I pray the of what house,

houſe, or of what tribe art thou? The Angell Raphael ſayde vnto hym: Seekeſt thou after ꝑ kinred any famulie, or ſeekeſt thou aguyde for thy ſonne to go with hym: But that I make ꝑ not careful, I come of ꝑ Stoke of Azaria & great Ananias thy brothers. And Tobias anſwered: thou arte come of a great kynred: but I prayе the be not diſeaſed that I deſire to knowe thy kinred. The Angel ſayd vnto hym: thy ſonne ſhall I leade forth ſafely and bryng hym hole to the agayne.

Then anſwered Tobias & ſayde: wel go on youre waye, and GOD be in youre iourney, and hys Angel bear you cõpany. So when they had prepared all thynges that thei wolde take with thẽ in theyr iournye, Tobias bad hys father and his mother farewell, and they wẽte on theyr waye both together. Now when they were gone, hys mother beganne to wepe, and ſayde: The ſtafe of oure age haſte thou taken awaye, ād Tobi. 10. c. ſente hym from vs. Wolde GOD that mony had neuer bene, for the whyche thou haſte ſente hym awaye. yf we had bene contente wyth our pouertye, this had bene greate ryches vnto vs ꝑ we ſawe oure ſonne here. Then ſaide Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure ſõne ſhall come to vs agayne ſafe and ſounde, ād thyne eyes ſhall ſe hym. For I truſte, ꝑ ꝑ good Angel of GOD ſhall beare hym companye, & order well all ꝑ thynges ꝑ he doth: ſo ꝑ he ſhall come to vs agayne wꝺ ioye. At theſe wordes hys mother left of from weppynge, & helde her tonge.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias is deliuered from the fyſh by the Angell. The Angell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to hys wyfe.

I SO Tobias wente on hys waye and a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrſte nighte they abode by the water of Tigris. Then wẽte he oute to waſhe his feete, and behold de there came forth an horrible fyſh to deuoure hym. Of whõ Tobias was a frayde: and cryed wyth a lowde voyce, ſayinge: LORDE he commeth vpon me. And the Angell ſayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd ſo, and drewe him vpon the lande. And the fyſhe beganne to leape at hys feete.

Then ſayde the Angell vnto hym: take oute the bowels of thys fyſhe, & ſalt for the herte, ꝑ gaul and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For theſe thynges are neceſſary and good for medicine. Tobias dyd ſo, and roſted the fyſhe, and they toke hym wyth them in theyr iourney: ꝑ reſydue they ſalted, as much as was ſufficiente for them, tyll they came to Raga a citie of the Medes. Then Tobias aſked the Angel, and ſayde vnto hym: I prayе the brother Azaria tell me whereto are theſe thynges good of the fyſhe, ꝑ thou haſte bydden me kepe.

The Angell aunſwered hym, & ſayde: yf thou layeſt a pece of the herte vpon the coales, the ſmoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell ſpyrites, whether it be from man or from woman, ſo that from thence forth the ſame ſhal come nomore vnto thẽ. The gaul is good to annoint or to ſtryke the eyes withal where as there is any blemyſh in thẽ, ſo that they ſhalbe hole.

And Tobias ſayde vnto hym, where wylt thou that we remayne? The Angel aunſwered and ſayde: Here is a mẽ kynſmã of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether ſonne nor daughter but her. All hys good belongeth vnto the if thou muſte mary her, and therfore deſire her of her father, and he ſhal geue her the to wyfe. Then anſwered Tobias and ſayde: As I vnderſtande, ſhe hath ben maryed vnto. vij. huſbandes, and they alare dead: and I haue herde ſay that the deuel ſlewe them. I am afrayd therfore, leſt ſuche thynges happen vnto me alſo: which yf it came to paſſe (ſeing I am the only ſõne of my father and my mother) I ſhulde bryngе them i theyr age wꝺ ſorowes to theyr graues.

Then ſayde the Angell Raphel vnto hym: Heare me and I wyll tell ꝑ what they be, of whom the deuyl hath power Namely, they that receaue maryage of ſuche a faction, that they ſhute GOD out from them, and from theyr hert ād geue them ſelues to theyr owne luſt, euen as it were an horſe & mule, whiche haue no vnderſtandynge: vpon ſuche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takeſt her, and arte come into the chamber, wytholde they ſelfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer wyth her.

And

And in the fyfte nyghte, roſt the lyuer of ꝓ fyſhe, & ꝓ deuyll ſhalbe dryuen awaye. The ſeconde nyght ſhalte thou be receaued into the cõpany of the holy patriarkes. The thyrd nyght ſhalte thou optaine ꝓ bleſſing of GOD, ſo that whole chyldren ſhalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyghte take the mayden in the feare of GOD: and more for ꝓ deſyre of chyldren, then for any fleſhly luſte: that in the ſeed of Abraham thou mayeſt optayne ꝓ bleſſynge in chyldren

The vij. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias and the Angel come to the houſe of Raguel. He requireth Raguels daughter to wyfe/and obtayneth her.

THen went they into Raguel, which receaued them ioyfully And when Raguel loked vpõ Tobias he ſaid vnto Anna his wyfe. Howe like is this yonge man vnto my ſyſters ſõne: And whẽ he had ſpoken this he ſayd whẽce be ye good brethrẽ: They ſayde Of ꝓ tribe of Nephtalim oute of ꝓ captiuitie of Nineue. Thẽ ſayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias: Thy ſaid: yee, we knowe hun wel. And whẽ they had ſpoken much good of hym, ꝓ Angel ſayde vnto Raguel. Tobias of whome thou askeſt is thys yonge mans father.

Then Raguel bowed hym ſelfe downe and wepte, toke hym aboute ꝓ neke & kyſed hun, & ſayde: GODS bleſſyng haue thou my ſonne, for thou arte the ſonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte alſo. Nowe when they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a wether, & to make a feaſt: And when he prayed them to ſyt downe to dyner, Tobias ſayde: I wyl nether eate nor drinke here this day except thou fyrſt graũt me my peticion & promiſe me to geue me thy daughter Sara. Whẽ Raguel herde this he was aſtound: for he knewe, what had happened vnto ꝓ other. vij. men ꝓ went in vnto her, & he began to feare, ꝓ it ſhulde chaũce vnto hym alſo in lyke maner

And whyle he ſtode ſo in doubte, & gaue the yonge mã no anſwere, ꝓ Angell ſayde vnto hi Feare not to geue hi thy daughter, for vnto thys man ꝓ feareth GOD belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her. Then ſayde Raguel: I doubt not but GOD hathe accepted my prayers and teares in hys ſyghte: & I truſte he cauſed you to come vnto me for the ſame intente, ꝓ thys daughter of myne myghte be maried in her owne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moſes.

And nowe, doubte thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the. Soo he tooke ꝓ ryghte hande of his daughter and gaue her into the ryght hande of Tobias and ſayde.

The GOD of Abrahã, ꝓ GOD of Iſahac, & the GOD of Jacob, be wyth you, ioyne you together, and fulfyl hys bleſſynge in you. And thei toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the maryage: And then made they merye, & prayſed GOD.

And Raguel called Anna hys wyfe vnto hi, & bad her prepaze another chãbre, and thether he broughte Sara his daughter, & ſhe wepte. Thẽ ſayde he vnto her: Be of good chere mi daughter, ꝓ LORDE of Heauen geue the ioye, for ꝓ heauyneſſe that thou haſte ſuffred.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ The Angell byndeth the euyll Tobias exhorteth hys wyfe to prayer/and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

NOwe, after that they had ſupped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thoughte Tobias vpõ ꝓ wordes of ꝓ Angell: & tooke oute of hys bagg, a peece of ꝓ leuer of ꝓ fyſhe, & layd it vpõ the hote coles. So the Angell Raphael toke holde of the deuyll, & ſente hym awaye and bounde hym in the wyldernelle of ꝓ hyer Egypte. Then ſpake Tobias vnto ꝓ virgin, & ſayde: Up Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto GOD to daye, tomorowe, & ouermorowe: for theſe nyghetes wyll we reconcile oure ſelues wt GOD, & when the thyrde holye nyghte is paſte, we ſhall ioyne together in the dutye of maryage. For we are the chyldren of holye mẽ, and we may not come together, as the Heathen, that knowe not GOD.

Then ſtoode they vp bothe together, and beſoughte GOD earneſtlye, that he wolde preſerue them. And Tobias ſayde: O LORD GOD of oure fathers, praiſed be thou of heauen and earth of ꝓ ſeeweles, & floudes, & of all thy creatures ꝓ be therein. Thou madeſt Adam of the *moulde of the earth, & gaueſt hym Eua for an helper. And nowe LORD thou knoweſt knowest that it is not because of volup vpon vs: and let vs bothe come hole ād

And aboute the cocke crowynge it happened, that Raguell called hys seruaundes, and they wente wyth him to make a graue. For he sayde it is chaun sed nowe vnto hym paraduenture, as it did vnto the otther seuen men, that made the graue, Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende o whych when she came into the cham and broughte good tidynges. Thē Ra

LORDE, and sayde: Prayse be thou, O LORD GOD of Israel for it is not hap pened vnto vs, as we thoughte. For thou haste dealte mercyfully with vs, and put awaye from vs the enemye ẏ persecuted vs, and haste shewed merci vnto yonder two beloued. O LORDE cause them to magnifie the more per fectlye, ond offer the sacrifice of thi prai se, & of theyr health: that al people maie knowe that thou onelye arte GOD in all the earth.

And immedyatlye, Raguel comma-unded his seruauntes to fyl the graue that they had made wyth earth afore it was lyghte, and bad his wyfe prepa re a feaste, and to make ready all thyn-ges that were necessarye for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat knye also, and foure wethers to be slayne and meates tobe prepared for all his neighbours and frēdes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remaine w him two wekes. As for al the good ẏ he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made thys wyttynge, that the halfe whyche remained, shulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr deathe.

be sory in hys mynde Nowe seyst thou howe earnestly Raguel hath required me, so that I cannot saye hym naye. B

Then toke Raphael foure of Ragu-els seruaūtes, & two camels, & wēte vn to Rages ẏ citie of ẏ Meedes: & when he had foūde Gabelus, he gaue him hys hāde wrytynge, & receaued all ẏ mony.
He tolde hym also of Tobias ẏ sōne of Tobie, howe all thinges had happened & caused hym to come w him to ẏ mary age. Nowe whē he came in to ẏ house of Raguell, he found Tobias sytting at ẏ table: & he leaped vp, & thei kyssed one an other, & Gabelus wepte, ād praysed C GOD, & saide: ẏ blessynge of ẏ GOD of Israel haue thou, for thou arte ẏ sōne of a ryghte vertuous & iuste man, & of o ne ẏ feareth GOD, & geueth greate almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe & you re elders, ẏ ye maye se youre children & youre chylders chyldren, vnto ẏ thyrde & fourth generacīō, & youre seed be bles sed of ẏ GOD of Israel, whyche raygneth worlde w oute ēde. And whē they all had sayde Amen: they wēte to ẏ feaste, but wyth ẏ feare of the LORDE hel- D de they the feaste of the maryage.

The.x. Chapter.

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the taryinge of they: sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias wyth his wyfe.

NOwe whyle ponge Tobias made longe tarying by reason of the maryage, hys father was full of care and he auy nesse, and thought what shulde be ẏ cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe.
Or wy shulde he be kepte so longe the re: Paraduenture Gabelus is dead, & no man

noman wyll geue hym ꝑ monye. Thus begāne he to be very ſozowefull, he and Anna hys wyfe wyth hym, and began-ne to weepe bothe together, becauſe theyr ſōne was not come agayne vnto them at ꝑ daye appoynted. As foꝛ hys mother, ſhe wepte with diſcomfoꝛtable teares and ſayd. Wo is me my ſōne. Oh what ayled vs to ſende the awaye into aſtraunge coūtrye, thou lyghte of oure eyes, thou ſtaffe of oure age, thou cōfoꝛt of oure lyfe, thou hope of oure generacion: Seinge all the thynges that we haue, are onlye in the, we ſhulde not ha ue ſente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comfoꝛted her & ſayde:
holde thy tonge, and be not diſcomfoꝛted, oure ſonne is hole and ſounde: the man ꝑ we ſente hym wythall is fayth-full ynoughe. Neuertheleſſe, ſhe myght in no wyſe be cōfoꝛted but daylye wen-te oute, loked aboute, and went aboute al the ſtretes, whereby ſhe thoughte he ſhulde come againe: that (yf it were poſſible) ſhe myghte ſe hym commynge afarre of. But Raguel ſayde vnto hys ſōne in lawe: O tary heare, and I ſhall ſende a meſſenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell hym that thou arte in good health. Tobias ſayde vnto hym: I am ſure, ꝑ my father, and my mother count euery day, & that theyr hertes are ſorie.

So when Raguell prayed Tobias w manye wordes, & wold in no wyſe heare hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, & the halfe parte of al hys good, in ſeruauntes, in hande maydens, in ſhepe, in Camels, in kine, and muche mony, and ſo ſente hym away from hym wyth peace & ioye: & ſayde: The holye Angell of ꝑ LORDE be wyth you in youre iour neye, & bryngе you foꝛth ſafe & ſounde, ꝑ ye maye finde all thynges in good caſe with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye ſee youre chyldrē afoꝛe I dye. So the elders embraced theyr daughter, kyſſed her, and let her go, exhoꝛtynge her to honoure her father & mother in lawe, to loue her huſbande, to rule wel her houſhold, to kepe her houſe in good oꝛder, and to ſhewe her ſelfe fawtleſſe.

The xj. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias lewynge hys wyfe and houſholde in the mydwaye, commeth before with the Angel.
The dreame of his mother lokyng after her ſonne. He is ioyfully receaued of hys father and mother Sara commeth ſeuen dayes after.

AS they were nowe goynge ho me warde agayne, vpō the xj. A daye, they came to Charra, whych lyeth in ꝑ halfe waye towarde Ninyue. And the An gell ſayde: Bꝛother Tobias, thou knoweſt howe thou haſt left thy father, ther foꝛe yf it pleaſe the, we two wyl go befoꝛe, & let the houſholde wyth thy wyfe and ꝑ catell come ſofte & fayer after vs.
And when Tobias was contente that they ſhulde go beſoꝛe, Raphael ſaide vn to him: Take of the gaule of the fyſhe wyth the, foꝛ it ſhalbe neceſſarye. So B Tobias toke of ꝑ gaule, and they went theyr way. But Anna ꝑ mother of Tobias ſate dayly by the waye ſyde vpō ꝑ toppe of an hyl, from whence ſhe might ſe farre about her. And whyle ſhe was wayttinge there, foꝛ hys commynge, ſhe loked a farre of and anone ſhe perceа-ued her ſonne commynge, and ranne & told her huſband ſayinge: Beholde thy ſonne cōmeth. And Raphael ſayd vnto Tobias: As ſoone as thou commeſte in to the houſe, immediatly woꝛſhyppe ꝑ LORDE thy GOD, & geue thanckes vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kiſſe hym, and ſtrycke hys eyes ouer wyth ꝑ gaul of ꝑ fyſhe, that thou haſt bꝛought wyth the. Foꝛ beſure, that hys eyes ſhal ſtreyghte waye be opened, & thy father ſhall ſe the lyghte of heauen, and ſhall reioyce at the lyghte of the. Then ꝑ dog that had bene with thē in theyr iourny, ranne beſoꝛe, and came as a meſſenger, and wagged hys tayle foꝛ gladneſſe.

So the blynde father aroſe, & began- C ne to runne & ſtombled wyth hys feete, and gaue a ſeruaunte his hande, ranne to mete hys ſonne, receaued hym, and kyſſed hym, he and hys wyfe and they beganne to wepe foꝛ Ioye.

Nowe when they had woꝛſhypped & thācked GOD, they ſate downe. Thē toke Tobias of the fyſhes gaul, and an nounted hys fathers eyes: & taryed hal-fe an houre, and then began ꝑ bleмyſh to go out of his eies, lyke as it had bene the whyte ſkyn of an egge: whyche To bias toke, and dꝛewe from his eyes: ād immediatly he receaued his ſyght.

Then they ꝓayſed GOD, he and hys D wyfe and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias ſayd: O LORD GOD of Iſrael, I geue the ꝓayſe & thanckes, foꝛ thou haſt chaſtened me, and made me hole.

And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes, came Sara hys sonnes wyfe also hole and sounde with al the housholde & catel, wyth Camels & muche money of hys wyues, & wyth the money that he had receaued of Gabelus, & he tolde hys father & hys mother al the benefites, whych GOD had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achyor also & Nabath, Tobias syster sonnes came, & were glad, and reioysed wyth hym, by reason of all ỹ good that GOD had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, & were ryghte toyfull enerychon.

The xij. Chapter.

Yonge Tobias rekened vp vnto hys father the pleasures that the Angell dyd him. He offered vnto the Angel halfe the goodes that he brought wyth him.

I THen Tobias called hys sonne vnto hym & sayde: What mayre we geue thys holye man, that went wyth the? Tobias aunswered hys father & sayde: Father, what rewarde shall we geue hym? Or what thynge cã deserue hys benefites? He hath bene my guyde, and broughte me safe agayne: he receaued the mony from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue the euel spirite from her, he hath bene an occacion of gladnesse to her father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of ỹ fish, he hath made the to se the lyght of heauẽ, yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe shulde we worthely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylte desire hym, yf haplye he wyll vouchsafe, to take wyth hym the halfe of all that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke hym aside, and beganne to praye hym, that he wolde be contente to take in good worth the halfe parte of al that they had broughte.

Then sayde he secretly vnto them,
B Prayse ye the GOD of heauẽ, and geue thanckes vnto hym before all men lyuynge, for he hath shewed hys mercye vnto vs. It is good to hyde ỹ kynges secrete, but to shewe & prayse ỹ worckes of GOD it is an honourable thing. Prayer is good with fastynge, & mercie is better thẽ to horde vp treasures of golde. For mercye deliuereth from death, cleẽseth synne, & causeth to fynde euerlastyng lyfe. But they that do sinne, are the enemies of theyr owne soule.

Wherfore I tell you the truthe, and C wyll hyde nothynge from you. When thou prayedest wyth teares, and buryedest the dead, and lefteste thy dyner, and hyddest the dead in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou mightest bury thẽ in the nyght: I offred thy prayer before the LORDE. And because thou wast accepted and beloued of GOD, it was necessarye, that temptaciõ shuld trye the. And nowe hath the LORD sente me to heale the and to delyuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spirite. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seuen that stande before GOD.

When they hearde thys, they were sore afrayed, and trembled, and fel downe vpon theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Angell Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of GOD: geue prayse and thanckes vnto hym.

you thought that I dyd * eate and D dryncke wyth you, but I vse meate ỹ Gen. 18. iudg. 13. is inuisible, and dryncke that cannot be sene of men. Nowe therfore is the tyme that I muste turne agayne vnto hym, that sent me: but be ye thanckeful vnto GOD, and tell oute al hys woderous wozckes.

And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken awaye oute of theyr syghte, so that they sawe him nomoare. Then fell they downe flat vpon theyr faces, by the space of thre houres, and praysed GOD. when they arose vp they tolde all hys wonderous wozckes.

The xiij. Chapter.

I THen olde Tobias opened his mouth and praysed the LORDE and sayde: Greate arte thou O LORD for euermoare, and thy kyngedome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou leadest vnto hel and bringest oute agayne: and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the LORD, ye chyldren of Israel, and prayse hym in the syghte of ỹ Heathen. For amõg the Heathẽ whych knowe hym not hath he scatered you, to ỹ intente ỹ ye shuld shewe furthe his meruelous

meruelous wozckes, and cause them foz to knowe, that there is none other GOD Almyghtye but he. He that chasteneth vs foz oure mysdedes, and foz hys owne mercye sake shall he saue vs.

B Consider then, howe he hath dealte wyth you, and prayse hym wyth feare and dzede, and magnifie ꝑ euerlastyng kynge in your wozkes. I wyl prayse hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie, foz he hath shewed hys maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therefoze O ye sinners, and do righteousnesse befoze GOD, and be suer, that he wyll shewe hys mercy vpon you. As foz me, and my soule, we wil reioyce in GOD. O prayse the LORDE all ye hys chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thanckeful vnto hym, O Jerusalē thou citie of GOD, the LORDE hathe punished the foz the wozckes of thine owne hādes. O pray-se ꝑ LORD in thy good thynges, & geue thankes to the euerlastynge GOD, ꝑ he maye buylde vp hys tabernacle agayne in the, ꝑ he maye cal againe vnto the, al such as be in captiuitie, and ꝑ thou mayest haue ioye foz euermoze. With a fayer lyght shalt thou shyne, & all ꝑ endes of the wozld shal honour ꝑ. The people shal come vnto ꝑ from farre, they shall bringe gyftes, and woz shyppe ꝑ LOR-DE in the, and thy lande shall they haue foz a Sanctuarie, foz they shall call vpon the greate name in the.

C Cursed shall they be that dispise the,
and all that blaspheme the, shalbe condempned: but blessed shall they be that buylde the vp. As foz the, thou shalte re ioyce in thy chyldzen, foz they al shalbe blessed, and gathered together vnto the LORDE. Blessed are they all that loue the & that be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the LORDE, O my soule, foz the LORDE oure GOD hath delyuered hys citie Jerusalem from all her troubles.
I wyll counte my selue happye, yf my seed remayne to she the clearnesse of Je rusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shal be buylded wyth Saphyre, and Sma-ragde, and all the cōpasse of her walles wyth precious stones. All her stretes shalbe paued with whyte marble stone, and in all the stretes shall Alleluia be songe. Praysed be the LORDE, whych hath exalted her, ꝑ hys kingdome maye be vpon her foz euermoze. Amē. And so Tobias made an ende of hys talkynge.

The xiiij. Chapter.

His sonne returneth to Raguel after the decesse of his father and mother.

AND after that Tobias had got ten his sight agayne, he liued. A xlij. yeares, and sawe hys chyl-ders childzen. Nowe when he was, C. and ij. yeare olde, he dyed: and was buried honourablye in Niniue.
Foz when he was lvj. yeares of aege he lost the syght of hys eyes, and when he was lj. yere olde, he gat his syght agay ne. The residue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increased wel in the feare of GOD, and departed in peace. But in the houre of hys death he called vnto hym hys sonne Tobias, and vij. yonge spryngal- B des hys sōnes chyldzen, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at hande, foz the wozde of ꝑ LORD cannot fayle: & our bzethezn that are scatered out of the land of Jsrael, shal come the-ther agayne. And the hole lande of it ꝑ hath ben wast, shalbe fylled: & the house of GOD that was bzent in it shalbe builded agayne: & al such as feare GOD shal returne thether: the Heathen also shal forsake theyz Jdolles, and come to Jerusalem, & dwel there, and all ꝑ kynges of the earthe shalbe glad of her and woz shyppe the LORD GOD of Jsrael.

And therfoze my chyldzen, heare you- C re father: serue the LORDE in ꝑ truth, seke after hys wyll, and do the thynge that pleaseth hym. Commaunde youre childzē that they do rycht: geue almes: be myndefull of GOD, be thanckefull vnto hym in truth, and wyth all theyz power: Heare me nowe therefoze my chyldzen, and byde not heare: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buryed your mother besyde me, get you from hence.
Foz I se that the wyckednesse of it shal bzynge it to destruction and ende.

After the death of hys mother, To- D bias departed awaye frō Niniue, with hys wyfe & chyldzen, & wyth hys chyldzes chyldzen, and came agayne to hys father and mother in lawe, and founde them hole and in good age, and toke the care of them. And he cloſed theyz eyes, and was heire vnto Ragueles goodes, and sawe the fyfte generacion, and hys chyldzes chyldzen. And when he was cxxvij. yeare of age, he died in ꝑ feare of the LORDE, & hys kynſfolkes buryed hym. And all hys poſterite cõtinued in a good lyfe, & holy conuerſacion ſo that they were loued and accepted both of GOD & man: & of al ỳ people of ỳ lande.

¶ The ende of the booke of Tobias.

The booke of Judich.

The fyrſte Chapter.

¶ The buyldynge of Ecbatanis. The victorie of Nabuchodonozor agaynſt Arpharad. The meſſengers of Nabuchodonozor are diſpiſed.

A Rpharad the kyng of ỳ Medes ſubdued many people vnto hys dominion, & buylded a noble ſtronge citie, whiche he called Ecbatanis: The walles of it made he of fre ſtone, foure ſquared, ſeuẽtye cubites hyghe, & thyrtye cubites brode. He made towers there vpon an hundred cubites hye. But vpon the foure cozners euerye ſyde was twentye foote broad. He made the poztes in the heygth, lyke as the towers. Thys kynge truſted in hys myghtie hooſt, and in his glozious charettes.

B So in ỳ twelueth yeare of hys raygne it happened that Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Aſſyrians (whyche raygned in the great citie of Niniue) foughte agaynſte Arpharad, and ouercame hym in the great felde called Ragau, beſyde Euphrates and Tibris, ãd Hydaſpis in the felde of Arioth ỳ kynge of the Elymeis.

Then was the kyngedome of Nabuchodonozor exalted, and hys hert was lifte vp: and he ſente vnto al them that dweite in Cilicia, in Damaſcus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen ỳ dweite in Carmel and Cedar, and to ſuche as dweite in Galile in the greate felde of Eſdrelom, to all thẽ toat dweite in Samarya, and beyond the water of Jozdane vnto Jeruſalẽ and ỳ hole lande of Geſem, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto al theſe dyd Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Aſſyriãs ſende meſſengers But they al wyth one conſent wolde not agre vnto him, and ſente the meſſaũgers agayne emptie & put them awaye wythout honoure. Then Nabuchodonozor the kynge toke indignaciõ at all thoſe landes, and ſware by hys throne, and by hys kyngedome, that he wolde be auenged of al thoſe coũtryes. And when he had ſlayne Arpharad in the mountaynes of Ragau he retorned to Niniuen. And there ſeaſtid his ſouldiers cxx. dayes.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is ſente of Nabuchodonozor to ſubdue all the worlde. The preparaciõs and perſute of Holofernes.

IN the thyrtenth yeare of kynge Nabuchodonozor, vpon the twelue day of ỳ fyrſte moneth, it was deuyſed in the court of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of the Aſſyrians, that he wolde defende hym ſelfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all hys captaynes, and men of warre and ſhewed them hys ſecrete counſayle, & tolde them that hys purpoſe was, to bzynge the hole earth vndez hys dominion. Nowe when they were al contente wyth thys sayynge. Nabuchodonozor the kynge called Holofernes, the cheſe captayne of hys warres, and ſayd vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynſt all the kyngedomes of the Weſte, and ſpecially agaynſte thoſe that haue diſpiſed my cõmaundemente. Thou ſhalte ſpare no realme, all ſtronge cities ſhalte thou bzinge in ſubiectiõ vnto me

Then Holofernes called together al the captaynes, and rulers of al the power in Aſſyria, and muſtred the ſouldyers vnto the hooſte (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hũdzed and twentye thouſande fightyng men vpon foote, and twelue thouſande archers vpon hozſebacke. All hys ozdinaunce ſente he a foze wyth an innumerable multitude of camels ſo that the hooſte was well prouided foz, wyth oxen and ſmall cattell, and that wythout nomber. He cauſed corne to be prepared oute of all Syria foz hys hooſte. Muche golde and ſyluer alſo toke he oute of the kynges houſe. So he toke hys iourney, he and all hys hooſt wyth charettes, hozſemen, and archars, of whom whome there were so many, ꝑ they couered the grounde of the land, lyke the grashopers.

C And when he was gone paste the borders of ꝑ Assyrians, he came towarde the great moũtaynes of Ange, whyche lye vpon the lefte syde of Cilicia: and so he wente vp into al their castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthye citie of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the chyldren of Tharsis, & the Ismalytes, whyche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpõ the South syde of the lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the highe cities that were there, frõ the broke of Mambre to the see: and he tooke the borders in from Cilicia, vnto the coastes of Japhet towarde the South: He caryed a waye all the Madianites, and spoyled all theyr goodes, and whosoeuer withstoode him he slewe thẽ wyth the swearde.

After thys he wẽt downe in to ꝑ feld of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, & brente vp all the corne and all ꝑ trees, and caused the vines to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fell vpon all them that dwelt vpon the earth.

The. iij. Chapter.

¶ Kynges become wyllyngly subiecte to Holofernes. The tyrannie and crueltye of hym.

I TO the kynges and princes of all cities & landes sente theyr Ambasadours: namelye they of Syria, & Mesopotamia, Syria, Sobal, and Lybia, & Cecilia which came to Holofernes, and sayde: Let thi wrath ceasse towarde vs. It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonosor wyth oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto ꝑ, then that we shulde dye & be slaine: & receaue greate hurte. All oure cities and possessions, al moũtaynes and hylles, feldes, great and smal cattell, shepe, goates horses, & camels, al oure goodes, & householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiectiõ beit altogether. We oure selues also, and oure children wylbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peceable lorde, and vse oure seruice at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes, downe from the mountaynes wyth horsemen, & greate power, & conquered all stronge defensed cities & all ꝑ dweite in the land and out of al cities he tooke strõge mẽ and soche as were mete for ꝑ warre to helpe hym. There came suche a feare al so vpon those countries, that ꝑ indwellers of al the cities, the prices & rulers and the people together wente forth to mete him as he came, & receaued hym honourably wᵗ garlandes and torches, wᵗ daunces, tabrettes and pypes. B

Neuertheiesse, thought they did this. C yet myght they not swage hys rigorous stomacke: but he destroyed theyr cities, & hewed downe theyr woodes. For Nabuchodonosor ꝑ kinge had cõmaunded hym ꝑ he shulde roote out all ꝑ goddes of the land: to ꝑ intente ꝑ he onelye might be called & taken for ꝑ god of the nations: which Holofernes wᵗ hys power brought vnder him. So went he thorowe Syria Sobali, & thorowe all Apamia, & al Mesopotamia, & came to ꝑ Idumeans, in ꝑ lande Geba, & Scythopolis, & toke theyr cities & remayned there thyrtye dayes wherin he caused all the hole multitude of hys hoost to be gathered together.

The. iiij. Chapter.

¶ Israel requireth helpe of God/agaynst Holofernes. They faste and praye.

WHen the chyldren of Israel ꝑ dwelt in Iewry herd thys, they were sore afrayde of hym. There came suche tremblynge also & feare vpon them leste that he shulde do vnto the citie of Ierusalem, and the temple of ꝑ LORD, as he had done to other cities ād theyr temples. So they sent into all Samaria round aboute vnto Jericho, to take in and occupye all the toppes of ꝑ mountaynes, and make faste the townes with walles, and prepare corne, for thẽ agaynste the battayle. I

Joachim also the preaste, wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Esdrelon (whych lyeth ouer agaynste the great felde by Dothain) and vnto al those by whome men myght haue passage vnto them, ꝑ they shulde take in ꝑ wayes of the mountaynes, wherby there myght be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, and that they shulde holde diligent watche where anye strayte was betwyxt ꝑ moũtaynes. And ꝑ chyldren of Israel dyd as Joachi ꝑ preaste of ꝑ

LORD had commaunded them. And al the people cryed earnestly, & humbled theyr soules wt fastynges and prayers, they & theyr wyues. The preastes put on hery clothes, and laide the yonge babes before the temple of the LORDE, & couered the aulter of the LORD wyth an hery cloth. And wyth one accorde they cryed vnto the LORDE GOD of Israel, that theyr chyldren shulde not be
B geuen into a praye, & their wyues into a spoyle, þ theyr cities shulde not be layed waste, & þ theyr Sanctuarie shulde not be vnhalowed, & so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heathen.

Then Joachim the hye preast of the LORDE wente rounde aboute al Israel, & spake vnto them saying: Be ye sure that þ LORDE wyl heare youre peticions, yf ye continue stedfaste in fastynges & prayers in þ syghte of the LORD Remembre Moses the seruaunte of the LORD, whyche ouerthrewe Amelec (that trusted in myghte and power, in his hooste, hyldes, charettes and horsemē) not wyth weapons, but wt holy prayers. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be, yf ye continue in thys worcke that ye haue be gonne. So vpō thys exhortacion, they cōtinued in prayer before the LORD: In so much that they whych offered burnt sacrifices dyd nou offer all maner of offerynges vnto the LORDE, beynge arayed in hery clothes, and had asshes vpō theyr heades. And they al besoughte GOD from theyr hole herte, that he wolde visit hys people of Israel.

The v. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is discontente wyth the Jewes. Achior shweth Holofernes the meruelles of God done vnto the Jewes, for the which thynge the rulers vnder Holofernes were very āgrye wyth him:

AND worde came to Holofernes (the price of the warre of the Assyrians) þ the chyldren of Israel prepared thē selues to make resistaunce, ād howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaines. Thē was he exceadynge wroth and called all the princes of Moab, & þ captaines of Ammon, and sayde vnto them: Tell me, what people is thys, that kepeth in þ mountaynes? Or what maner of cities are they: what is theyr power: Or what maner of hooste haue they: who is theyr captaine: And why do they dispise vs (more then all those that dwell in the Easte) and come not forth to meete vs, that they myghte receaue vs with peace? Then Achior the captaine of al the Ammonites answered, and sayde: Syr, yf yt please the to heare, I wyll tel the truth before, that conserning thys people that dwel in þ mountaynes, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

Thys people is of the generacion of the Chaldees: they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe þ
B godes of theyr fathers that were in þ lande of the Caldees, & so for soke they þ custome of theyr fore fathers (wyche had many goddes) ād worshypped one GOD, that made heauen & earth: which also commaunded them that they shulde goo from thence, and dwel at Harā. Nowe, when ther came a dearth into þ hole land, they wente downe to Egypt and there they dwelte * foure hundred Gen. 4 yeares, in þ which they multiplied greatly, that theyr hooste myghte not be nombred. And when þ kynge of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued them in buyldynge of hys cities wyth making of claye & bryke, they cryed vnto GOD theyr LORDE, wyche punished the hole lande of Egypte wyth dyuers plages.

Nowe when the kynge of Egypte let them go theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them and to brynge them agayne into hys seruice, while they were flynge awaye, þ GOD of heauē opened the see so that the waters stode faste vpon bothe sydes as a wall, and these wēre the rowe the botome of the see drye shod. In the whyche place when an innumerable people of the Egyptiās folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed wyth the waters: that there remayned not one to tell them that came after, howe it happened So when thys people was passed thorowe the red see, they came into the wildernesse of moūt Sina, where neuer man myghte dwell afore. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myghte drynke, and forty yeares had they meat frō heauen. Whersoeuer they went, without bowe ād arowe, wythoute buckler or swearde theyr GOD foughte for thē, & caused them to haue the victorie.

yea,

yea, noman was hable to hurte thys people, excepte it were, that they depar D ted vnfaythfully from ꝑ worshyppyng of the LORDE theyr GOD. But as oft as they worshypped any other beſyde theyr GOD, he gaue thē ouer to be ſpoyled, to be ſlayne, and to be put to confuſion. Neuertheleſſe, as oft as they were ſorye for theyr departynge from ꝑ worſhyp of theyr GOD, the ſame GOD of heauen gaue them power and ſtrengthe to wythſtande theyr enemies.

Moreouer, they ſlue the kyng of the Cananites, Jebuſytes, Pherezytes, Hethytes, Euytes, and Amorytes, & al the myghtye in Heſebon & toke theyr lādes and cities in poſſeſſion: and ſo longe as they ſynned not in the ſyghte of theyr GOD, it wente wel wyth thē, for theyr GOD hateth vnryghteouſneſſe. For in tymes paſte when they wente oute of ꝑ waye whych GOD had geuen thē, that they ſhulde walke in it, they were deſtroyed in diuers battayles of many nacions: and many of them were caryed awaye priſoners vnto a ſtraunge contrie. But nowe lately they haue turned them ſelues agayne vnto the LORDE theyr GOD, & are come togethere agayne out of the countries wher they were ſcatered abroade: & thus haue they conquered theſe mountaynes, & dwell therein: and as for Jeruſalem wher ꝑ Sanctuarie is, they haue it agayne in poſſeſſion.

And therfor my LORDE, make diligent inquiſicion, yf this people haue done wyckednelſe in the ſyghte of theyr GOD, thē let vs goo vp agaynſte them, for doubtleſſe theyr GOD ſhal delyuer them into thy hādes, and ſubdue them vnto thy power: But yf thys people haue not dyſpleaſed theyr GOD, we ſhall
E not be hable to wyth ſtande them, for theyr GOD ſhall defende them: and ſo ſhall we be a ſhame to all the worlde.

Nowe when Achior had ſpoken oute theſe wordes, all the greate men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to ſlaye hym, and ſayde one to a nother: What is he, that dare ſay, that the chyldren of Jſraell are hable to withſtāde Nabuchodonoſor ꝑ kynge, & his hooſt: where as they are an vnweapened people, wythoute ſtrenghte, or vnderſtandynge of ꝑ feates of warre. That Achyor therfore may knowe ꝑ he hath dyſ-ceaued vs, we wyll go vp to the mountaynes: when the myghtye mē of them are taken, he alſo ſhalbe ſtrycke wyth ꝑ the ſweard, ꝑ all people maye knowe, ꝑ Nabuchodonoſor is ꝑ GOD of ꝑ earth, & ꝑ there is none other wothoute hym.

The vj. Chapter.

¶ Achior is commuted into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. The prayer for the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

SO whē they had lefte of ſpeakynge Holofernes toke ſore indignacion, and ſayde vnto Achior: For ſomuch as thou haſt prophecied vnto vs ſaying: that ꝑ people of Jſrael ſhalbe defēded of theyr GOD, J wyl ſhewe the, that there is no GOD but Nabuchodonoſor. yee, when we ſlaye them all (as one man) thou alſo ſhalt periſhe with them thorowe the ſweard of the Aſſyrias, and all Jſrael ſhalbe deſtroyed wyth the, & then thou ſhalte fele, that Nabuchodonoſor is ꝑ Lorde of the whole earth. Then ſhall the ſweard of my knighthode go thorowe thy ſydes, & thou ſhalte fall downe ſtrycke amōge the wounded of Jſrael, and ſhalt not come to thy ſelfe agayne
B but be vtterly deſtroied wyth thē. But yf thou thinckeſt thy prophecy to be true, why doeſte thou thē change thy coloure, why arte thou afrayde: Thynckeſt thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed: But ꝑ thou mayſt knowe that thou ſhalte fele theſe thinges wyth them, beholde, frō thys houre forth wyl J ſende the to yonder people, that when the punichemente of my ſweard (whyche they haue worthily deſerued) falleth vpon them, thou mayeſt be punished wyth them.

So Holofernes commannded hys ſeruauntes to take Achior, and carye hym to Bethulia, and to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Jſrael. Then Holofernes ſeruauntes toke hym, and wente thorowe the playne felde. But when they drewe nygh vnto the mountaynes, the ſlynge caſters came out agaynſte them. Neuertheleſſe, they gat them awaye by the ſyde of the mountayne, and bounde Achior hande and fote to a tree, and ſo left hym bounde wyth wythes, and turned agayne vnto theyr LORDE, Notwythſtandynge, the chyldren of Iſrael wente downe from Bethulia, came vnto hym, looſed hym, brought hym into Bethulia, ſet him in the myddeſte of ꝑ people, and aſked hym what the matter was, that the Aſſyrians had lefte hym bounde.

C Oſias, the ſonne of Michma, of the tribe Symeon, & Charbis (whych is alſo called Gothoniel) were the principal rulers at ꝑ ſame tyme. Nowe whē Achior ſtode in the myddeſt of the Senatoures, and before them all, he tolde them what aunſwere he gaue Holofernes to ꝑ thyng that he aſked hym, and howe Holofernes people wolde haue ſlayne hym for ſo ſayinge: & how Holofernes hym ſelfe was wrothe, & cōmaūded hym for the ſame cauſe to be delyuered vnto the Iſraelites: ꝑ whē he ouercame the chyldren of Iſrael, he myghte commaunde Achior alſo to be put to deathe wt diuers tormentes, becauſe he ſayde the GOD of heauen is theyr defender. And whē Achior hadplaynely tolde oute all theſe thynges, al ꝑ people fell downe vpon theyr faces, prayſyng the LORDE, & poured oute theyr prayers together vnto the LORD, wyth a generall complaynte and weapynge, & ſayde: O LORDE GOD of heauen & of earth, beholde theyr pryde: & loke vpon oure lowlyneſſe, & conſider howe it ſtādeth wyth thy ſayncte, & make it to be D knowne, that thou forſakeſt not thoſe, whych holde them faſte by the, & howe that thou bryngeſt them lowe ꝑ preſume of them ſelues, & make theyr boſt in theyr owne ſtrength. So when the wepynge & prayer of the people (whyche they had made the hole daye lōge) was ended, they comforted Achior ſayinge: The GOD of oure fathers, whoſe power & ſtrengthe thou haſte prayſed, ſhall ſo rewarde the, that thou ſhalte rather ſe theyr deſtruction. When the LORDE oure GOD then ſhal geue hys ſeruauntes thys libertie: GOD be alſo with the amonge vs: ſo that if it pleaſe the, thou wyth all thyne mayeſt dwell wyth vs.

Nowe when Oſias had ended the counſayle he toke hym into hys houſe, and made a great ſupper, called the elders to it: & ſo they refreſhed them ſelues after the faſtyng. And afterwarde was all ꝑ people called together whyche made theyr prayers al the nyght longe in the congregation, & beſoughte the GOD of Iſraell for helpe.

The vij. Chapter.

¶ Bethulia is beſeged of Holofernes. The people requireth helpe of GOD. They of Bethulia wold geue ouer the citie for want of water. The prayer of the people wyth teares and lamentacion

THe nexte day Holofernes cō- A maunded hys hoſt to go vp agaynſte Bethulia. There was an. C. & xx. M. fyghtynge men on foote, & xxij. M. horſe men, beſyde the preparynge of them ꝑ were woūne: and came to them on euerye ſyde out of the countreys & cities wiche he had taken. All theſe prepared them ſelues vnto the battayle agaynſte the Iſraelites, and came on by the hyl ſide, vnto ꝑ toppe that loketh ouer agaynſt Dothain, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Eſdraelon.

Nowe when the chyldren of Iſraell ſawe ſo great a multitude of the Aſſyri- B ans, they fel downe flat vpon ꝑ ground, ſtrowed aſhes vpon theyr heades, and prayed wyth one accorde, that ꝑ GOD of Iſrael wolde ſhewe hys mercye vpō hys people. And ſo they toke theyr weapens and ſat betwene the mountaynes in ꝑ narowe place, and kepte the waye, daye and nyghte But whyle Holofernes was going about, he founde ꝑ water ſpryng, which from the South ſyde was conueyed into ꝑ citie by a condute: thys commaunded he, to dyrecte another waye, and to cut theyr condite in ſonder. There were wels alſo not far from ꝑ walles, whych they vſed ſecretlye, more for pleaſure thē for neceſſitie.

Then wente the Amonytes, and the C Moabites vnto Holofernes, and ſaide: The chyldren of Iſrael truſte nether in ſpeare nor arowe, but haue taken, in & kepte the mountaynes and hylles that thou mayſt not eaſly ouercome thē, ſet men to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water oute of thē: ſo ſhalte thou deſtroye them wyth oute ſwearde, or at ꝑ leeſt they ſhalbe ſo feble, ꝑ they muſt befayne to geue ouer the citie, whych they thincke not hable to be woone: for ſo much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. Theſe wordes pleaſed Holofernes wel and all hys men of war and he ſet an hundreth at euery well rounde about:

And when thys watch had endured D twentye twentye dayes, the Cisterns and all ꝑ had water, fayled them ꝑ dweite in the citie of Bethulia, so they in ꝑ hole citie had not dryncke ynoughe for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came ꝑ men and wemen, yonge personnes and chyldren al vnto Ozias, and sayde al wyth one voyce: GOD be iudge betwyrte vs and ꝑ, for thou hast delte euell wyth vs: thou woldest not speake peceably with the kynge of ꝑ Assyrians, therfore hath GOD deliuerid vs in theyr handes, and there is no mā to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe before theyr eyes in thyrste & greate destruction. Therefore gather nowe together all ꝑ people ꝑ be in the citie, ꝑ we maie al yelde oure selues wyllingely vnto ꝑ people of Holofernes, for better it is ꝑ we be captiue and prayse the LORD with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scorne & shamed of euerye man when we se oure wyues & chyldrē dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth thys day to recorde: and the GOD of our fathers (whych punisheth vs accordynge, to ꝑ deseruynge of oure synnes) and gyue you warnynge, that ye giue vp ꝑ citie nowe into the power of Holofernes hoste, that our end maye be shorte with the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe, for want of water and for thyrste.

¶ When they had spokē out those wordes, there was a great weppyng & howlynge in ꝑ whole congregacion, & that of euery man: and they cryed an hole houre lōge vnto GOD wyth one voyce, sayig: we haue sinned with our fathers we haue done amysse, we haue delte wyckedly. Thou that arte gracious, haue mercye vpon vs, punische our vnryghteousnesse, wyth thyne owne scourge, & geue not those ouer that knowlege the, vnto a people whych knowe the not, lest they saye amonge the Heathen: were is theyr GOD.

And when they were so werye wyth thys cryinge and weppynge, that they helde theyr tonges, Ozias, stode vp w watry eyes, & sayde O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, & let vs wayt yet these fyue dayes for mercye of the LORDE, paraduenture he shall put a waye hys indignacion, and geue glorye vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not whē these fyue dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Judith whych reproueth the auncientes because they tēpted the LORD She also moueth them to encorage and herten the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynste the enemies of the Jewes.

AND it happened when these wordes came to the eares of A
Judith a wyddowe, whych was ꝑ daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Osia, the sonne of Elay, ꝑ sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, ꝑ sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Euam, the sonne of Nathania, the sōne of Salathiel, the sonne of Simeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whych dyed in ꝑ dayes of the barly haruest. For whyle he was byndyng ꝑ sheues together in the felde the heate came vpon hys heade, & he dyed at Bethulia, hys citie, and there was he buryed beside hys father.

Nowe was Judith hys desolate wyd dowe thre yeares and syre monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a preuye chamber, where she dweit, beynge closed in with her maydens. She ware a smoke of heare and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbothes, and newe mones: and the solemne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a B very fayer and bewtyfull person. Her husband also had lefte her greate ryches, a plenteous housholde, greate possessions and many catel. Thys Judith was a woman of a very good reporte wyth euery one, for she feared the LORDE greatlye, and there was no bodye that spake an euell worde of her.

When Judith hearde thys, howe Ozias, had promised ꝑ people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the citie vnto the Assyrians, she sente for ꝑ elders Chabrim and Charmum & whē they came to her, she sayde what thing is thys, wherein Ozias hath cōsented, that yf GOD helpe not with in fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer ꝑ citie to the Assyrians: What are ye, ꝑ ye tempt ꝑ LORD: Thys deuyce optayneth no mercy of GOD, but prouoketh hym to wrathe & displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercye of ꝑ LORDE a tyme, & appoynte hym a daie after your wyl:

C Neuertheleſſe, for ſo muche as ꝑ LORDE is pacient, let vs rather repente, pouringe oute teares, and beſechynge hi of grace. For GOD threateneth not as a man, nether wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of mẽ. And therfore let vs hertely fall downe before hym, & ſerue hym wyth a meke ſpirite, and wyth weapynge eyes ſay vnto ꝑ LORDE that he deale wyth vs accordynge to hys owne wyll and mercye: ꝑ lyke as oure herte is nowe vered, and broughte lowe thorowe the pryde of thẽ, it maye be conforted thorowe hys grace: in ſo much as we folowe not the ſynnes of oure fathers, whiche forſoke theyr GOD, and worſhipped other goddes for the whych ſynne they perished with the ſwearde, were ſpoyled & broughte to ſhame, of all theyr enemyes. As for vs we knowe none other GOD but onely hym, for whoſe mercye let vs tary wyth mekeneſſe. He ſhall require and make inquiſicion for oure blonde. from the veracions of oure enemies he ſhall bringe downe all the Heathen that ryſe vp agaynſte vs, and put them to diſhonour, euen ꝑ LORD our GOD

D Therfore deare brethren, ſeyng ye are ꝑ honourable and elders in the people of GOD, vnto whome all the people haue reſpect, and vpon whome the people ſtandeth lyfte vp theyr hertes wyth youre exhortacio ꝑ they maye call to remẽbraũce, howe oure fathers alſo in tymes paſt were tẽpted, ꝑ they myght be proued, yf they worſhippid theyr GOD a ryghte. They oughte to remẽbre, howe* our father Abrahã beynge tẽpted, Gen. 22. a. and tryed thorowe manye tribulacios, was founde a louer and frẽde of GOD. So was Jacob, ſo was Moſes and all they that pleaſed GOD beynge tryed thorowe many troubles, were founde ſteadfaſte in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not theyr temptacions wyth the feare of GOD but put them ſelues forth wyth vnpacience and murmurynge agaynſte GOD, periſhed of ꝑ deſtroyer, and were ſlayne of ſerpentes. And therfore ſhulde not we vndertake to be auenged for the thynge that is done vnto vs, but conſider, ꝑ al theſe puniſhementes are farre leſſe then oure ſynnes and myſdedes. Beleuyng alſo that thys correccion commeth vnto vs (as to the ſeruauntes of GOD) for amendemente, and not for oure deſtruccion.

Then ſayde Ozias, and the elders vnto Judith: All that thou ſpakeſt, is true E and noman can reproue thy wordes. Pray thou for vs nowe therfore vnto GOD, for thou arte an holy woman, & feareſt GOD. And Judith ſayde vnto them: Seing, ye knowe that my wordes are of GOD, then proue my counſel and deuyſe, yf yt be of GOD: and beſech GOD that he wyl bring my cõſel to goode end.

Thus haue I deuyſed: ye ſhall ſtande this nyghte before the porte, and I wyll goo forthe wyth Abra my mayde. Praye ye therefore vnto GOD: that he wyll graciouſly remember hys people of Iſrael whithin fyue dayes, as ye haue ſaide. As for the thyng that I goo in hande with all aſke ye no queſtions of yt, tyl I opẽ it vnto you my ſelfe: do ye nothynge elles but praye vnto ꝑ LORDE youre GOD for me. Then Ozias, the Prince of the people of Juda, ſayd vnto her: Goo thy waye in peace, the LORDE be with the, that we maye be auẽged of our enemies. And ſo they wẽte frome her agayne.

The. ix. Capter.

¶ The prayer of Judith for the victorie.

NOwe when they were gone theyr waye, Judith wẽt into her cloſet, put on an hearie ſmoke, ſtrawed aſhes vpon her heade, fel downe before ꝑ LORD, & cryed vnto him ſaying: O LORD GOD of my father* Simeon, whych gaueſte Gen. 34.
hym aſwearde for a defence agaynſte ꝑ enemies that vſed violence and wylfulneſſe, and that rauyſhed the virgine & put her to dyſhoneſtye. Thou that gaueſt theyr wyues into a praye, & theyr daughters into captiuitie, and all their praye for a ſpoyle vnto thy ſeruauntes whyche beare a zele vnto the: helpe me, a wyddowe, O LORDE my GOD I beſeche the. For thou haſte done all thynges frõ the begynnyge: and loke what thou haſte taken in hande and deuyſed it came euer to paſſe. For all thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgemẽtes are done in thi euerlaſtynge fore knowlige

O loke nowe vpon the armyes of the Assyrians lyke as it was thy pleasure some tyme to loke vpon the hoost of the Egyptians, when they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruaũtes, and put theyr truste in theyr charettes, horsemen, and in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedest vpõ theyr hoost, castinge a thyke darckenesse before them: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwelued them.

B Euen so LORDE let it go wyth these, that truste in the power & multitude of theyr men of warre, in theyr charettes, arrowes, & speares, & knowe not þ thou only arte oure GOD, whyche destroyest warres from the begynnynge, and þ thou arte þ LORDE. O lyfte vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer frõ the begynnyng, & in thy power brig theyr power to naughte: cause theyr myghte to fall to wrath. They make their boost, that thy wyll vnhalowe ãd defyle thy Sãctuarie, and to wast þ tabernacle of thy name, and to caste downe the horne of thyne aulter wt theyr sweorde. Bringe to passe (O LORDE) that the pryde of the enemie be cutte downe wyth hys owne sweorde, that he may be taken wt þ snares of hys eyes in me, & that thou mayeste smyte hym wyth þ loue of my C lyppes. O geue me a steadfest mynde, that I maye dispise hym & hys strẽgth, and that I maye destroy hym.

Thys shall bringe thy name an euerlastynge remembraunce, yf the hande of a womã ouer throwe hym. *For thy power (O LORDE) standeth not in the powwer of men, neyther haste thou anye pleasure in the strengthe of þ horses. There was neuer proude parsone that pleased the, but in the prayer of þ humble and meeke hathe thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauẽs, thou maker of the waters, & LORDE of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callynge vpõ the, and puttynge my truste in thy mercye. Remembre thy couenaunte O LORDE: & minister wordes in my mouthe, & stablyshe thys deuyce in my herte that thy house maye cõtinue styll in holynesse, and that all the Heathen maye knowe that thou arte God, and that there is none other but thou.

The x. Chapter.

Judith decketh her selfe to go to Holofernes. The blessinge that the elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in love wyth Judith.

AND when she had lefte of A cryinge vnto þ LORD, she rose vp from þ place where she had lyne flat before þ LORD, & called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the hearye cloth from her, put of þ garmentes of wyddowhode, washed her bodye, anoynted her selfe wyth precious thinges, of swete sauoure, bryoyded and platted her heare, set an houe vpõ her head, and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slyppers vpon her fette, armeletes, spanges, earinges, fyngerrynges, & decked her selfe wyth all her beste araye.

The LORDE gaue her also a speciall bewtye and fayernesse (for al thys deckynge of her selfe, was not done for anye voluptuousnesse and pleasure of þ flesche, but of a ryghte discretion & vertue, therefore dyd the LORDE increase her beutye,) so that she was creeadige amiable, and welfauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wyne, a pott wyth oyle, pottage, cakebreade and chese, & went her way.

Nowe when she came to the porte of B the citie, she founde Ozias, & the elders of the citie waytynge there. Whyche when they sawe her, they were astonyed, & maruelled greatlye at her bewtye. Neuertheless, they askee no question at her, but let her go, sayinge: The GOD of oure fathers geue the hys grace, and wyth hys power perfourme all the deuice of thy hert, that Jerusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde wyth one voyce: so be it: so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the LORDE, and wente oute at the porte, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute þ sprynge of þ daye, the spyes of þ Assyrians met wyth her, and tooke her, sayinge: whence cõmeste thou: Or whether goest thou: She aunswered: I am a daughter of the Hebrues, & am fled frõ thẽ for I knowe þ they shalbe geuẽ vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought sorowe to yelde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mercye in youre syghte. Therfore, haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the Prince Holofernes, & tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shewe hym, howe he maye come by them and wynne them, so that not one mã of hys hoste shall perishe.

that

And when these men had hearde her wordes, & considred her fayer face they were astoyned (for they wondred at her excellente beawty) and sayde vnto her: Thou haste saued thy lyfe by fyndynge out thys deuyce, that thou woldeste come downe to oure lorde: and be thou sure, that whē thou commest vnto hym he shall intreate the well, and thou shalte please hym at the hert. So they brought her vnto Holofernes pauilion, and tolde hym of her. Nowe when she came in before hi, immediatly he was ouercome, and taken wyth her bewtye. Then sayd hys seruauntes: who wold dispise the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre wemen: Should we not by reason fyghte agaynste them for these: So when Judith sawe Holofernes, sittynge in a canapie, that was wrought of purple, sylcke, gold, Smaragde, & precious stones, she looked faste vpon hym and fell downe vpon ỳ earthe. And Holofernes seruantes toke her vp agayne at theyr lordes commaundemente.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes requireth of Judith the cause of her comynge, wherby greeth hym a subtel answere.

THen sayde Holofernes vnto her Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne herte, for I neuer hurte mã that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for they people, yf they had not dispised me, I shulde not haue lyfte vp my speare agaynste them. But tell me nowe, what is ỳ cause that thou art departed from them, & wherefore art thou come vnto vs.

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handemayden, for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the LORD shall brige thy matter to a prosperous effecte: as truly as Nabuchodonosor ỳ lorde of the lande lyueth, and as truly as his power lyueth, which is in the, to the punishemente of all men that go wronge, all men shall not onelye be subdued vnto hym thorowde the, but all ỳ beastes also of the feld. For all the people spake of thy prudente actiuitie: and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onelye art good and myghtye in all his kyngedome, and thy discretion is commended in all landes.

The thynge is manifest also, ỳ Achior spake, and it is wel knowē, what thou commaundest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a suretye, ỳ our GOD is so wrathe wyth vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath shewed by hys Prophetes vnto the people, howe that for theyr synnes he wyll delyuer them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israell, knowe that they haue so displeased theyr GOD, they are sore afrayed of the.

They suffer great hunger also, and for want of water, they are dead nowe in a maner. Moreouer, they are appoynted to slaye all theyr catel that they maye dryncke the bloude of them, and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamētes of theyr GOD (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne, and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, ỳ they muste nedes be destroyed. Wherfore whē I thy handemayden perceaued, I fled from them and the LORDE hath sente me vnto the, to shewe ỳ these thynges For I thy handmayden worshypped GOD euen now here beside ỳ, and thy handemayden shall go forth, & I wyll make my prayer vnto GOD, and shall tell me when he will rewarde thē their synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bring the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalte haue all the people of Israel, as the shepe wythout a shepeard: there shall not so much as one dogge barke agaynste the for these thynges are shewed me, by ỳ prouidence of GOD: and for so much as GOD is displeased wyth them, he hath sent me to tel ỳ the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes & all his seruauntes, which merueled at the wisdom of her, and sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtie and discretion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: GOD hath done well, that he hath sente the hether before thy people that thou maiest geue thē into oure hādes.

And

And for so muche as thy promise is good, yf GOD performe it vnto me, he shall be my GOD also, and thou shalte be excellente & greate in the courte of Nabuchodonozor, ād thy name shalbe spoken of in all the lande.

The.xij. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes cōmaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desireth licence to goo oute in the nighte season to praye / ād obtayneth it. Bagoas is sent vnto her / to move her to come into Holofernes to a bāket / and she cōmeth. Holofernes is droncken.

Then commaunded he her to goo in where hys treasure laye, & charged that she shulde haue her dwellynge there, ād appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (lest I displease my GOD) but wyll eate of suche as I haue broughte wyth me. Thē sayde Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thynges þ thou haste brought wyth þ fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith saide As truly as thou lyuest my lorde thy handamayden shall not spend all thys, tyll GOD haue brought to passe in my hande thinges þ I haue deuised.

So hys seruauntes broughte her in to the tent, wher as he had appounted. And as she was goynge in, she desired that she myghte haue leaue to go forth by nyghte, and before daye to her prayer and to make intercession vnto the LORDE. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto GOD those thre dayes.

And so in the nyghte season she wente forth into the vallye of Bethulia, ād washed her selfe in þ well water. Then wente she vp and besoughte þ LORDE GOD of Israel, That he wold sprospere her waye for the delyueraunce of his people. And so she wente in & remained cleane in her tente, tyll she toke her meate in the euening.

Upon the fourth day it happened, þ Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruaūtes, & sayde vnto Bagoe his chamberlayne: Go thy way, and counsel this Hebruesse, that she may be wyllynge to cōsente to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians that a woman shulde so laughe a man to scorne that she were come from hym vnmedled wythall.

Then wente Bagoas vnto Judith, and sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayde, to come into my lorde, that she may be honoured before hym, þ she maye eate and dryncke wine, & be merye wyth hym. Unto whome Judith aunswered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lorde naye: whatsoeuer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it: and looke what is hys pleasure, that shal I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and decked her selfe wyth her apparell, and wente in, & stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so þ he brente in desire towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: dryncke nowe and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my mynde is meryer to day, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, & dyd eate and dranke before hym, the thynges þ her maydē had prepared for her: And Holofernes was merie wt her, & dranke more wyne, thē euer he did afore in al his lyfe.

The xiij. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes sleapeth for very dronckennes / and Judith cutteth of hys heade / and goeth there wyth to her owne people of whom she is receaued wyth ioye / They geue thanckes vnto God for theyr deliuraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior. Whyche merueyleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

Nowe when yt was late in þ nyght hys seruauntes made haste euery mā to hys lodgynge. And Bagoas shutte the chāber doores, & wente hys waye, for they were all ouerladen wt wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpō þ bed al drōken, & of verye dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then cōmaunded Judith her maydē to stande wythoute before þ doze, ād to waite, And Judith stode before þ bed, makynge her prayer wt teares, ād moued her lyppes secretlye, & sayde: Strēgthen me, O LORD GOD of Israell, & haue a respecte vnto the workes of my hādes in thys houre, þ thou mayest set vp þ citie of Jerusalē, like as thou hast promised. O graūte þ by þ I maye performe þ thynge, whyche I haue deuysed thorowe þ beleue þ I haue in the

B And when she had spoken thys, she wente to the bedsteade, and lowsed the swearde, that hanged vpon it, and drewe it oute. Then tooke she holde of the hearye lockes of hys heade, and sayd strengthen me, O LORD GOD in thys houre and wyth that she gaue him two strokes vpon the necke, & smote of hys head. Thē toke she the canapie awaye and rolled the deade bodye alyde. Immediatlye she got her forthe, and delyuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, & bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye and so passed by the post, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of ỳ citie And Judith cryed a farre vnto the watchmen vpon ỳ walles: Opē the gates (saide she) for GOD is wyth vs, whyche hath shewed his power vpon Israel. And when they heardе her voyce, they called the elders of ỳ citie together. And they came all to mete her: lytle and greate, yonge and olde, for they thoughte not that she shulde haue come so sone. So they lyghted cādels, and gathared about her euerychone: but she wente vp into an hye place & caused silence to be proclaymed.

When euery man nowe helde hys tōge, Judith sayde: O prayse the LORDE
C our GOD for he hathe not dispised, nor forsaken them, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmaydē he hath performed hys mercy, whych he promised vnto the house of Israel: yee, in my hand this same night hath he slaine the enemei of his people.

And wyth ỳ she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captaine of ỳ Assyrians, and this ỳ canapi, wher in he laye, in his dronckennesse: where the LORDE our GOD hath slayne hym by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the LORDE lyueth, hys Angell hath kepte me goynge thether, remanyng there, and commynge hether agayne from thēce. And ỳ LORDE hath not suffered me hys hādemayden to be defyled, but wythoute any fylthynes of synne hath he broughte me agayne vnto you: and that wyth greate victorie, soo that I am escaped and delyuered. O geue thākes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gratious and hys mercye endureth for euer.

So they praysed the LORDE all together, and gaue thanckes vnto hym. And to her they sayde The LORD hath blessed the in his power, for thorowe ỳ he hath brought oure enemies to naught. And Osias the chefe ruler of ỳ people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the LORDE the hye GOD, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the LORDE, the maker of D heauen and earthe, whyche guyded the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of ỳ heade of ỳ captayne of oure enemyes. For thys day he hath made thy name so honourable, ỳ thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouthe of men, whyche shall alwaye remember the power of ỳ LORDE seynge thou haste not spared thyne owe selfe, but put the in ieoperdye, considerynge the aunguyshe and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped theyr fall before GOD oure LORD. And all the people sayde: Amē, Amen.

Achior also was called, and he came. E Thē saide Judith vnto him: The GOD of Israel vnto whome thou gaueste wytnes, that he wolde be aduenged of hys enemies, euen he hath thys nyghte thorowe my hande: smytten of the heade of al the vnfaythfull. And that thou mayeste se that it is so, beholde, thys is the heade of Holofernes, whiche in his presumtuous pryde, dispised the GOD of the people of Israel, and threatened the with destruction, sayinge: when the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause ỳ also to be stryckte wyth the swearde. When Achior sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde, for verye anguyshe and feare so that he sounde wythall.

But after ỳ he was come agayne to hi selfe, he fel downe before her, & praysed her, sayige: Blessed arte thou of thy GOD, in al ỳ tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people ỳ heare of thy name, shal praise the god of Israel because of the.

The xiiij. Chapter.

¶ The counsayle of Judith. Achior beinge an Heathen man turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

JUdith sayde vnto all the peo- I ple: brethrē, heare me. Stycke vp this heade vpō oure walles and and when the sune aryseth, take euery man hys weapon, and fall out violent lye: not as thought ye wolde go be syde them, but to runne vpon them wyth violence. When the spyes in the tentes se this, they shall of necessitie be compelled to flye backward, and to rayse vp theyr captayne to ꝑ battayle. So whē theyr captaynes come i to Holofernes pauylio, & fynde ꝑ dead body wrapped in ꝑ bloude, fearfulnesse shall fall vpon thē, & whē ye perceaue ꝑ thei flie, folow thē wythout al care, for GOD shall deliuer thē vnto you to be destroied.

Then Achior seing ꝑ power of GOD which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from hys Heathenysshe beleefe, and put hys trust in GOD, and let hym selfe be circumcised: ād so was he nombred amōge ꝑ people of Israel, he & all hys posterite vnto thys daye.

B Nowe as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euerye man tooke hys weapen, and so they wente oute wyth an horible crye. When the spyes sawe ꝑ, they ranne vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were wythin the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate rushinge to wake him vp, because they thought wyth ꝑ noyse to haue rayled hym. For there durste not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and prin- C ces: and all the chefe in the kynge of ꝑ Assyrians hoost came together, they sayde vnto the chamberlaines: Go youre waye in, and wake hym vp for the myse are crepte oute of theyr hooles, and dare prouoke vs vnto battayle.

Then went Bagoas into his chamber, stode before the bed, ād clapped wh hys handes for he thought he had bene slepynge wyth Judith.

But when he had herkened perfectly wyth hys eares, ād coulde perceaue no sterynge, he wente nygher to the bede, and lyfte it vp, and then sawe he the dede bodye of Holofernes lyinge there withdout a head, welterd in his bloud vpon the earth. Then cried he wyth lowde voyce, & wyth weppynge rēte hys clothes, & wente into Judiths tente, & foūde her not: And so he lept oute vnto the people and sayde: one womā of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonozors people vnto shame. For loo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hathe no heade.

When the chefe of the Assyrians hoo ste hearde ꝑ, they rente theyr clothes, & there fell an intollerable feare & tremb ling vpon them so ꝑ theyr myndes were sore afrayde. And there was an exceadyng great crye in the whole host.

The.xv.Chapter.

¶ The flyghte of the Assyrians. The persute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth rych / by the spoyles of the Assyrians. Judith is prayfed of Joachim / and of the people.

NOwe when all ꝑ hooste heard I ꝑ Holofernes was headed, the yr mynde and councel fel from them, & suche a feare came vpō them that thei vndertoke to defend thē selues by flying away: one spake not to āother but hāged downe theyr heades, lefte al behynd them: & made haste to escape from the Hebrues: for they hearde that they were hastynge to come after wyth theyr weapens, & so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, & thorowe all the foote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe ꝑ they fled, they followed vpon them & wente downe wyth trompetes blowynge, & makinge a greate crye after thē. As for ꝑ Assyrians, they had no order, & kepte not them selues togeather but fled theyr waye. Neuertheles, the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one companye and order, and discomforted as many as they myghte get. And Osias sent messaungers vnto all the cities & countrys of Israel.

So all the regions & euery citie sent oute theyr best men, after them in har- B nes, & smot them wh ꝑ swearde, tyll they came to the vtmost parte of theyr borders. And the other ꝑ were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, & toke al, that they whych fled had lefte behynd them, and so they founde great good. And they ꝑ came agayne to Bethulia from the batayle, tooke wh them suche thynges as had bene theyrs, there was no nombre of ꝑ catell, & of ꝑ costlye Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hyghest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hyghe preaste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia wyth all the elders that they myghte se Judith.

Nowe

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they began all to prayse her wyth one voyce, sayinge: thou worthyppe of the C citie of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honoure of oure people thou haste done manly, and thy herte is confozted because thou hast loued clenlynesse and chastite, and hast knowen no man but thine owne husband: therfoze hath the hand of the LRORDE comfozted the: & blessed shalte thou be foz euer. And all the people sayde so be it, so be it.

In theyr dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of þ Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precious stones, clothynge, & all other ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people retoysed, bothe wemen, maydēs, and younge people wyth pypes and harpes.

The xvi. Chapter.

¶ The songe of Judith foz the victozie. After the victorie optayned the people commeth to Jerusalē to worshyppe and praise God.

A Then songe Judith thys songe vnto the LORDE: Beginne vnto the LORD vpon the tabzettes, syng vnto the LORD vpon þ cymbales, O synge vnto hym a newe songe of thanckesgeuynge, be ioyefull & call vpon hys name. It is the LORDE that destroyeth warres: euen þ LORDE is name. Which hath pytched hys tētes in the myddest of hys people, þ he myght deliuer vs from the hande of al oure enemies. Assyrius came out of the mountaynes of the nozth in the multitude of his strēgth. His people stopped the water brokes, and theyr hozses couered the valles. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, and slaye my yonge men wyth the swearde.

B He wolde haue caried awaye my children and bizgins into captiuitie, but þ Almyghtye LORDE hyndzed hym, and deliuered hym into the handes of a woman, whych brought hym to confusiō. Foz theyr myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not þ sonnes of Tytan þ sleue hym, nether haue the greate Giauntes set them selues agaynste hym: but Judith the daughter of Merary wh her feyze bewty hath dyscōfozted hym, & brought hym to naughte. Foz she layde awaye her wyddowes garmente and put on the parell of gladnesse to the reioysinge of the childzē of Israel. She annointed her face, and bounde vp her heare in an houe to begile hym. Her slyppers rauyshed his eyes her bewetye captiuid hys mynde, wh þ swearde smote she of hys necke. The Persiās were astoined at her stedfaste C nes, and the Medes at her boldenes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when myslimple (dzye of thzyll appered.) The sōnes of the daughters haue pearsed them thozowe and slayne them as fugitiue childzē: they perished in the battayle, foz the verye feare of þ LORDE my GOD. Let vs synge a song of thankes geuinge vnto the LORDE, a newe song of prayse wyl we synge vnto oure GOD: LORDE LORDE, thou arte a great GOD, myghtie in power, whō noma maye ouercome. Al thi creatures shulde serue þ: foz thou spakest but the wozde, ād they were made: thou sentest thy spirite, & they were created, and no man can wythstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the fundacions wyth the waters, the stonie rockes shall melte before the lyke ware. But they þ feare the, shalbe great wyth the in all thinges. Wo vnto þ people that ryse vp agaynste my generacion, foz the Almyghtye LORDE wyll auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of Judgemente wyll he visetē. Foz he shall geue fyer and wozmes into theyr flesche, that they maye burne & fele it foz euer moare.

After thys it happened, that after þ victozie, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue praise and thanckes vnto the LORDE. And when they were purified, thei offred al their burnt sacrifices & theyr promise offeriges. And Judith offered all Holofernes weapens, & all þ Jewels þ the people had geuen her, ād the canappe that she toke from his bed and hanged them vp vno the LORDE. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: & thys ioye by reason of þ victozie, wyth Judith, endured thze monetes.

Wo after these dayes, euery man wēte home agayne, & Judith was in greate reputacion at Bethulia, and ryghte honourably takē in all the lande of Israel. Unto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses, she neuer knewe man all þ dayes dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hie solemne dayes she went out wyth greate worshyppe. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yeare, and lefte her handemayden fre, and dyed: & was buryed beside her husbãde in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her vij. dayes. So long as she liued, there was none that troubled Israell, and many yeares also after her deathe.

The daye wherin thys victorie was gotten, was solemlye holden, and rekened of the Iewes in the nombre of þ holye dayes, and it is yet greatlye holden of þ Iewes euer sence vnto thys daye.

The reast of the Chapters of the booke of Esther.

The xj. Chapter, after the Latin.

¶ The dreame of Mardocheus.

I MArdocheus the sonne of Jar, the sõne of Semei, the sone of Cisei of þ tribe of Beniamin, a Iewe: whiche had his dwellynge in þ citie of Susis, a mã of greate reputacion and excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges court (Neuerthelesse, he was one of the preseners, whõ Nabuchodonosor þ kynge of Babilon had caryed awaye from Jerusalẽ vnto Babylon wyth Jechonias þ kynge of Juda.) In the ij yere of þ raygne of great Artaxerres in the fyrst day of the moneth Nisan had Mardocheus suche a dreame. He thoughte he heard a great tẽpeste, horrible thonderclappes, earthquakes, and great byroure in the lãde, and that he sawe ij. great dragons redy to fyght one agaynst another.

Theyr crye was greate. At þ whych roarynge and crye all þ Heathen were vp to fyghte agaynste the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darckenes, & verye vnclear, full of trouble and anguyshe, yee, agreate fearfulnesse was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euell that was deuysed ouer them, and were at apoynte vñ them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto GOD: and while they were cryinge: the lytle wel grewe into agreat ryuer and into many waters. And wyth that it was daye and the sõne rose vp agayne. And þ lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Nowe when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, and mused sted fastlye in hys herte, what GOD wolde do, and so he desired to knowe all the matter, and hys mynde was there vpõ vntyll the nyghte.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus vttereth the treason deuysed against the kinge: and is therfore rewarded of hym

AT the same tyme dwelte Mardocheus wyth Bagathaz Tares, in the kynges courte, the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of þ place. But when he hearde theyr deuyce, and had diligẽtly considred theyr imaginacõs, he perceaued þ they went about to lay theyr cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxerres: and so he certified the kynge therof. Then caused the kyng to examẽ þ ij. gelded wyth tormentes. And when they had granted it they wer put to death. This the king caused to be put in þ Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp þ same matter. So þ kyng commaunded þ Mardocheus shuld remaine in þ court & for thys faythfulnes of hys, he gaue him reward. But Aman þ sõne of Amadathu þ Agagite, which was holden in great honour and reputacion in þ kynges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus and hys people because of the ij. chamberlaynes þ were put to death.

¶ The copye of the letters of Artaxerres agaynst the Jewes which pertaynith to the ij. chapter. The prayer of Mardocheus.

THE great kynge Artaxerres which raygneth frõ India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an C & xxvij. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto al þ princes & debites of the coumtres which be subiect vnto his dominiõ. When I was made lord ouer many people, & had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominion, my mind was not with cruelty & wrong to exhalte my selfe by ꝑ reason of my power: but purposed wyth equite alway & gentelnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, and wholy to set them in a peceable lyfe, & therby to bring my kyngdome vnto trãquillite, that men myght safely go thorowe on euery syde and to renew peace agayne, which all men desire. Nowe whē I asked my coũceilers

B howe these thynges myghte be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellēte in wysdome whose good will, truth, & faythfulnes hath oft bene shewed & proued, whych was also the prīcipal and nerre to ꝑ kyng Aman by name: whych certified vs howe that in al landes there was scatered abroade a rebellious folke, that made statutes ād lawes agaynste al other people: and haue alwaye dispised ꝑ proclaymed commaundementes of kynges: and how that for thys cause it were not to be suffered that suche rule shulde cōtinue by you, and not to be put downe.

Seinge nowe we perceaue the same, C ꝑ thys people alone ar contrarie vnto euery man, vsyng straunge & other maner of lawes, & wythstāde our statutes & doynges, & go aboute to stablish thynges matters, ꝑ our kingdome shuld neuer come to good estate & stedfastenesse Therfore haue we commaunded, ꝑ all they ꝑ are appointed in writinge & shewed vnto you by Aman, (whyche is ordeyned & set ouer all our landes, and ꝑ most principal nert vnto ꝑ kyng, and in maner as a father) shal wt theyr wyues & chyldrē be destroyed and rooted oute wyth ꝑ swearde of theyr enemies & aduersaries, and ꝑ there shalbe no mercy shewed, & noman spared. And this shalbe done the xiij. daye of ꝑ moneth called Adar) of this yeare, that they wiche of olde (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellious maye in one daye wyth violence be thruste downe into the hell, to thintente that after thys maner oure empire maye haue peace & tranquilite.

But Mardocheus thoughte vpon al
D the worckes & noble actes of the LORDE, & made prayer vnto hym, saynge: O LORDE LORDE, thou baleaunte & Almyghtye kynge (for all thynges are in thy power) & yf thou wylt helpe & deliuer Israel, there is no man that can wtstande or let ꝑ: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thynge so euer is vnder the heauē: thou arte LORDE of all thynges, and there is no man that can resiste thy maiestie. O LORDE. Thou knowest al thinges, thou wotest LORD that it was nether of malice, nor presumpcion, nor for any desire of glorie, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp pounder proude presumptreous Amā for I wolde haue bene contente, and that wyth good wyll, yf it myght haue done Israel any good, to haue kyste euen his foote steppes but that I dyd it, because I wolde not set the honoure of aman in the stede of the glorie of GOD: and because I wolde worshyp none but only the my LORDE, And thys haue I done in no pride nor presumcion.

And therefore O LORDE thou GOD
E and kynge haue mercye vpon thy people, for they imagin howe they may bring vs to naught: yea, theyr mynde and desire is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath ben euer thyne enheritaunce of olde. O dispise not ꝑ portion, whych thou haste delyuered & broughte oute of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare mi prayer, & be mercyfull vnto thy people whom thou hast chosē for ā heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complainte & sorowe into ioye, ꝑ we maye lyue, O LORDE, & prayse thy name. O LORDE suffer not ꝑ mouthes of them that praise the to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in lyke maner, cryed as earnestlye as they coulde vnto the LORDE: for theyr death and destruction stode before theyr eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her and her people.

Q Uine Esther also beyng in the
I battayle of death, resorted vnto the LORDE, layde away her glorious apparel, and put on ꝑ garmentes ꝑ serued for syghing and mourning. In ꝑ sted of precious oyntmēt, she scatered ashes & donge vpō her head: & as for her bodye, she hūbled it wt fastig, & brought it verylow. Al ꝑ places wher she was wōt to haue ioye afore those filled she wt ꝑ heere ꝑ she pluckt of her selfe. She prayed also vnto ꝑ LORD GOD of Israel wt these wordes. O my LORD thu only arte our kig, help me desolate

Fro my youth vp I haue hard out of ỳ kynred of my father, ỳ thou tokest Israel from amõg al people (& so haue our fathers of theyr forelders) ỳ they shuld be thy perpetual enheritaũce & lo ke what thu didest promise thẽ, thu hast mad it good vnto thẽ. Nowe LORD, we haue sinned before ỳ, therfore hast thou geuẽ vs into ỳ hãdes of oure enemyes B because we worshipped theyr Gods. LORD, thu art rightous. Neuertheles, it satisfied them not, ỳ we are in bitter & heuy captiuite & oppressed amonge thẽ, but thou hast layde theyr hãdes vpon ỳ hãdes of their Gods: so ỳ they begin to take away ỳ thig (ỳ thou wt thy mouth hast ordened & appoynted) & to destroy thyne enheritaũce, to shut & stop ỳ mouthes of thẽ ỳ prayse ỳ, to quẽch ỳ glorie & worshyppe of thy house, & thine alter, & to opẽ ỳ mouthes of ỳ Heathẽ, ỳ they may prayse ỳ power & vertue of ỳ gods & to magnifie ỳ fleshly kyng for euer. C O LORDE geue not thy septer vnto them ỳ be nothing, lest they laugh vs to scorne in our miserie and fall: but turne theyr deuyse vpon them selues, and punishe hym, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thyncke vpon vs O LORDE, & shewe thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure destresse, & of our trouble. Strength me O thou kyng of Gods, thou LORD of all power, geue me an eloquente and a pleasunte speach in my mouth before ỳ Lion. Turne hys hert in ỳ hate of oure enemyes, to destroy him & al such as cõsent vnto him. But delyuer vs wt thyne hande, and helpe me thy handmayde, whych haue no defence nor helper but onely the LORD, thou knowest al thynges, thou wotest that I loue not ỳ glorie and worshyp of the vnryghteous, and that I hate, and abhorre ỳ bed of the vncircumcised, and of al Heathen. D Thou knowest̃e my necessitie, that I hate the token of prehemynence & worshyp whych I beare vppon my heade, what tyme as I must shewe my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it an an vncleane cloth, and that I were it not when I am quiete and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also, that I thy handemaiden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delite in ỳ kynges feaste, that I haue not dronche the wyne of the dryncke offeringes and that I thy handemaydẽ haue no ioye sence the daye that I was brynght hether, vntyl this daye, but onely in the LORDE. O thou GOD of Abraham, O thou myghtye GOD aboue all, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hoope, and delyuer vs oute of the hande of the wycked, and delyuer me oute of my feare.

The xv. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Esther to goo into the kynge and make intercession for her people: and she performeth hys requeste.

MArdocheus also bad Esther goo in vnto ỳ kynge, A and praye for her people, & for her countrye. Remember (sayth he) ỳ dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast norysshed vnder my hande: For Aman whych is nerre vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therefore vpon the LORDE, and speake for vs vnto the kynge, & delyuer vs frõ death. And vpõ ỳ thyrde day it happened, ỳ Esther layde awaye the mourninge garmentes, & put on her glorious apparell, and decte her selfe goodly (after ỳ she had called vpon GOD, which is the beholder & saviour of all thynges) toke two handemaydes wyth her: vpõ ỳ one she leaned her selfe, as one ỳ was tender: ỳ other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her bewtye made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was chearful and amyable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all ỳ doores, and stoode before the kynge. The kyng sat vpon the throne of hys kynge dome, and was clothed in hys goodly araye, al of gold, and set wyth precious stones, and he was verye terible: He lyfte vp hys face, that shone in the clearnesse, and looked grymly vpõ her. Then the Quene fel downe, was pale & faynte and leaned her self vpon the head of the mayd, that went wyth her.

Neuertheles, GOD turned the kyndes mynde that he was gentile, that he B leaped oute of hys seate for feare, & gat her in hys armes, and helde her vp tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louinge wordes also, & sayde vnto ther Esther, what is ꝑ matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalte not die: for oure cõmaũdemẽt toucheth the comons and not the. Come nie. And wyth that he helde vp hys golden rod, and leyd it vpon her necke, & embraced her frendely, and sayde talke wyth me.

Then sayde she: I sawe the (O lorde) as an Angel of GOD, and my herte was troubled, for feare of thy maiestie and clearnesse. For excellente and wonder-full arte thou (O Lorde,) and thy face is full of Amitie. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe a-gayne for fayntnesse for the whych cau se the kynge was afrayde, and all hys seruauntes comforted her.

The xvj. Chapter.

¶ The copye of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those wbych he fyrste sente forth.

THe greate kyng Artaxerxes, whych raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hun dred and seuen and twentye landes, sendethe vnto ꝑ Princes and rulers of the same landes, such ue lyme, hys frendly salutacion. Ther be manye that for the sondrye fryndeshyppes and benifites diuersly done vnto them for theyr worthyppe, be euer the more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not onely to hurte theyr subiec tes (for plenteous benifites maye they not suffer, & begynne to imagine some thinge agaynste those that do thẽ good, and take not onely all vnthanckefulnes se awaye from men) but in pryde & pre-sumpcion (as they that be vnmyndefull and vnthanckfull for the good deades) they go about to escape the iudgement of GOD, that seyth al thynges, whyche iudgemente, hateth and punishethe all wyckedoesse: It happeneth ofte also, ꝑ they whyche be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynesse & causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, ware proude, and defyle them selues wyth sheadynge of innocen te bloude, whych bryngeth them to in-tollerable hurt. Whych also wyth false and deceyteful wordes and wyth lyunge tales, dysceaue and betray the inno-cente goodnesse of Princes.

Nowe is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, & consider, not only what hath happened vnto vs of old: but the shamfull, vnho-nest, and noysome thynges, that the debities haue nowe taken in hande before our eyes, and therby to beware in ty me to come, that we maye make ꝑ kyng dome quiet and peaceable for all men:
and that we myghte sometyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thynge that nowe is presente before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

What tyme nowe as Aman, the sonne of Imadathu ꝑ Macedonian (a straun ger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an alcant and had optay ned the frendeshyppe that we beare to warde all ꝑ people, so that he was called oure father, & had in hyghe honoure of euery mã, as the nerte and principall vnto the kynge, he could not forbeare hym selfe but hys pryde hath vndertаken, not onely to robbe vs of the kynge dome, but of oure lyfe.

Wythmanyfolde dysceate also hath he desire to destroie Mardocheus oure helper and preseruer, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocente Esther the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, wyth all her people. For hys mynde was (when he had taken them C oute of the waye, and robbed vs of thẽ) by thys meanes to translate the kyngdome of ꝑ Persians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Iewes whyche were accused of the wycked, ꝑ they myghte be destroyed are no euell doers, but vse resonable and ryght lawes, and that they be the chyldren of ꝑ moost hygh lyuyng GOD, by whome ꝑ kingdome of vs & our progenitoures haue bene well ordred hetherto. Where fore, as for the letters and commaũdementes that were put forthe by Aman the sõne of Imadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and inuented them, hangeth at Susis before ꝑ porte, wyth al his kynred: and GOD, (whyche hath all thynges in hys power) hath rewarded hym after hys deserynge.

And vpon thys ye shall publishe and D set vp the copye of this letter in all pla ces, that the Iewes maye freely and wythoute hyndraũce hold them selues after theyr owne statutes, & that they maye be helped, and that vpon the thre

and

and twentye daye of ꝑ twelue moneth Adar, they maye be aduenged of them, whyche in the tyme of theyr anguishe & trouble, wolde haue oppressed thē. For the GOD ꝑ gouerneth al thynges hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein ꝑ chosen people shulde haue perished.

Moreouer, amonge the hyghe solemne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shall holde thys also wyth all gladnesse, that no we & in tyme to come, thys daye maye be aremembraunce to good for al suche as loue the prosperitye of the Persiās: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and landes ꝑ do not thys, shall horribly perishe and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shal not onelye be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The ende of the reast of the booke of Esther.

The booke of wysedome.

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Howe we ought to search and enquire after GOD, and who be those that fynde hym. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from backbytyng and murmuryng. &c.

I Set youre affection vpō ryghteousnesse, ye that be Iudges, of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the LORD, and seke hym in the syngleneſſe of hert For he wyll be found of them that tempte hym not, & appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in hym. As for froward thoughtes, they seperat from GOD: but vertue (if it be alowed) refourmeth the vnwyse, And why? wysedome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy Goost abhorreth fayned nurtour, & wythdraweth hym selfe from ꝑ thoughtes that are wythout vnderstandynge, & where wyckednesse hath the vpperhande, he flyeth from thence, for the spirite of wysdome is louynge, gentle and gratious, and wyl haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euell wyth hys lyppes. For GOD is a wytnes of hys raynes, a true searcher out of hys hert, & an hearer of hys tong. For the spirite of the LORDE fylleth the round compasse of the worlde: and the same that vpholdeth al thynges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hyd: neyther maye he escape the iudgement of repro fe. And why? inquisitiō shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the report of hys wordes shall come vnto GOD, so that thus wyckednesse shalbe punished. For ꝑ eare of ꝑ gelouse heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges shall not be hyd. Therefore beware of murmerynge whych is nothynge worth: and refrayne youre tonge from slaundder. For there is no worcke so darcke and secrete, that it shall go for noughte, and ꝑ mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

O seke not your owne death in the errour of youre lyfe: destroye not your selues thorowe ꝑ worckes of youre owne handes. For GOD hath not made death, neyther hathe he pleasure in the destruction of ꝑ lyuing. For he created all thynges, ꝑ they myghte haue theyr beynge: yea, al ꝑ people of ꝑ earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, ꝑ there shulde be no destructiō in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnes is euerlastynge & immortall, but vnryghteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheleſſe, the vngodlye call her vnto them both wyth wordes and worckes: and whyle they thyncke to haue a frende of her they come to noughte: for ꝑ vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthye of death.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ The imaginations and desires of the wicked, and theyr counsayle agaynste the faythfull.

I For the vngodlye, talke & imagin thus amonge them selues, but not ryght. The tyme of oure lyfe is but shorte and tedious: and when a man is once gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, nether knowe we any mā that turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of nought, and we shalbe hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breath is as smoke in oure nostrels, and ꝑ wordes as a sparke to moue oure hert. As for our body, it shalbe very ashes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanyshe as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe away as the trace of a cloude and come to naught as the myst that is dryuen awaye wyth the beames of the Sunne, and put downe wyth the heate thereof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by lytle, and no man shall haue oure worckes in remembraunce.

For oure tyme is a verye shadowe ẏ
B passeth awaye: and after oure end there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed: so that no mã commeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures ẏ there are, & let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fyl oure selues wyth good wyne and oyntmẽte, and let there no floure of ẏ tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues wyth roses afore they be wethered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but oure luste go thorowe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure bolupteousnesse. Let vs leue some token of our pleasure in euery place, for ẏ is oure porciõ, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore & ryghteous: Let vs not spare ẏ wyddowe nor olde man let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let the lawe of vnryghteousnesse be oure auctoritie, for ẏ thynge ẏ is feble is nothyng worth. Therefore let vs defraude the ryghteous: and why? he is not for oure profyte: yea, he is cleane cõtrarye to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynste ẏ lawe, & slaundreth vs as transgressoures of al nurtoure. He maketh hys boo
C ste to haue ẏ knowlege of GOD: yea he calleth hym selfe GODS sonne. He is ẏ be waiter of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to looke vpon hym, for hys lyfe is not lyke other mens, hys wayes are of another facion. He counteth vs but vayne persons, he wyth drayweth hym self from oure wayes as frõ fylthynes, he commendeth greatlye the latter end of ẏ iust, & maketh hys boost that GOD is hys father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what ende he shal haue. For yf he be the true sonne of GOD, he wyll receaue hym: & delyuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes.
D Let vs examin hym with dispiteful rebuke and tormentynge, that we maye knowe hys dignitye and proue his patience. Let vs condemne hym wyth moost shamfull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do ẏ vngodly imagin & go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for the misteries of GOD they vnderstãde them not: they neyther hoope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, nor regarde the worshyp that holy soules shall haue. For GOD creatid man to be vndestroyed: yea, after ẏ * image of hys owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuertheless, thorowe enuy of the deuell, came death into ẏ worlde: and they that holde of hys syde do as he doth.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ The conuersacion and assurraunce of the ryghteous. The rewarde of the faythful.

But the soules of the righteous are in the hand of GOD and the payne of death shal not touche them. In ẏ syght of the vnwyse they appeared to dye, & theyr ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destructiõ, but they are in reste. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is theyr hope full of immortalitye. They are punished but in fewe thynges, neuertheless, in manye thynges shall they be well rewarded. For GOD proueth them, & findeth them mete for hym selfe: yea, as the golde in the fornace, doth he trye them: & receaueth them as a burnte offrynge, & when the time cõmeth, they shalbe loked vpõ.

The ryghteous shall shyne as the D sparkes that runne thorowe the red bushe. They shall Iudge the nacions, and haue dominion ouer the people, & their LORDE shall raygne for euer. They that put theyr truste in hym, shall vnderstande the truth, and suche as be faythfull, wyll agre vnto hym in loue: for hys chosen shall haue gyftes & peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punyshed accordyng to theyr imaginations, for they haue dispised the ryghteous: and forsaken the LORDE.

Whoso dispiseth wysedome and nur-
C ture he is vnhappye: and as for ẏ hoope of suche, it is but vayne: theyr laboures vnfrutefull, and theyr worckes vnprofytable. Theyr wyues are vndyscrete, and theyr chyldrẽ moost vngodlye.

lyfe. Theyr creature is curſed. Bleſſed is rather the barrē & vndefyled, whych hath not knowne ꝑ ſynfull bed: ſhe ſhal haue fruyte in the reward of the holy ſoules. And bleſſed is the gelded, wyche wt his handes hathe wzoughte no vnrighteouſneſſe, noz imagined wycked thiges a gaynſte GOD. Foz vnto hi ſhalbe geuē the ſpeciall gyfte of fayth, & ꝑ moſte acceptable pozcion in the temple of GOD. Foz glozious is ꝑ fruite of good laboure, & the roote of wyſedome ſhall neuer fade awaye.

As foz ꝑ chyldzen of aduouteres, they ſhalcome to an ende, & ꝑ ſeed of an vnvnrighteouſbed ſhalbe rooted out. And though they lyue long, yet ſhall they be nothynge regarded, ād theyr laſte age ſhalbe wythoute honoure. ¶ they dye haſtyly, they haue no hope, nether ſhall they be ſpoken to in the daye of knowlege. Foz hozrible is the death and ende of the vnrighteous,

The iiij. Chapter.

¶ Of the chaſte generacion of the forthfull, and of theyr felicite. Of the death of the ryghteous, and of the condemnacion of the vnfaythfull.

HOw fayre is a chaſte generacion wt vertue: The memozial thereof is immoztal, foz it is knowen with GOD & with men. When it is pzeſente, mē take example therat, ād if it go away, yet they deſize it. It is alway crowned & holden in honoure, & winneth ꝑ reward of the vndefyled battayle. But the multitude of vngodly childzē is vnpzofitable: and the thynges ꝑ are plāted wt whozedome ſhall take no depe roote, noz laye any faſt fundacion. Thoughe they be grene in ꝑ bzaunches foz a tyme, yet they ſhalbe ſhakē wt the wynd: foz they ſtand not faſt, & thozowe ꝑ vehemencie of ꝑ wynde they ſhalbe roted out. Foz ꝑ vnperfect bzaūches ſhalbe bzokē, theyr frute ſhalbe vnpzofitable & ſower to eat: yee, mete foz nothyng. And why: al ꝑ chyldzē ꝑ are bozne of wycked, muſt beare recozde of ꝑ wyckednelle agaynſte theiz fathers and mothers when thei be aſked. But thoughe ꝑ ryghteous be ouertaken wyth death, yet ſhall he be in reſte.

Age is an honourable thyng: neuertheles it ſtandyth not onelye in ꝑ lēgth of tyme, noz in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyſedome is the graye hare, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleaſed GOD, and was beloued of him: ſo that where as he lyued amonge ſynners, he tranſlated hym. * yea, ſodenlye was he taken awaye, to ꝑ intē te ꝑ wyckednelle ſhulde not alter hys vnderſtāding, and that hypocriſie ſhulde not begyle hys ſoule. Foz the craftye bewytchynge of lyes make good thynges darke, the vnſtedfaſtneſſe alſo and wyckedneſſe of volupteous deſire, turne aſyde the vnderſtandynge of the ſimple. Thought he was ſoone dead, yet fulfylled he muche tyme. Foz his ſoule pleaſed GOD: therefoze haſted he to take hym away from amonge ꝑ wicked. Thys the people ſe, & vnderſtāde it not: they lay not vpſuch thynges in theyr hertes, howe that the louynge fauoure and mercye of GOD is vpon hys ſaynctes, and that he hath reſpecte vnto hys choſen. Gene. 5. c.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, contemneth the vngodly wyche are lyuynge: and the youth that is ſoune bzoughte to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. Foz they ſe the ende of ꝑ wyſe, but they vnderſtande not what GOD hath deuyſed foz hym, & wherefoze the LORDE hath taken hym awaye. And why: they ſe hym and diſpiſe hym, therfoze ſhal GOD alſo laugh them to ſcozne: So ꝑ they them ſelues ſhall dye heareafter (but withoute honoure, yea in ſhame amōge the deade foz euermoare. Foz wythoute anye voyce ſhall he burſte thoſe ꝑ be puſte vp, & remoue thē from ꝑ fundacions, ſo ꝑ they ſhalbe layde waſte vnto the hyghelte. They ſhall mourne, & theyr memoriall ſhall periſhe. So they beynge afrayde, ſhall remember theyr ſynnes: and theyr owne wyckednelle ſhall bewzaye them.

The v. Chapter.

¶ The conſtaunteſſe of ryghteous before theyr perſecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable ād vayne. The bleſſednelle of the ſaynctes ād godlie

THen ſhall the ryghteous ſtand in great ſtedfaſtneſſe agaynſte ſuche as haue dealt ertreamely wythe them, and taken awaye theyr laboures. When they ſe it, they ſhalbe vered with horible feare, and ſhall wondze at the haſtineſſe of the ſodayne health: gronynge foz very destresse of mynde, & shall saye wythin them selues, haupnge inwarde sozowe, and mournynge foz verye anguyshe of mynd. These are they, whō we somtime had in dirision, & iested vpō. We fooles thought theyr life very madnys: & their ende to be wythout honour. But lo, howe they are coūted among ꝑ chyldrē of GOD, & theyr pozcion is among ꝑ sayncte. Therfoze we haue erred frō ꝑ way of truth, ꝑ lyght of righteousnesse hath shyned vnto vs, & the Sunne of vnderstandyng rose not vpō vs. We haue weryed oure selues in ꝑ waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as foz the waye of the LORDE we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryd done vnto vs? Oz what profyte hath the pompe of richesse brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadowe, & as a messenger runnynge before: as a shyppe that passeth ouer the waues of the watyr, wbych when it is gone by, ꝑ trace therof cannot be founde, nether ꝑ path of it in the floudes. Oz as a bryde that flyeth thozowe in ꝑ ayze, & no mā can se any token where he is flowen, but onely heare ꝑ noyse of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thozowe the vehemēcie of her goynge, & flyeth on shaking her wiges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Oz as whē an aro we is shot at a marke it parteth ꝑ ayer, wbych immediatly commeth together agayne, so ꝑ a man can not knowe whe re it went thozowe. Euen so nowe in lyke maner as sone as we were bozne, be gāne immediatly to drawe to oure end, & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are cōsumed in our owne wyckednesse.

Suche wozdes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: foz the hoope of the vngodlye is lyke a drye thystle flouze (oz dust) that is blowne awaye wyth ꝑ wynde: lyke a thyne scome that is scatered abzoade wyth the stozme, lyke as the smooke wbyche is dispersed heare and there wyth the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that tarryethe foz a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue foz euermoare: theyr rewarde also is with the LORDE: and theyr remembraunce with the Hygheste. Therfoze shall they receaue a glorious kyngedome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the LORDES hande: foz wyth hys ryghte hande shall he couer them: and wbyth hys owne holye arme, shal he defende them. Hys gelousye also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the creatur to be auenged of the enemies. He shall put on ryghteousnesse foz a brestplate, and take sure Judgemente in steade of an helmete. The inuincible shylde of equite shall he take, hys cruele wrathe shal he sharpen foz a speare, and the whole compasse of the wozlde, shal fyghte wyth hym agaynste the vnwyse.

Then shall the thonderboltes go oute of the lyghtnynges, and come out of the raygne bowe of the cloudes to the place appoynted: out of the harde stony indignacion, there shall fal thycke hayles, and the water of ꝑ see shalbe wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shal rūne roughly together. yea, a myghty wynde shall stande vp agaynst thē, and a stozme shall scater them a broade. Thus the vnrighteous dealyng of thē, shall brynge all the land to a wylderneste, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of the myghtye.

The vj. Chapter.

¶ The callynge of Kynges, Princes and iudges: which are also exhorted to search wysdome.

WYsedome is better then strength, & a man of vnderstandynge is moze worth then one that is stronge. Heare therfoze (O ye kynges) & vnderstande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of ꝑ earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, and delite in much people. Foz ꝑ power is geuen you of the LORD, and the strength from the Hygheste: wbych shall trye your wozkes, and searche oute your imaginations. Howe that ye beyng officers of hys kyngdome haue not executed true Judgemente, haue not kepte ꝑ lawe of ryghteousnesse, noz walked after the wil of GOD. Hozrible, and that ryghte sone shall he appeare vnto you: foz an hard iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the simple, but they that be in auctozite shalbe soze punished. Foz GOD wbych is LORDE ouer all, shall excepte nomans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small & greate, & careth for al like. But ꝑ myghtie shal haue ꝑ sorer punishemēte

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges do I speake that ye maye learne wysedo-me, and not go amysse. For they that ke pe hys ryghteousnesse, shalbe ryghteously Judged, & they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherefore, set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtoure.

Wysedome is a noble thynge and ne-

C sene of them that loue her, and fou̇de of such as seke her, she preuenteth thē ꝑ de sire her, ꝑ she maye fyrste shewe her selby tymes, shal haue no greate trauayle for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at dores his. To thyncke vpon her, is perfect vnderstādynge: & who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe: & that sone. For she goeth about, sekynge such as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meteth thē wyth al diligence. For the vnfayned de sire of reformacion is her begynninge:

to care for nurtour is loue, and loue is the kepyng of her lawes. Now the kepyng of the law is perfection, & an vn-corrupt lyf: and an uncorrupt lyfe makyth a mā familier wyth GOD. And so all ye that be rulers of ꝑ people. As for wysdome, what she is, & howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde ꝑ ministeries of GOD from you: but will the multitude of the wyse, is the welthe vpholdynge of the people. O recea-and it shall do you good.

The vij. Chapter.

Wysedome oughte to be preferred aboue al thinges.

I My selfe am also a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am A come of the earthye generacīō of hym that was fyrste made, and in my mothers wombe was I facioned to be flesh: In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in blonde thorowe the seede of man, and ꝑ commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne I receaued lyke ayre as other men, & fell vpon the earth (whych is my nature) cryinge and weping at ꝑ fyrst as al other do. I was wrapped in swadling clothes, and brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kīg that had any other begynnyng of byrth. All men thē haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherefore I desired, & vnderstādīng B was geuen me: I called and the spirite of wysedome came vnto me. I set more by her, then by kyngedomes and royall seates, and counted rychesse nothynge in comparison of her. As for precious stone I compared it not vnto her: for al golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shalbe conted but clay before her sight.
I loued her a boue welfare & bewtye, & purposed to take her for my lyght, for her lyght can not be queuched. Al good thynges come to me wyth her, & innumerable rychesse thorowe her handes.
I was glad in thē all, for thys wysedo-me wente before me, and I knew not ꝑ she is ꝑ mother of al good thynges. No we as I my selfe learned vnfaynedlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her richesse frō nomā: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, which who so vse, become partakers of ꝑ loue ād frendshyppe of GOD, & are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysedome.

God hath graunted me to talke wy- C selye, & conuenientlye to handle ꝑ thyn-ges that he hathe graciouslye lēte me.
For it is he, ꝑ leadeth vnto wysdome, & teacheth to vse wysedome aryghte. In hys hande are both we and oure wor-des: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstā dyng and knowlege of al our worckes.
For he hath geuen me the true science of these thinges, so that I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and ꝑ powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, en-dynge, & myddeste of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled: ꝑ courſe of the yeare: the ordinaunces of the ſtarres: the nature & kyndes of beaſtes: the furiouſneſſe of beaſtes: the power of ꝑ wyndes: ꝑ imaginacions of men: ꝑ diuerſities of yong plantes: the vertues of rootes, & all ſuche thynges as are ſecrete and loked for, haue I learned. For ꝑ wozckemaſter of all thynges hath taught me wyſdom. In her is the ſpirite of vnderſtandynge whych is hoyle, manyfolde, one onely, ſubtyl, curteous, diſcrete, quicke, vndefyled, playne, ſwete, louing that is good, ſharpe, whyche forbydeth not to do well, gentyle, kynde, ſtedfaſt, ſure, fre, hauige all vertues, circumſpecte in all thynges: receauinge all ſpirites of vnderſtandinge, beinge cleane and ſharpe. For wyſdome is nymbler then all nymble thynges: ſhe goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges becauſe of her cleaneſſe. For ſheis ꝑ breethe of ꝑ power of GOD and a pure cleane erpreſſynge of the clearneſſe of Almyghtye GOD. Therfore can no vndefiled thynge come vnto her for ſhe is the bryghteneſſe of the euerlaſtynge lyghte, the vndefyled myroure of ꝑ maieſtye of GOD, & ꝑ image of hys goodneſſe. And for ſo muche as ſhe is one ſhe maye do all thiges, & beynge ſtedfaſt her ſelfe, ſhe renued all: and among ꝑ people conuayeth her ſelfe into ꝑ holye ſoules. She maketh GODS frendes & Prophetes: for GOD loueth noma but hym in whome wiſdome dwelleth. For ſhe is moare bewtyfull then ꝑ Sũne, and greueth more lyghte thẽ the ſtarres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckednes cannot ouercome wyſdome: and foleyſhenes maye not be wyth her.

¶ The effectes of wyſedome.

WYſedome reacheth frome one ende to another mightely, and louyngely doth ſhe oder all thinges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I dyd my diligence to marye my ſelfe wyth her, ſuche loue had I vnto her bewtie. Who ſo hath ꝑ companye of GOD, commendeth her nobilitie: yea, the LORDE of all thynges hym ſelfe loueth her. For ſhe is the ſcolemaiſtreſſe of ꝑ nourtoure of GOD and the choſer oute of hys wozckes. Yf a man wolde deſire rycheſſe in thys lyfe, what is rycher then wyſdome, that wozcketh all thinges: Thou wylte ſaye: vnderſtandynge wozcketh. What is it amonge all thynges, ꝑ wozketh moare then wyſedome: yf a man loue vertue and righteouſneſſe, let him laboure for wyſdome, for ſhe hath greate vertues. And why: ſhe teacheth ſoberneſſe, prudẽce, ryghteouſneſſe, and ſtrength: whyche are ſuch thynges as men can haue nothinge more profitable in theyr lyfe. Yf a man deſire muche knowlege, ſhe can tell the thynges that are paſte, and diſcerne thynges for to come: ſhe knowethe the ſubtilties of wordes, and can expounde dareke ſentences. She can tell of tokens, and wonderous thiges or euer thy come to paſſe, and ꝑ endes of all times & ages. So I purpoſed after thys maner: I will take her vnto my company, and comune louyngely with her: no doubte, ſhe ſhall geue me good counſayle; and ſpeake comfortably vnto me in my carefulneſſe & greefe. For her ſake ſhall I be well and honeſtly taken amonge the commens ãd lordes of the counſayle. Thought I be yong, yet ſhal I haue ſharpe vnderſtãdynge, ſo ꝑ I ſhalbe meruelous in the ſyghte of great men, & the faces of princes ſhall wonder at me: when I holde my tonge, they ſhall abyde my lyſure: when I ſpeake, they ſhal loke vpon me: ãd if I talke much, they ſhal laye theyr handes vpon theyr mouth.

Moreouer, by ꝑ meanes of her I ſhal obtayne immortalite, & leaue behid me an euerlaſtynge memoriall amoge thẽ ꝑ come after me. I ſhall ſet the people in order, & the nacious ſhalbe ſubdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes ſhalbe afrayde when they do but heare of me, & monge the multitude I ſhalbe counted good, & myghtye in battayle. When I come home, I ſhall fynde reſte wyth her: for her companye hath no bytternelle, and her felowe ſhippe hath no tediouſneſſe, but myrthe and ioye.

Nowe when I conſidred theſe thynges by my ſelfe, and pondred them in my herte, howe that to be ioyned vnto wyſedome is immortalitie, and greate pleaſure to haue her frendeſhyppe, howe ꝑ in the wozckes of her handes are infinitie richeſſe: howe that, who ſo kepeth

The. xiiij. Chapter.

¶ The detestacion and abominacion of images. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The euelles that come of Idolatrie.

AGaine, another mā purposyng to sayle, & begynnynge to take hys iournye thorowe ꝑ ragyn see, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke ꝑ is farre weaker thē the tre that beareth hym. For as for it, couetousnes of monye hath founde it oute, and the crafte sman made it wyth hys conninge.

But thy prouidence, O father gouerneth all thynges from the begynnynge for thou haste made awaye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of ꝑ waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in all thinges, yea though a man wente to ꝑ see wythout shippe. Neuertheiesse, that the worckes of thy wysdome shuld not be bayne, * thou hast caused an Arke to be made: & therfore do men cōmit theyr lyues to a smale peace of woode, passynge ouer the see in a shyppe, and are saued.

* For in the old tyme also when ꝑ proud gyauntes perished, he (in whome ꝑ hope was leste to increase the worlde) wēte into the ship wich was gouerned thorowe thy hande, and so lefte seede behynde hym vnto the worlde. For happye is the tree where thorowe ryghteousnes cōmeth: but cursed is ꝑ idol ꝑ is made wt handes, * yea bothit & hey made it. He beause he made it, & it because it was called good, where as it is but a frayle thing. * For ꝑ vngodly & his vngodlynes are bothe lyke abominable vnto GOD. Euē so the worcke and he ꝑ made it also shalbe punished together. Therefore shall a plage come vpon the Idolles of the Heathen: for out of the creatures of GOD they are become abominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of ꝑ vnwyse. And why: the sekynge out of Idolles is ꝑ beginynge of whoredome and the bryngyng vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. For they were not frō the begynnyng, nether shal they continue for euer. The welthi Idelnes of mē hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende When a father mourned for hys sonne that was taken a waye from hym, he made hym an Image in al the hast of hys dead sonne: and so beganne to worshyppe hym as a god, which was but a dead man, and ordeyned hys seruauntes to offer vnto hym. Thus by proces of tyme and thorow an vngracious custome, thys errour was kept as a lawe and tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honoure images. As for those that were so farre of, that men myghte not worshippe them presētly, theyr picture was brought from farre lyke the image of a kynge whome they wolde honoure to the intente that wyth greate diligence they myghte worshyppe hym whych was farre of, as though he had bene presente.

Agayne the synguler connyng of the crafte sman gaue the ignoraunte also a greate occasion to worshyppe images. For ꝑ worckeman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure that set hym a worcke, laboured wyth all hys connynge to make ꝑ image of the best facion. And so (thorowe the bewtie of the worcke) the commen people was deceaued, in so much that they toke hym nowe for a GOD, whych a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And thys was ꝑ errour of mās life, when men ether for to serue theyr owne affection, or to do some pleasure vnto ꝑ kinges ascribed vnto stones & stockes the name of GOD, whych oughte to begeuen vnto no man.

Moreouer, this was not ynought for them ꝑ they erred in the knowlege of GOD: but where as they lyued in greate warres of ignoraunce, those many & great plages called they peace. For ether * they slue theyr owne chyldren, & offered them, or did sacrifice in ꝑ night season or els helde vnreasonable watches: so ꝑ they kepte nether lyfe nor mariage cleane: but ether one slue another to death malicyously, or elles greued his neighboure wt aduoutrie. And thus were al thiges myxte together, bloude māslaughter, theifte, dissimulacion, corruptiō, vnfaithfulnesse, sediciō, periurie disquietige of godmē, vnthākfulnesse defylynge defylynge of soules, chaungynge of byr the, vnstedfastnesse of maryage, mysor der of aduoutrye and vncleannesse. And why: ꝑ honouringe of abominable ima ges is ꝑ cause of ꝑ begynnynge and en de of all euel. For they that wor shyppe Idoles: ether they be mad when they be mery, or prophecye lyes, or lyue vn godlye, or elles lyghtlye for sweare them selues: For in so much as theyr truste is in the Idol (whych haue ne ther soule nor vnderstādynge) though they sweare falsely yet they thyncke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cōmeth a great plage vpō them and that worthely, for they ha ue an euell opinion of GOD, geuynge hede vnto Idolles swearynge vnlaw lye to deceaue, and dispisyng ryghteous nes. For theyr swearynge is no vertue but a plage of them that synne, and go eth euer w ꝑ offence of the vngodlye.

The. xv. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the faythful, prayynge the mercye of GOD for whose graces sake they serue not Idoles.

BVt thou (O oure GOD arte swete, longe sufferynge, and in mercye ordreste thou all thynges. Thought we synne yet are we thine, for we knowe thy stre ught. yf we synne not, then are we sure that thou regardest vs. For to knowe ꝑ, is perfecte ryghteousnes. yea, to kno we thy ryghteousnes and power is the rote of immortalite. As for the thynge that men haue founde out thorowe the yr euell sciēce, it hath not disceaued vs as the paynting of the picture (an vn profitable labour) and carued image, wyth diuers colours, whose sight en tyseth the ignorannte: so that he hono ureth & loueth the picture of a deade image that hath no soule.

Neuertheless, they ꝑ loue such euell thynges, are worthye of ꝑ death: they ꝑ trust in thē, they ꝑ make thē, they ꝑ loue thē, & they ꝑ honoure thē. The potter al so taketh & tēpereth softe earth, labou reth it, & geueth it the facion of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cle ane vessel for seruice, and some contra ri. But where to euery vessell serueth, ꝑ knoweth ꝑ potter hym selfe. So wyth hys bayne labour he maketh a GOD of ꝑ same claye: this doth euē he, which a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, & wythin a lytle whyle after (whē he dieth) turneth to the earthe agayne.

Notwythstandynge, he careth not ꝑ more because he shall laboure, nor be cause hys lyfe is shorte: but stryueth to excell goldesmythes, the syluersmithes and copersmythes, and taketh it for an honoure to make bayne thinges. For his herte is asshes, his hope is but bay ne earth, and hys lyfe is more vile then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hys owne maker, ꝑ gaue hym his sou le to worcke, & breethed in hym ꝑ breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a pa styme, and oure conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettinge, and that by euel meanes. For we he that of earth maketh fraile vessel les and images knoweth hym selfe to offende aboue al other.

All the enemies of the people that hol de thē in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhap pye, and exceadynge proude vnto theyr owne soules: for they iudge all the idol les of the Heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eyesyghte to se, nor noses to smel, nor eares to heare, nor fingers or handes for to grope: and as for their fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, & he ꝑ had but a borowed spirite, facioned them. But no man ma ke a GOD lyke vnto hym: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mor tal that he maketh wyth vnrighteous handes. He hym selfe is better thē they whome he worshypped, for he lyued thoughe he was mortall so dyd neuer they. yea, they worshypped beastes al so, whyche are moost miserable: for cō pare thynges, ꝑ can not sele vnto thē, and they are worse then those.

yet is there not one of these beastes, that wyth hys syghte can beholde any good thynge neyther haue they geuen prayse or thanckes vnto GOD.

The xvi. Chapter.

¶ The punishemente of Idolatrers, and the benefi tes done vnto the faythfull.

FOr these and such other thing ges haue they suffered worthy punishemente and thorowe ꝑ multitude of beastes are they roted out. In stead of the whych puni shemētes thou hast graciously ordred thine owne people and geuen thē theyr desire thynckynge to escape the euerlastynge wysedome. And whyle they thoughte to be in the darckenes of theyr synnes, they were scatered abrode in the very myddyst of the darcke couerynge of forgetfulnesse, put to horrible feare & wonderous trouble for they had no corner where they myght kepe them frō feare because ꝑ sound came downe & vered them: yea, many terrible and straunge visions made them afrayed.

B No power of the fyre myghte geue them lyghte, nether myght the cleare flammes of the starres lyghten ꝑ horrible nyght. For there appeared vnto thē a sodayne fyre, verye dredfull. At the which when they sawe nothinge, they were so afrayde, that they thought the thyng whych they sawe, to be the more fearefull. *As for ꝑ sorcerie & enchauntement ꝑ they vsed, it came to derision, & the proude wysdome was broughte to shame. For they that promised to dryue awaye the fearfulnes and drede frō the weake soules were sicke for feare them selues, and that wyth scorne. And thoughe none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes whych came vpon them, and at the hyssynge of the serpentes. In so much that wyth tremblynge they sowned, & sayde they sawe not the ayre, whych no man yet maye escape. Exo. 7. b.

C For it is an heuye thige when a mās owne cōsience beareth recorde of hys wickednes & condempneth him. And whyle vered & wounded cōsciēce, taketh euer cruell thynges in hande.* Fearfulnesse is nothyng els, but a declaring that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answere for hym selfe. And looke howe much lesse the hoope is within, ꝑ more is the vncertaynte of the matter, for ꝑ which he is punished. But they that came in the myd nyght, slepte the slepe ꝑ fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: sometime were they afrayde thorowe the feare of the wonders, and sometyme they were so weake that they sowned withal: for an hastye & sodayne fearfulnesse came vpon them. Psal. 47. a.

Afterwarde, yf anye of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in preason, but wythout chaynes. But yf any dweller in a village, yf he had ben an hearde or husbandeman, he suffered intollorable necessitie: for they were all bounde wyth one chayne of darckenesse.

Whether it were a blassynge wynde, or a swete songe of the byrdes among ꝑ thycke braunches of the trees, or the vehemēcie of hasty runninge water, or greate noyse of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playinge & runninge of beastes whom they sawe not, or ꝑ myghtie noyse of roarige beastes, or ꝑ sounde that aunswereth agayne in ꝑ hye mountaines: it mad thē sowne for very feare. For all the earth shyned wyth clearē lyghte, & no man was hyndered in hys laboure. Onelye vpon them there fell an heuye nyght, an image of darckenes that was to come vpon them. yea, they were vnto them selues the mooste heauye and horrible darckenesse.

The xviij. Chapter.

¶ The fyre lyghte that the Israelites had in Egypt. The persecution of the faythful. The LORD smote all the fyrste borne of Egypt. The synne of the people in the wildernes. Aaron steode betwyxte the lyue and the dead, wyt hys censoure.

A Neuertheless, thy sayncte had a very great lyghte and ꝑ enemies heard their voice but they sawe not the fygure of them. And because they suffered not the same thynges they magnified ꝑ: and they ꝑ were vered afore (because they were not hurte nowe) thancked ꝑ, and besought the (O GOD) ꝑ there myghte be a differēce. *Therfore had they a burning pyller of fyre to leade them in the vnknowen waye, and thou gayest them the Sunne for a fre gyfte wyth out any hurte. Reason it was ꝑ they shulde wante lyghte, and be put in the preison of darckenesse, whyche kept thy chyldren in captiuite, by whome the incorrupt lyghte of the lawe of ꝑ worlde was for to be geuē. *Whē thei thought to slaye the babes of ꝑ ryghteous (one beynge layde out, and preserued to be leader vnto the other,) *thou broughteste oute the whole multitude of the chyldren and destroyedeste these in the myghtye water. Of ꝑ nyghte were oure fathers certified afore, ꝑ they knowig vnto what othes they had geuē credēce, myghte be of good cheare. Thus thy peaple receaued ꝑ health of ꝑ righteous, but ꝑ vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou haste hurte oure enemies, so hast so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledste afore. For the righteous chil dren of the good men offered secretly, and ordred the lawe of righteousnes vnto vnite: that the iuste shulde receaue good and euell in lyke maner, syngynge prayses vnto ỳ father of al men. Agayne, there was heard an vnconuenient voyce of ỳ enemies, & a pyteous crye for the chyldren ỳ were bewayled. The master and the seruaunte were punished in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable ỳ died one death

C *Neyther were the lyuynge sufficiente to burye the dead, for in the twynckl.c. lyng of an eye the nobled nacion of thẽ was destroyed. As ofte as GOD helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them beleue: but in the destruction of the fyrste borne they knowleged, that it was the people of GOD. For whyle al thynges were still and when ỳ nyghte was in ỳ middest of her course, thy Almyghtye worde O LORDE leapt downe frõ heauen oute of thy royall throone, as a roughe man of warre, in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed: and thy sharpe swearde perfourmed thy straynte commaundemente standynge & fyllynge all thynges wyth deathe: yea, it stoode vpon the earthe and reached vnto the heauẽ. Then the syghte of ỳ euell dreames vexed them sodenlye, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.

D Then laye there one here, another there halfe dead, halfe quycke, and showed the cause of hys death. For the visior that vexed them shewed thẽ theselyes afore: so that they were not ignorante wherfore they perished.

Then temptacion of deathe touched the ryghteous also, and amonge ỳ multitude in the wyldernes there was insurrection, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the blamelesman wente in all the hast, and toke the battayle vpon hym, brought for the the weapen of hys ministracion: euen prayer and the censoures of reconsilinge: set hym selfe agaynste the wrath, and so broughte the miserie to an ende: declarynge thereby that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude wyth bodelye power, nor wyth weapens of myghte: but with the worde he subdued hym that vexed hym, puttynge them in rememe braunce of the othe & couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middest, pacified the wrath, and parted the waye vnto ỳ lyuynge. *And vpon hys longe garment was all the bewty, and in ỳ foure rowes of the stones was the glorie of ỳ fathers grauen, and thy maiestye was wrytten in the crowne of hys heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place & was afrayed of them: for it was onelye a temptacion worthye of wrathe. Exod.28. a.b.c.

The xix. Chapter.

¶ The death of the Egypcians, and the greate ioye of the Hebrues. The meate that was geuen at the desire of the people. The elementes serue not onelye to the wyl of GOD, but also to the wyll of man.

AS for the vngodlye, the wrath came vpon thẽ wythoute mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happen vnto them, how that (when they had consented to let them go, and had sente oute wyth greate diligence) they wolde repente and folowe vpon them. I

*For when they were yet mournynge and makinge lamentacion by ỳ graues of the deed, they deuysed another folyshenesse: so that they persecuted them in theyr flyinge, whome they had caste oute afore wyth prayer. Worthye necessite also brought them vnto thys end, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thynge that was wantinge of theyr punishemente, was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them wyth torMentes, that thy people myghte haue a maruelous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge deathe. Exod.14.d

B Then was euery creature facioned agayne of newe, accordynge to the wil of theyr maker, obeynge thy commaundementes that thy chyldren myghte be kepte wythoute hurte. For the cloude ouer shadowed theyr tentes, and ỳ drye earthe appered, where afore was water: so that in the red see, there was a waye wythoute impedimente: and the greate depe became a greane feld: where thorowe all the people wente ỳ were defended wyth thy hande seynge thy wonderous and meruelous worckes.

For as the horses so were thy sed, & leaped lyke lambes, prayesynge the O LORDE which haddest delyuered thẽ:

And why: they were yet myndefull of the thynges that happened whyle they dwelte in the lande: howe the grounde brought forth the flyes in stead of catell: & howe the ryuer serauled wyth ꝑ multitude of frogges in stead of fyshes.

¶ *But at the laste they sawe a newe creation of byrdes, what tyme as they were deceaued wyth luste, and desired delicate meates. Exo.17.c. Num.16.g. For when they were speaking of theyr appetite, the quayles came vp vnto them from the see, and punishementes came vpon ꝑ synners not wythoute the tokens whyche came to passe afore by the vehemencie of ꝑ streames, for they suffered worthely accordynge to theyr wickednes, they dealt so abominably & churlyshely vꝫ straungers. Some receaued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straungers into bondange that dyd them good. Beside all these thynges there were some, that not onlye receaued no straungers with theyr willes, but persecuted those also, *and dyd them muche euell, that receaued them gladlye. Therfore were they punished wyth *blyndenesse, lyke as they ꝑ were couered wyth sodayne darckenesse at the doores of the ryghteous, so that euerye one soughte the entraunce of hys doore. 1.Iohan.2.c. Gene.19.c.

Thus the elementes turned into theselues, like as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrumēte of musyke, and yet all the residue kepe theyr melodye, whiche maye easelye be perceaued, by ꝑ syghte of ꝑ thinges ꝑ are come to passe.

The drye lande was turned into a water and the thynge that afore swāme in the water, wēte nowe vpon dyre grounde. The fyre had power in the water, contrary vnto hys owne vertue: & the water forgat hys owne kynde to quenche. Agayne, the flames of noysome beastes hurte not the flesche of them that wente with them, neyther melted they the yse, whyche els melteth lyghtely. In al thinges hast thou promoted thy people (O LORDE) & broughte the to honour: thou haste not dyspised them but alwaye, and in all places hast thou stande by them.

¶ The ende of the booke of wysedome.

The booke of Jesus - the sonne of Strach / called Ecclesiasticus.

The Proloque.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs oute of the lawe, ... of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysedome. Therefore, they that haue it and reade it shulde not onelye themselues be, wyse tho towe it: but serue other also wyth teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graundefather Jesus had geuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, and other bookes that were lefte vs of oure fathers, and had well exercised himselfe therin: he purposed also to wryte some thynge of wysedome and good maners, to the intent that they which were wyllynge to learne and to be wyse myght haue the more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacion. Wherefore, I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to read it wyth diligence, and to take it in good worth though oure workes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng that is wrytten in the Hebrue toung, soundeth not so wel when it is translated into another spech. Not only thys booke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes, and other bokes sounde far otherwyse, then they do when they are spoken in theyr owne language. Nowe in the xxxviij yeare when I came into Egypt in the time of Ptolemy Euergetes and continued there all my life, I gat liberte to rede and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligēce and trauayle to interpret this booke. And consideringe that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my beste to perfourme thys booke, and to bringe it vnto lyghte: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to learne, myght apply themselues vnto good maners and lyue accordyng to the lawe of the LORDE.

¶ Wysdome proceadeth and commeth of GOD. A prayse of the feare of GOD. Ryghteousnesse is a degre to come by wysedome.

Unto whom hath the roote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne her wyt? Unto whom hath the doctrine of wysdome ben discouered and shewed and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her.

There is one: euen the hyghest, the maker of all thynges, the Almyghtye, & kynge of power (of whom men oughte to stande greatly in awe) whyche sytteth vpon hys throne beynge a GOD of dominion: He hath created her thorow & holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and mesured her, he hath poured her out vpon all hys worckes, and vpō all flesshe, accordyng to hys gyfte: he geueth her rychely vnto them that loue hym: The feare of the LORDE is worshype and triumphe, gladnesse & a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the LORDE maketh a merye herte, geueth gladnes ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the LORDE, it shall go well wyth hym at the laste, that in the day of hys deth he shalbe blessed.

The loue of GOD is honorable wysdome, looke vnto whome it appeareth, they loue it for they se what wōderous thynges it doth. * The feare of & LORD is the begynnynge of wysedome, & was made wyth the faythfull in & mothers wombe: it shall go wyth the chosen women, & shalbe knowne of & ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the LORDE is the ryghte seruice of GOD that preserueth and iustifieth the hert, & geueth myrth and gladnesse. Who so feareth the LORDE shalbe happy, and whan he hath nede of comfort, he shalbe blessed. To feare GOD is wysedome & maketh rych, and bryngeth all good wyth her. She filleth the whole house wyth her gyftes, and the garners wyth her treasure. The feare of the LORD is & crowne of wysedome, and geueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her and nombred her: knowlege, and vnderstādynge of wysedome (wiche are the gyftes of GOD) hath bene poured out as rayne, and them that helde her faste, hathe he broughte vnto honoure.

The feare of the LORDE is the roote of wysdome, & her braunches are lōge lyfe. In the treasures of wysedome is vnderstandyng and deuocion of knowlege, but wysedome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the LORDE dryueth oute synne, for he that is without feare cannot be made ryghteous, & hys wylfull boldenes is hys owne destruction. A patiente man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, and then shal he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll hyde hys wordes for a tyme, and many mens lyppes shall speak of hys wysedome. In the treasures of wisdome is the declaracion of doctrine, but the sinner abhorreth the worshippe of GOD. My sonne yf thou desire wysdome, kepe her commaundemēte, and GOD shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORD is wysedome & nurtour, he hath pleasure in fayth and louynge mekenes, and he shal fyl the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto hym wyth a double hert. Be not an ypocrite in & syghte of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, leste thou happen to fall and bringe thy soule to dishonour & so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddeste of the congregacion: because thou woldest not receaue & feare of GOD, and because thy herte is full of fayned nes and dyscreate.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ To eure father and mother oughte we to gene double honoure. Of the blessyng and curse of the father and mother. No man ought euer curiously to searche out the secretes of GOD.

THe chyldren of wysedome are a congregacion of the ryghteous, and theyr excercyse is obedience and loue. Heare me your father O my deare chyldren & do there after that ye maye be safe * For ỹ LORDE wyll haue the father honoured of ỹ chyldren: & looke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to do, he wyll haue it kept. Who so honoureth hys father, hys synnes shalbe forgeuen hym: * & he ỹ honoureth hys mother is lyke one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoreth hys father, shall haue ioye of his owne chyldren, & whẽ he maketh hys prayer he shalbe hearde. He ỹ honoureth hys father, shal haue a lõge lyfe: & he ỹ is obedient for ỹ LORDES sake, hys mother shall haue ioye of hym.

He that feareth the LORDE, honoureth hys father & mother, & doth them seruice, as it were vnto ỹ LORDE hym selfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in worde and in al pacience, that thou maye haue GODDES blessynge, and his blessynge shall abyde wyth ỹ at ỹ laste.

* The blessynge of ỹ father buyldeth vp the houses of the chyldren, but ỹ mothers curse roteth out the fundacions. Reioyse not when thy father is reproued, for it is not honoure vnto the, but shame. For the worshyppe of amans father is his owne worshippe, and where the father is wythout honoure, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in hys age, and greue hym not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstandinge fayle, haue pacience wyth hym, & despyse hym not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not beforgotten, & whan thou thy selfe wantest, it shalbe rewarded the, ād for thy motheres offence thou shalt be recompensed wyth good, yee, it shalbe founde for the in ryghteousnes, & in the daye of trouble thou shalte be remembred: thy synnes also shall melte awaye, lyke as the yse in the fayre warme wether.

C He that forsaketh hys father shall come to shame: and he that defyeth hys mother, is cursed of GOD. My sone perfourme thy worckes wyth louyng mekenesse, so shalte thou be loued aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe in all thynges, and thou shalte fynde fauoure in the syghte of GOD. For greate power belongeth onelye vnto GOD, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

*Seeke not oute the thynges that are aboue thy capacite, and searche not the grounde of such thynges as are to mighty for ỹ: but loke what GOD hath commaunded the, thyncke vpon that alwaye, and be not curious in manye of hys worckes. For it is not nedefull for the to se wyth thyne eyes the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to much search in superfluous thynges & be not curious in many of hys worckes: for manye thynges are shewed vnto ỹ alreadye, whyche be aboue the capacite of men. The medlynge with suche hath begyled many a man, ād tangled theyr wyttes in vanite. Nowe he that loueth parell shall perishe therein.

D And harde harte shall feare euell at the laste and he that loueth daunger, shal perishe there in, an hert that goeth two wayes, shall not prosper: and he ỹ is frowarde of herte wyll euer be worse and worse. A wycked herte shalbe laden wyth sorowes, and the vngodlye synner wyll heape one synne vpon another. The councell of ỹ proude hath no health, for ỹ plante of synne shalbe rooted oute in them, and not knowen. The herte of hym that hath vnderstandynge shall perceaue hye thynges, & a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysedome. An herte that is wyse & hath vnderstandynge, wyll abstayne from syn and encrease in the worckes of ryghteousnesse. Water quencheth burnynge fyre, & mercye reconcileth synnes. Psal. 12. 4.

GOD hath respecte vnto hym that is thākeful: he thyncketh vpō him agayn ste ỹ tyme to come: so that when he falleth, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

The iiij. Chapter.

¶ Almes must be done wyth all mekenes. The studies of wysdome and her frute. A iudge ought to be mercyfull. An exhortacion to eschewe euell and to do good.

My sonne, *defraude not ỹ A poze of hys almes, and turne not away thyne eyes from hym that hath nede. Despise not an hōgrye soule, and defye not the pooze in his necessite: greue not the herte of hym that is helpelesse, and wythdrawe not thy gyfte frome the needeful. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the nedye. Be mercifull vnto ỹ fatherles as a father, & be in steade of an husbande vnto theyr mother: so shalt thou be as an obediente sonne of the Hyest: & he shall loue the more then thy mother doth. Wysedome bryngeth lyfe into her chyldrē, receaueth them that seke her, and wil goo before them in the waye of ryghteousnes. He ỹ loueth her, loueth lyfe, and they that seke diligently, shall haue great ioye. They ỹ kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is ỹ blessynge of GOD. They that honoure her, shalbe the seruauntes of the holye one: and they that loue her, are beloued of GOD. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen, and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safelye. Genes. 14. d.

But as the wolfe agreeth wyth the lambe, soo doth the vngodly wyth the ryghteous. * What felowshyppe shulde an holye man haue with a dogge: Howe can the riche & the poore agre together: The wilde Asse is the lyons praye in ỳ wyldernesse, euen so are poore men the meat of the ryche. Lyke as ỳ proude maye not away wt lowlynes, euen so do the ryche abhorre ỳ poore. If a rych mã fal, his frẽdes set hym vp agayne: but when the poore fal leth, hys acquayntaunce forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an errour, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proud wordes, and yet men iustifie hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is D punished: yea thoughe he speake wyselye, yet can it haue no place. Whan the rych man speaketh, euery man holdeth hys tonge: & looke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is thys: & yf he do amisse, they shall destroye him. Some man there is that destroyeth hys owne soule wyth shame, and foz an vnwyse bodyes sake destroyeth he it,and wyth acceptynge of persons shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man promiseth hys frēd a gyfte foz very shame,& getteth an enemie of him foz nought. A lye is a wycked shame in a man,yet shall it be euer in þ mouth of the vnwyse. A theefe is better then a mā þ is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shal haue destruction to heritage. The condicions of lyars are vnhoneste,and theyr shame is euer wyth them.

A wyse man shal bringe hym selfe to honoure wyth hys wozdes,* & he that hath vnderstandynge, shalbe set by amonge greate mē.* He that tylleth his lande shall encrease his heape of cozne: he that wozcketh ryghteousnes shalbe exhalted, and he that pleaseth greate men, shall escape much euell.* Rewardes & giftes bynde the eres of the wyse, and make hym dome, that he cānot tell men theyr fautes. * Wysdome that is hyd, and treasure that is hoozded vp what profite is in them both? Better is he that kepeth hys ignozaunce secrete, then a man that hydeth his wysedome.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ Of the repentaunce of synne. We may not heape synne vpon synne. The boldenes of an heretike. The ende of synners. Of a foole,and of the wyse man. Of hym that curseth the deuell.

MY sōne yf thou hast sinned, I do it nomoare:* but praye foz thy foze synnes þ they maye be forgeuen the. Flee from synne,euen as from a serpēte: foz yf thou cōmest to nye her, she wyll byte the. The teeth thereof are as the teethe of a Lion, to slaye þ soules of men. The wickednesse of man is a sharpe twoedged swearde, whych maketh such woūdes that they cannot be healed.

Eccle.7.a.b. Psal.4.a. Luce.

Stryfe and wzonge dealynge shall waste away amans goodes, & thozowe pryde a ryche house shalbe brought to noughte,so þ ryches of the proude shalbe rooted oute.* The prayer of þ poore goeth oute of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares of GOD, & hys defence, shal come, and that hastely. Who so hateth to be reformed,it is a token of an vngodly persone,but he þ feareth GOD, wyll remember hym selfe. A myghtye man is knowen afar of by hys tong: but he that hath vnderstandynge, perceaueth that he shall haue a fall.

Eccle.3.d. and.4.d.

Who so buyldeth hys house wyth other B mens coste,is lyke one þ gatheryeth stones in wynter.* The cōgregacion of þ vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, theyr end is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodlye is set wyth stones,but in theyr ende is hel, darkenesse and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde faste þ vnderstandynge thereof:and the ende of the feare of GOD is wysedome and vnderstandynge. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taught in good in good but the vnwyse man abundeth in wyckednes: and where bytternesse is, thre is no vnderstandynge. The knowlege of the wyse shall flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, and hys counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

C The herte of a foole is lyke a broken vessell, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandynge heareth a wyse worde, he shall cõmende it, and make much of it. But yf a voluptous man heare it, he shal haue no pleasure therin, but casteth it behynde hys backe. The talking of a foole is like an heuye burthen by the waye but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacion, it is asked at ỹ mouth of the wyse, and they shal põder his wordes in theyr hertes. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysedome vnto to a fole. As for the knowlege of the vnwise, it is but darcke wordes. Doctrine is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandinge, euen as fetters about hys fete, and lyke manycles vpon Eccl.21.b. hys ryghtehande.* A foole lyfteth vp hys voyce wyth laughter, but a wayse man shall scarse laugh secretlye.

Learnynge is vnto a wyse man a Jewel of golde, and lyke an armelet vpon hys ryghte arme. A foolishe mans fote is soone in hys neyghboures house, but one that hath experience, shalbe ashamed at the personne of the myghtye.
A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndowe into the house, but he that is well nourtered, wyll stand wythoute. A foolyshe man standeth herkening at ỹ doze, but he that is wyse wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnwyse wyll be tellynge folyshe thynges, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstandinge, shalbe wayed in the balaunce. The hert of foles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in theyr hert. When the vngodly curseth ỹ blasphemer he curseth hys owne soule. *A pleuye accuser of Eccl.19.d. other men shall defyle hys owne soule, and behated of euerymã: but he that kepeth hys tonge and is discrete, shall come to honour.

The xxij. Chapter.

¶ The purgacion of the sleuthfull. Of the foolysshe sonne and daughter, we must haue discrecion howe & to whome we ought to preach sorowynge vpon the dede. A fole is not to be much talked withal. Iniuries, and wronges do breake frendes hyppe & amite

A Slouthfull bodye is mouled of a stone of claye, and euery man wyll speake to hys dispraise. A slouthfull body is made of the dong of oxen, & euerye one that toucheth hym must wash hys hãdes agayne. A mis nurtered sonne is the dyshonoure of ỹ father. A foolysh doughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is anheritage vnto her husbande: but she that cõmeth to dishonestye, bringeth her father in heuinesse A daughter that is paste shame, dishonoureth both her father & her husband, the vngodly shall regard her, but they both shall dyspice her. The playing of musike is not mete wher heuines is, euẽ so is ỹ correctiõ an doctrine of wysdome euer vnpleasaunte vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euẽ as one B that gleweth a potcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym ỹ heareth hym not and as one that rayseth a man oute of an heuye slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hath tolde his tale, he sayeth: what is the matter: whẽ one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym: because ỹ lighte sayleth hi, euẽ so let men mourne a foole: for he wanteth vnderstãdynge. Make but lytle weappynge because of the dede: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is worse then ỹ death. Seuen dayes domen mourne for hym that is deed, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwyse and vngodlye shuld endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Talke not much wyth a foole, and go C

Departe from him, and thu shalte fynde reste and shalt not be drawen backe into hys folyshenes. What is heuyer then leade: And what shulde a foole be called eles but leade:

easyer to beare, then an vnwyse, folyshe, & vngodlye man. Lyke as ỹ bande of woode bounde together in the foundacion of the house cannot belowsed, euen so is it wyth the hert that is stablyshed in the thought of councell. The thoughte of ỹ wyse shal neyther feare, nor be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayre plastered wall in a D winter house, & an hye buyldynge maye not abyde the wynde and stozme: euen so is a fooles herte a frayde in hys imaginacion, he feareth at euery thynge, & cannot endure. A wauerynge herte in ỳ imaginacion of a foole wyll not euerstand in awe, but he that abydeth in cõmaundementes of GOD, wyll al way feare. He that nyppeth a mans eye bringeth forth teares & he that prycketh ỳ herte, bryngeth forthe meanynge and thought. Whoso casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: ād he that blaspheneth hys frend, breaketh the frendeshyp: thoughe thou draweste a swearde at thy frende yet despere not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frend. yf he speake sowerly, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together againe, excepte it be that thou blaspheme hym, dysdayne hym, open hys secretes and wounde hym traytorously for all such thynges shall dryue awaye a frende.

Be faythfull vnto thy neyghboure in hys powerte, that thou mayest reioyse wyth him also in hys prosperite. Abyde stedfaste vnto hym in the tyme of hys trouble, that thou mayest be heyre with him in hys heritage. Lyke as ỳ vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen so euel wordes, rebukes & threatenynges go before bloudeshedynge. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not hyde my face from hym though he shulde do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it shall beware of hym. *Who shall set a watch before my mouthe and a sure seale vpon my lyppes, ỳ I fall not wyth them, and that my tonge destroy me not:

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ A prayer agaynst pryde: lechery, and glotony. Of othes, blasphemie, and vnwyse communicacion. Of thre kindes of synnes. Many synnes procede of aduoutrye. Of the feare of GOD.

O LORDE, father and gouernour of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr imaginacion & counsel. Oh let my not fal in such rebuke. Who wyl kepe my thoughte wyth ỳ scourge, & the doctrine of wisdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ignorauncе, that I fall not with them: leste myne ignoraunces increase, ỳ myne offences be not many in nõber, and that my synnes excede not, leste I fall before myne enemies, & so my aduersarie reioyse. O LORDE: thou father and GOD of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr imaginatiõ. O let me not haue a proude loke but turne awaye all voluptuousnesse from me. Take from me the lustes of the body, let not that desires of vnclennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnshamefast and obstinat mynde.

Heare me (Oye chyldren) I wyl geue you a doctrine, howe you shall order youre mothe: who so kepeth it, shal not perishe thorowe his lyppes, nor be hurte thorowe wycked wordes. As for the synner, he shalbe taken in hys owne vanitye: he that is proude and cursed, shal fal therin. *Let not thy mouth be accustomed wyth swearinge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namynge of GOD be continually in thy mouth: & medle not wyth the names of sainctes, for thou shalte not be excused of them for lyke as a seruaunt which is ofte punished cannot be wythoute some soore, euē so what soeuer he be that sweareth and nameth GOD, shall not be cleane pourged from synne: A man that vseth muche swearinge, shalbe fylled wyth wyckednes, and the plage shall neuer go from hys house. yf he begyle his brother, hys faythe shalbe vpon hym, yf he knowlege not hys synne, he maketh a double offence, and yf he sweare in vayne, he shal not be founde ryghteous: for hys house shalbe full of plages.

To synne twyse is to much, but the thyrd bryngeth wrath and destruction. An hote stomake cannot be quenched: euen lyke a burnyng fyre tyl it haue swalowed vp some thynge: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in hys flesh, tyl he haue kyndled a fyre.

Al breade

All breade is swete to an whoremonger, he wyl not leaue of tyll he haue his purpose. A man ꝑ breaketh wedlocke, & regardeth not hys soule, but sayeth: *Tushe, who seith me? I am cõpassed Psal.39.c. aboute wyth darckenesse ꝑ walles couer me, no bodye seith me: whom nede I to feare? The hyghest wyl not remẽbre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that hys eyes se al thynges, for al such feare of men driueth a way the feare of GOD from hym: for he feareth onlye the eyes of men, and considereth not that ꝑ eyes of the LORDE are cleerer then ꝑ sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men and ꝑ grounde of the deepe, & lokyng euen to mẽs hertes in secret places. The LORD GOD knewe all thynges or euer they were made, & after they be brought to Leui.20.b passe also he loketh vpon them al. * The Deu.22.b. same man shalbe openly punished in ꝑ stretes of ꝑ citie: & shalbe chased abroade lyke a yonge horse foale: & when he thynketh leaste vpon it, he shalbe take. Thus shall he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstãde the feare of ꝑ LORDE. And thus shall it go also wyth euery wyfe, ꝑ leaueth her husbande, & gette the inheritaũce by a Deut.20.c. straunge maryage. * Fyrste she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto ꝑ lawe of the hygh est. Secondly, she hathe forsaken her owne husbãde. Thyrdly she hath playde the whore in aduouterie, & gotte her chyldren by an other man. She shalbe brought oute of the congregacion, and her chyldrẽ shalbe loked vpõ. Hyr children shal not take roote: & as for frute, her braunches shal bring forth none. A shamefull reporte shall she leaue behinde her, & her dishonoure shal not be put oute. And they that remayne, shal knowe, that ther is nothynge better then ꝑ feare of GOD: & that there is nothynge sweter then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the LORD. A great worshyppe is it to folowe the LORDE, for longe lyfe shalbe receaued of hym.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

¶ A prayse of wysdome proceadynge forth of the mouth of GOD. Of her worckes and place where she resteth.

WYsedome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in GOD, & reioyce in ꝑ myddeste of his people: In the congregations of ꝑ hyghest shall she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholdyng of hys power: in the myddest of her people shall she be exalted & wondred at in the holsulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe cõmended and amõge such as be blessed, she shalbe praysed, and shall saye: I am come oute of the mouthe of ꝑ hyghest, fyrste borne before al creatures. I caused the lyghte that fayleth not to aryse in the heauen, & couered al ꝑ earthe as a cloude. My dwellige is aboue in ꝑ heyght, and my seate is in ꝑ pyller of ꝑ cloude. An honest and manerly woman is a gifte aboue other gyftes, ỹ there is no weyghte tobe compared vnto a mynde ỹ can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it aryseth, is an oznamente in the hyghe heauen of the LORDE, so is a verteous wyfe the beutye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyghte is vpon the holye candelstycke, so is the bewtye of the face vpon an honeste bodye. *Like Cant.5.d as the golden pyllers are vppon the sockettes of syluer: so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constāt mynde. ¶We oughte not to desire vengeaunce, but to forgeue the offence. Of the vices of the tonge, and of the dangers thereof.

HE *that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynde vengeaunce of the LORDE, whyche shal surelye kepe hym hys synnes. * Forgeue thy neyghbour ꝑ hurte ꝑ he hath done to ꝑ, & so shall thy synnes be forgeuen ꝑ also, when thou prayest. A man ꝑ bereth hatred agaynste another, howe dare he desire forgeuenesse of GOD: He that sheweth no mercye to a mā which is lyke hym self, howe dare he aske forgeuenesse of his synnes: ꝑ he that is but flesche, beareth hatred and kepe it, who wyl intreate for his synnes: Remember the ende, and let enemitye passe, whyche seketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remember the commaundementes so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neighboure. Thyncke vpō the couenaunte of the Hyghestе, and forgeue thy neyghbours ignorauncе. * Beware of stryfe and thu shalte make thy synnes lewer. For an angry man kyndleth variaunce, & ꝑ vngodlye disquiet frendes, and puteth discorde amonge thē that be at peace. * The more wood there is, the moar wehemente is the fyre: and the myghter that men be, the grater is the wrathe, and the longer ꝑ stryfe endureth, the moare it burneth.

An hasty brawlynge kyndleth a fyre, and hastye stryfe sheddeth bloude. & tō ge also that beareth false wytnesse burgeth death. ꝑ thou blowe the sparke, it shall burne. ꝑ thou spet vpon it, it shall go forth: and both these out of the mouth. * The slaunderer and doble tōged is cursed, for manye one that be frendes setteth he at variaunce. The thyrde tonge hathe disquieted manye one, and dryuen them from one land to another. Stronge cities, of the ryche hathe it broken downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of greate men. The strēgth of the people hath it broughte downe, and bene the decay of mightye nacions The thirde tonge hathe caste oute many an honest woman, and robbed them of theyr labours. Who so herkeneth vnto suche, shal neuer dwel safelie The stroke of the rodde maketh adders, but the stroke of the tonge smytteth the bones in sonder. There be manye that haue perished wyth the swarde, but manye moo thorowe the tong.

Wel is hym that is kept from an euel tonge and commeth not in ꝑ angre the reof, whyche drayweth not the yocke of suche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the yocke thereof is of yron, & ꝑ bande of it of stiele. The death there of is a very euel death: hell were better for one then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare GOD, and ꝑ flamme thereof maye not burne them. Such as forsacke the LORDE, shall fall therein: & it shal burne them, and no man shalbe halbe to quench it. It shall fall vpon them as al yon, & deuoure thē as a leopard. Thou hedgest thy goodes w thrones: why doeste not thou rather make doores & barres for thy mouth: Thou weyeste thy golde & syluer, why doeste thu not weie the wordes also vpon the balaunce: Beware that thou slye not in thy tonge, & so fall before thyne enemies, that laye wayte for the, and thy fall be incurable euen vnto death.

C Lyke as ỹ ryghteous reioyseth whē he openeth hys hande, so shall ỹ traungressoures be saynte, when theyr goodes vanishe and consume awaye. *The chyldren of the vngodlye shall not obtayne many braūches. And ỹ vncleane rootes vpon the hye rockes, shalbe rooted oute before the grasse by the waterside and vpon the ryuer banckes.

Fryndlynesse and liberalitie in the increase and blessynge of GOD, is lyke a paradise and garden of pleasure: suche mercye also and kyndnes, endureth for euer. *To labour, & to be content wyth that a man hath, is a swete and a pleasaunt lyfe, but sweter thē they bothe is to haue the treasure. To beget chyldrē and to repayre the citie maketh a perpetuall name, but an honeste woman is more worth then them bothe. Wine and musike reioyce the hert, but ỹ loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

D Pypynge & harpynge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tōge goeth beyond them both. Thyne eye desireth fauoure & bewtye, but a grene sede tyme, rather then them both. A frend and cōpanyon come together at opportunite but aboue them bothe is a wyfe that agreeth with her hus bāde. One brother helpeth another in ỹ time of trouble, but almes shall deliuer more then thē both. Gold & syluer fasten ỹ feete but a good counsel is more pleasaūte then them bothe. Tēporall substaunce & strength, lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE wanteth nothynge, & nedeth no helpe.

The feare of the LORD is a pleasaūte garden of blessinge, & nothynge so bewtyfull as it is. Wy sōne leade not a beggers life, for better it were to dye thē to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thoughte for his owne lyuinge howe to vpholde his lyfe, for he feadeth hym selfe wyth other mennes meate. But a wyse & wel nurtered man wyll beware therof. Beggyng is swete in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in hys belly there burneth a fyre.

¶ Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of GOD. God name and same. An exhortacion to gene bede vnto vrysedome. Of what thynges a man ought to be ashamed.

¶ Secretes maye not be opened. The lawe of GOD muſte be taughte. A daughter. A woman. GOD knoweth all thinges: yea, euen the secretes of thy herte.

A Rehearſe not a thinge twyſe and dyſcloſe not þ wordes, that thou haſt heard in secrete. Be shamefast & well manered in dede, ſo ſhall euery man fauoure þ. Of theſe thynges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no perſone to offende. Namelye, of theſe thinges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of GOD, of the couenaunte of Judgement to bringe þ vngodly frõ his vngodlynes vnto rygh teouſnes: & to make him a good man: to deale faythfully wyth thy neyghboure & companion: to diſtribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be diligẽte to kepe trwe meaſure & weyghte: to be cõtente whether thou getteſt much or lytle: to deale trulye wyth tempozall goodes in bringe and fellyng: to bringe vp chyldren wyth diligence to correcte an euel ſeruaũte, to kepe that thyne is from an euel wife, to ſet a locke wher many handes are: what thou delyuereſt and geueſt oute to be kepte, to tell it, & to weye it: to wryte vp all thy oute geuynge & receauinge: to enfourme the vnlearned and vnwiſe: Of the aged that are Judged of the yonge: yf thou be diligent in theſe thynges, truly thou ſhalte be learned and wyſe, and accepte of all men.

The daughter maketh the father to watch ſecretly: and the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his ſlepe: yea, in the youthe leſte ſhe ſhulde ouergrowe hym: And when ſhe hath an huſbande, leſt ſhe ſhulde be hated: leſt ſhe ſhulde be defyled or rauiſhed in her virginite, or gotten wyth chylde in her fathers houſe: Or (when ſhe commeth to the man) leſt ſhe behaue her ſelfe not tyght, or cõtinue vnfruytefull. * yf thy daughter be want on kepe her ſtraytely, leſt ſhe cauſe thine enemies to laugh the to ſcorne, and þ whole citie to geue the an euel reporte, & ſo thu be fayne to heare thy ſhame of euerye man, and be confounded before all the people. * Beholde not euery bodyes bewtye, & haue not to muche dwellynge amonge wemẽ. It is better to be wyth an euell man, then wyth a frendlie wyfe that putteth one to ſhame & rebuke. I wyll remember the worckes of the LORDE, and declare the thynge that I haue ſene. ¶The Sōme of the creacion of the worckes of GOD

I 7.4. THe glorie of the hyght, is *the fayre and clere fyrmament, þ bewtye of the heauen is hys glorious clearnes. The Sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the going out of it, a maruelous worke of the hyest. At noone it burneth the earth and who maye abyde for the heat therof: Who so kepeth an ouē whē it is hoote thre tymes moore doth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes whē it bretheth out the fyrye beames and shynneth wyth the bryghtnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the LORDE that made it, and in hys commaundement he causeth it to runne hastely.

43.1. *The Moone also is in all, & at conuenięnte season it sheweth the tymes & 43.2.4. is a token of the tyme. *The token of þ solempne feast is taken of the Mone, a lyght þ mynyshed & increaseth agayne. The moneth is called after þ mone it groweth wōderously in her chaūginge

B The armie of heuen also is in þ hyght in the firmamēte of heauen: it geuethe a cleare and glorious shyne. Thys is þ clearnesse of the starres, the bewtyeful apparel of heauen, the apperel that the LORDE lighteneth in þ heyght In hys holye worcke they continue in theyr order, and not one of them fayleth in hys watche. *Loke vpon the rayne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in hys shyne. He compasseth the heauē aboute wyth hys clearenesse and glorie, the handes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thorowe hys cō::maundemente he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of hys iudgemente to smyte hastely. Thorowe his commaundemente þ treasures are opened, and þ cloudes fleas the foules. In hys power hath he strengthned þ cloudes, & broken the hayle stones. The mountaynes melte at þ syghte of hym, þ wynde blowethe accordige to hys wil. The sounde of hys thonder beateth þ earth and so doth the storme of the North: the whorle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule: casteth out & spredeth the snowe abrode: and as the grashoppers that destroy all, so fallett it downe The eye marueleth at the bewtye of þ whytenesse thereof, & þ herte is afrayed at þ rayne of it. He poureth out þ frost vpō earth lyke salte, & whē it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the pricke of a thistle. C

When þ colde North winde bloweth harde Chrystall cōmeth of þ water. He lyghteth downe vpō all þ gatheringes together of water, & putteth on þ waters as a breast plate. He deuoureth þ mountaynes, & burneth the wildernes: & looke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medicine of all these is when a cloude commeth hastely: & whē a dewe commeth vpon þ heate it shalbe refreshed agayne. In hys worde he shylleth þ wynde: In hys councell he seteth D the depe, and (the LORDE) Jesus planted it. They that sayle ouer þ see, tell of the parelles & harmes thereof, & when we heare it wyth oure eares, we maruayle thereat. For there be straūg wonderous worckes, diuerse maner of nice beastes & whalfyshes. Thorowe hi are al thinges set in good order, & parfourmed, & in his worde al thinges endure.

I speake much, but I can not sufficientely attayne vnto it, for he hym selfe onelye is the perfection of all wordes. We shulde prayse the LORDE after all our power, for he is greate in all hys

¶ The pꝛayſe of certen holy men, Henoch, Noe, Abꝛaham, Iſahac and Jacob.

LEt vs commende the noble famous men, & the generation of our foꝛe elders & fathers. Many moꝛe glooꝛious actes hath ỳ LORDE done, & ſhewed hys greate power euer ſence the beginnyng. The noble famous men raygned in theyꝛ kyngedomes, and bare excellente rule. In theyꝛ wyſedome and vnderſtandynge, they folowed the counceil ſhewed in the pꝛophetes. * They led the folke thoꝛowe the counceil and wyſedome of ỳ ſcꝛibes of the people. Wyſe ſentences are found in theyꝛ inſtructiō. They ſought the ſwetnes and melody of muſike, and bꝛouchte foꝛth the pleaſaunte ſonges in ſcꝛipture. They were rythe alſo, & coulde comfoꝛte and pacifie thoſe ỳ dweite wyth them. All theſe were very noble & honourable men in theyꝛ generacions, and were well repoꝛted of in theyꝛ tymes. Theſe haue lefte a name behynde them, ſo that theyꝛ pꝛayſe ſhall alwaye be ſpoken of. Afterwarde, there were ſome, whoſe remembꝛaunce is gone. * Gen.7.d. They came to naughte ād periſhed as though they had neuer bene: & became as thoughe they had neuer bene boꝛne: Yea & theyꝛ chyldꝛen alſo wyth them:

B Neuertheleſſe, theſe are the louynge men, whoſe ryghteouſneſſe ſhall neuer be foꝛgottē but cōtinue by their pꝛoſperite. Theyꝛ chyldꝛen are an holye good heritage: Theyꝛ ſeed endureth faſt in ỳ couenaunte. Foꝛ theyꝛ ſakes ſhal theyꝛ chyldꝛen and ſeed continue foꝛ euer, ād theyꝛ pꝛayſe ſhall neuer be put downe. Theyꝛ bodyes are buried in peace, but theyꝛ name lyueth foꝛ euermoare. The people can ſpeake of theyꝛ wyſedome, and the congregacion cā talke of theyꝛ pꝛayſe. * Henoch walked ryghte and acceptably beſoꝛe the LORD: therefoꝛe was he tranſloted foꝛ an exaꝛple of amendemente to the generations. * Noe was a ſtedfaſt and ryghteous man, and in the tyme of wꝛath he receiued reꝛwarde. Thereſoꝛe was he lefte a remnaunte vnto the earthe, when ỳ ſloude came. In euerlaſtynge couenaūte was made wyth hym, that all fleſhe ſhulde * periſhe nomoare wyth the water. Abꝛaham was a * greath father of manye people, in glooꝛie was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the Hyegheſt, and came into a couenaunte wyth him. He ſet the couenaunte in his fleſhe, & when he * was pꝛoued, he was foūde faythful. Thereſoꝛe ſwoꝛe GOD vnto hym, wyth an othe, that he wolde bleſſe all people in hys ſeede, that he wolde multiplie and increaſe hym as the duſte of the earthe, and to exhalte hys ſeede as the ſtarres: yee, and that hys ſeede ſhulde haue the poſſeſſion, an inheritaunce of the lande from ſee to ſee, and from the ryuer vnto ỳ boꝛders of the woꝛlde.

* Wyth Iſaac dyd he ſtablyſhe ỳ ſame couenaūt, foꝛ Abꝛaham his fathers ſake. yee, that gracious bleſſinge, and helth of al men and couenaunte, dyd he ſtablyſhe wyth Iſaac, and made it reſt vpon ỳ heade of Jacob. He knewe hym * in that he pꝛoſpered hym ſo well and rychly, and gaue them an heritage and ſundꝛed hys poꝛcion by it ſelfe, * & parted it amonge the twelue tribes. Mercifull mē bꝛoughte he out of him, which found fauour in the ſight of all fleſh.

¶ The pꝛayſe of Moſes, Aaron: and Phinehes.

MOſes * beloued of GOD & man whoſe remembꝛaūce is in hye pꝛayſe: hym hath the LORDE made lyke in glooꝛie to the ſayncte, and magnified hym, ſo that the enemies ſtoode in awe of hym, thoꝛowe his woꝛdes he dyd greate wonders. He made hym great in ỳ ſyght of kynges, gaue hym commaundemente beſoꝛe hys people, and ſhewed hym hys glooꝛious power. * He ſtablyſhed hym with faythfulneſſe and mekeneſſe, nesse, and chose hym oute of al men. For he herde hys voyce, and he led hym in the darcke cloude * and there he gaue hym the commaundementes, yea, the lawe of lyfe and wysedome that he myght teache Jacob the couenaũte and Israell his lawes.

He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the tribe of Leui exalted whome he made like to him. * An euerlastinge couenaũte made he with hym, and gaue hym the preasthode in the people. He made hym glorious in bewtyful araye, and clothed hym wyth the garmente of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpon hym, and gyrded hun with strength. He dect hun with syde clothes, and a tunycle wyth an ouerbodye cote also & a gyrdle Rounde about made he hym belles of golde & ỹ many * ỹ when he wẽte in the loũd myght be heard ỹ he myght make a noyse in ỹ Sanctuarie, & geue ỹ people warnynge. The holye garment was wrought & brodred wt golde, yelowe sylke & purple. And in ỹ brestlappe there was a goodlye worke, wherin was fastened lyghte and perfecteneſſe.

* Upon the same also there was a worcke fastened, and set wyth costlye precious stones, all boũde wyth golde: & this he broughte in his ministracion. The stodes were fastened for a remembraunce, after the nombre of the xii. tribes of Israell. Upon his myter there was a plate of pure golde, a graue image of holynes, a famous and noble worcke, garnished, and pleasaunce to looke vpon. Before hym were there seue no suche fayre ornamentes, and these it behoued hym alwaye to vse: There myght none other put them on, but onelye hys chyldren and hys chylders chyldrẽ perpetualye. Dayly perfourmed he his burnte offerynges two tymes. * Moses fylled hys handes, & anoynted hym wyth holye oyle.

Thys was nowe cõfirmed hym wyth an euerlastynge couenaũte, and to hys seede, as the dayes of heauen, namelye that hys chyldren shulde alwaye mynister before hym, and perfourme the office of te Preasthode, & wyshe the people good in hys name. Before al men lyuynge chose he hym ỹ he shulde offer in cense before the LORDE, & make odoures for a swete sauoure and remẽbraunce, that he shulde reconsile the people of the LORDE wyth hym agayne. * He gaue hym auctorite also in hys commaundemẽtes, and in the couenaunte that he shulde teache Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enlourme Israell in hys lawe. Deut. 17. c. and 31. d. Mala. 2. d.

*Therefore there stoode vp certayne agaynste hym, and had enuye at hym in the wyldernesse, namely they that folowed Dathan and Abiron, and the furious congregacion of Core. Thys the LORDE sawe and it displeased hym, & in hys wrothefull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder dyd he vpon them, and consumed thẽ wyth the fyre. * Beside thys he made Aaron yet more honorauble and glorious. He gaue him an heritage, & parted the fyrste frutes vnto hym. * Unto hym specially he appoynted the breade for sustenaunce, (for the Preastes dyd eate of ỹ offerynges of te LORDE) thys gaue he vnto hym and hys seed. * Elles had he no heritage nor portion in the lande, & wyth the people. For the LORDE hymselfe is hys porcyon and enheritaunce. Num. 16. d. Num. 17. f. Exo. 29. c. Leu. 24. b. Deut. 11. b. and 18. d. Ezr. 44. b

The thyrde noble and excellente mã is * Phinehes the Sonne of Eleazar, whych pleased ỹ God of Israell, because he had the zeele & feare of the LORD. For when ỹ people were turned backe, he put hym selfe for the ryghte soone, & ỹ with a good wyl, to pacifie the wrath of the LORD warde Israel. Therefore was there a couenaunte of peace made with him ỹ he shulde be the prynce of al monge ỹ ryghteous, ỹ he and his posterite shulde haue the office of the Preasthode for euer Like as there was made a couenaũte wt Dauid of ỹ tribe of Juda, ỹ from amonge his sonnes oneiye there shulde be a kyng. C *The LORDE tooke away hys synnes and exhalted hys horne for euer. He gaue hym the couenaũte of the kyngedome, and the throne of worshyppe in Israel. * After him there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salomon, & for hys sake he droue the enemies awaye farre of. Thys Salomon rayned wyth peace in his tyme, for GOD gaue hym rest from his enemyes on euery syde ꝑ he myghte buylde hym an house in hys name, and prepare the Sanctuarie for euer like as he was well instruct in hys youth, & fulled with wisedome and vnderstanding as it were wyth a water floude. He couered & fylled ꝑ whole lande wꝫ similitudes & wyse prudent sentences.

His name wente abroade in the Iles D because of hys peace he was beloued. All landes marueled at hys Songes, Prouerbes, similitudes, and at hys peace, and at ꝑ name of ꝑ LORDE GOD, whyche is called ꝑ GOD of Israel.

* He gathered gold as tynne, and he had as muche siluer as leade. * He was moued in inordinate loue towarde women, and was ouercome in affection. He stayned hys honoure & worshyppe: yea, his posterite defyled he also in bringynge the wrath of the LORDE vpon hys chyldren & sorowe after hys ioye. * so ꝑ hys kyngedome was deuyded, & Ephraim became an vnfaithfull & vncon stãte kyngedome. * Neuertheles, GOD did not slake hys mercye, nether was he vterly destroyed because of his workes, that he shulde leaue hym no poste rite. As for the seed ꝑ came vpon hym, whych he loued, he broughte it not vterly to naught but gaue yet a rẽnaunt vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid oute of hym. Thus rested Salomon wꝫ hys fathers, & oute of hys seede he lefte behynde him a verye foolyshenes of ꝑ people, and suche one as had no vnderstandyng: * Euen Roboam, whyche turned away ꝑ people thorowe hys councell, & Jeroboam ꝑ sonne of Nebat, & whych caused Israel to syn, & Ephraim ꝑ waie of vngodlynes: In so much that theyr synnes and mysdedes had the vpperhande so sore, that at the laste they were dreuen out of the lande for the same:

yea, he soughte oute and broughte vp all wyckednes, tyll the vengeaunce came vpon them.

For thy myghte not awaye wyth the commaundementes of the LORDE. Thorowe the worde of the LORDE he shut the heauen. * and iij times brought he the fire downe. He cast downe kynges & destroyed them, & ꝑ honourable from theyr seate. Vpon ꝑ mount Sina he hearde ꝑ punishemẽte, & vpon Horeb ꝑ Judgemẽt of the vengeaunce. He prophecyed recompeninge vnto kynges, * ordayned Prophetes after him. & He was taken vp in the strome of fore, in a chatet of horses of ꝑ LORDE. as ꝑ flowres and roses in ꝑ sprynge of the yeare, and as lylyes by the ryuers of water. Like as the braunches vpon the mounte Libanus in ꝑ tyme of Somer: as a fyre and incense ꝑ is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set wᵗ al maner of precious stones: and as an Olyue tree, that is fruytefull and as a Cypresse tree, whych groweth vpon hye.

When he put on the garmente of ho- B nour and was clothed with al bewtie when he wente to the holye aulter to garnysche ꝑ couerynge of the Sanctuarie: when he tooke the portcions oute of the Preastes hande, he hym selfe stoode by the hearthe of ꝑ aulter, and hys bretheren rounde about in order. As the braunches of Cedretree vpon the mounte Libanus so stoode they rounde about hym. And as ꝑ braunches of ꝑ Olyue tree, so stoode all ꝑ sonnes of Aaron in theyr glorie, & the oblacions of ꝑ LORDE in theyr handes before all the congregacion of Israell. And that he myghte sufficiently perfourme his seruice vpon the aulter, and garnysche the offeryng of ꝑ Hyeste GOD, he stretched oute his hand, & tooke of the drinckoffe rynge, & poured in of ꝑ wyne so he poured vpon the botome of ꝑ aulter a good smell vnto the hyeste Prince.

Then began the sonnes of Aaron to C syng and to blowe wyth trompettes, & to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the LORDE, Thē were all ꝑ people afrayde and fel downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worshyppe the LORDE theyr GOD and to geue thankes to the Almyghty GOD, They songe goodly also with theyr voyces, so that there was a pleasaunte noise in the greate house of ꝑ LORDE. And the people in theyr Prayer, besought ꝑ LORDE the Hyghest, that he wolde be mercifull tyll the honoure of the LORDE were perfourmed, thus ended they theyr ministracion & seruice. Then wēt he downe and stretched out his hādes ouer the whoole multitude of the people of Israel, ꝑ they shulde geue prayse and thankes oute of theyr lyppes vnto the LORDE, and reioyce in his name He beganne yet once also to praye, that he myghte openly shewe the thankesgyuynge before ꝑ Hyghest, namelye thus O geue prayse & thankes (ye all) vnto the LORDE our GOD whych hath euer done noble and great thynges, whych hath increased our dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealte wyth vs accordynge to hys mercye: ꝑ he wyl geue vs ꝑ ioyfulnesse of herte, & peace for our tyme in Israell. There be two maner of people that D I abhorre frō my herte: as for the thyrde whome I hate, it is no people. They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Palestines, and the foolysche people that dwel in Sichimis.

I Jesus the sonne of Strach Eleazarus, of Jerusalem, haue tokened vp these informacions and documentes of wysdome and vnderstandynge in thys booke, and poured out the wyse dome of my herte. The li. Chapter.

¶ A prayer of Jesus the sonne of Strach.

I Wyll thancke the O LORDE and kynge, and prayse the O I GOD, my sauyour. I wyll yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, and hast preserued my bodye from destruction, from the snare of traytourous tōges, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyes. Thou haste bene my helper, from suche as stoode vp agaynst me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercye, and for thy holy names sake. Thou haste deliuered me from the roorynge of them that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the handes of such as ought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them ꝑ troubled me & wente aboute to set fyre vpō me on euery syde, so that I am not bren te in the myddes of the fyre: From the deepe of hel, from an vncleane tonge, from lyynge wordes, from the wycked kynge, and from an vnryghteous tong My soule shall prayse the LORDE vn to death, for my lyfe drewe nyghe vnto hell downeward.

They cōpassed me rounde aboute on e B uery syde, & there was no man to helpe

me. I me I loked aboute me, yf there were any man that wolde socour me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O LORDE, and vpon thyne actes that thu haste done euer of olde: namelye: that thou delyuereste suche as put theyr truste in ẏ, and ryddeste them oute of ẏ handes of the heathen. Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth & praied for deliueraunce from deathe. I called vpon the LORDE ẏ father of my LORDE, ẏ he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, & in the tyme of ẏ proude: I wyll prayse thy name continualye, yeldynge, honoure and thanckes vnto it: & so my prayer was heard. Thu sauedeste me from destruction and delyuereste me from the vnryghteous tyme. Therfore, wyll I acknowlege & prayse the, and magnifie the name of the LORDE.

When I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astraye, I desired wisedome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, and sought her vnto the laste. Thē flowrysshed she vnto me as a grape ẏ is soone rype. My hert reioysed in her, then went my foote the ryghte waye: yee from youthe vp, soughte I after her. I powed downe myne eare and receaued her. I found me much wisedome: & prospered greately in her. Therefore wyll I ascribe ẏ glorie vnto hym ẏ geueth me wysedome: for I am aduysed to do therafter. I wyll be gelous to cleaue vnto the thynge that is good, so shal I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled wyth her, and I haue bene diligent to be occuppyed in her, I left myne hādes on hye, thē was my soule lyghtened thorowe wysedome, that I knowledged my folishnesse, I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one herte from the begynnyng, & I founde her in clēnesse, And therefore shall I not be forsaken.

My herte longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorowe her ẏ LORDE hathe geuē me a newe tonge, wher wyth I wyl prayse hym. * O come vn to me ye vnlearned and dwel in the house of wysedome: withdrawe not your selues from her, but talke and comune of these thynges, for youre soules are very thyrstye. I opened my mouth and spake: O come & by wysdome wythout any mony, bowe downe your necke vnder her yocke, & youre soule shal receaue wysdome. She is hearde at hand, and is content to befounde. Behold wt your eyes*, howe that I haue had but lytle laboure, & yet haue founde muche reste. O receaue wysedome, & ye shall haue plenteousnes of syluer & golde in possession. Let youre mynde reioyse in hys mercye, and be not ashamed of hys prayse. Worcke hys worcke by tymes, and he shall geue you youre rewarde in due season.

The fyrste. Chapter.

¶ Baruch wrote a booke duryng the captiuitie of Babylon, wh̄ych he red before Jechonias and al the people. The Jewes sente the booke with money vnto Jerusalem, to theyr other brethren, to the intente that they shulde praye for them.
